PRESIDENT OF CHINA SAID TO HAVE RESIGNED

Chiang Kai-Shek, Against Whom Anti-Nationalist Uprising Is Aimed, Replaced, It Is Said.

MARTIAL LAW IN PART OF SHANGHAI

Censorship Fails to Suppress Dispatches Saying Disaffected Troops Threaten Nanking Capital

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Dec. 7.—A Peiping dispatch to the Indo-Pacific News Agency says that Gen. Chiang Kai-shek, president of the Nationalist Government, has resigned and has been replaced provisionally by Tang Yen-kai.

The dispatch added that Marshal Yen Hsi-shan, known as the "model governor" of Shansi, had become Generalissimo.

By the Associated Press.

SHANGHAI, Dec. 8.—(Sunday 10 a. m.)—All sources this morning agreed that Gen. Chiang Kai-shek, president of the Council of the Nationalist Government was still continuing to direct affairs at Nanking. There had been reports that he had withdrawn from office because of the widespread revolt against the Nationalist regime and especially against himself, which is now reported to be almost nationwide.

The British-owned North China Daily News in commenting on the situation this morning said: "Local political and business circles view the situation as extremely grave, the worst since 1927. Responsible Chinese take a pessimistic attitude."

The British cruiser Suffolk has been ordered to leave here today for Nanking, with the reported purpose of evacuating British women and children from the capital, where the situation is said to be critical. Martial law was declared last night in the Chinese section of Shanghai.

Censorship Enforced.

During the last 24 hours information of the revolt against the Nationalist Government at Nanking has been most fragmentary as a result of severed communications and the fact that Nanking officials tightened their efforts to withhold all information.

Last night, however, the fact that new outbreaks against Nanking were taking place within a short distance of the Nationalist capital, also not far from the international settlement in Shanghai, became known. Nationalist forces stationed at Changchow, 100 miles from Shanghai on the Shanghai-Nanking Railway, attempted yesterday to disarm a body of troops known as the Fourth Division whose loyalty to Nanking was questioned. The Nationalists' attempt resulted in their troops being sharply defeated, with many killed, the number being unknown.

Railway Tracks Torn Up.

This Fourth Division, which is supposed to have turned rebel, engaged in a skirmish with other Nationalist troops, afterward it tore up the tracks of the Shanghai-Nanking Railway, rendering the line useless. Therefore all traffic between Shanghai and Nanking was stopped.

The Shanghai-Nanking Railway has placed special armed guards along the line as far as Wusih, 75 miles from Shanghai. Special guards also were stationed along the Shanghai-Hangchow Railway.

Declaration of martial law in the Chinese quarter of Shanghai followed the mutiny begun Tuesday of Nationalist Government troops at Pukow, 90 miles from Shanghai and opposite Nanking, China's capital.

The population of Shanghai is estimated at approximately 1,500,000. Known as the "Paris of the Orient," Shanghai has an international settlement and a French settlement, under foreign control, and containing a total white population of probably 60,000. The Americans number about 1800, the French 20,000, the British 8,000 and the Japanese 40,000.

Aga Khan, Moslem Leader, Marries French Woman

Ceremony Performed in City Hall of Aix-les-Bains—Bride Drops $10,000 Check in Poor Box.

By the Associated Press.

AIX-LES-BAINS, France, Dec. 7.—Aga Khan, powerful Indian ruler, descendant of the prophet and supreme religious head of millions of Ismaili Moslems, married Andree Josephine Carron, young French business woman, at a simple ceremony today.

Mayor Henri Clerc performed the civil ceremony and two Moslem Imams from Morocco placed Aga Khan's hand into that of the French girl who now becomes the consort of one of the wealthiest Indian Princes in the world.

The ceremony was performed in City Hall, which was formerly the medieval castle of the reigning Marquis of Aix. It was devoid of pomp or music but there was a profusion of flowers with roses of many shades.

Aga Khan appeared more self-conscious than is his wont at Longchamp, Deauville and other race tracks, where his colors are famous. He spoke his "yes" in a low, almost inaudible tone.

His bride was dressed in emerald and chocolate brown, her favorite colors and those which were made famous by Aga Khan's horses on the turfs of Great Britain and France.

Upon her velvet gown incrusted with cream-colored laces made at Chambery, the bride had thrown an emerald crape caught on her left shoulder with a wide band of mink fur. Her bobbed hair was held together by a platinum fastening in the center of which glowed a square-cut diamond. The gown was of the latest fashion and extended a few inches below the knee. She also wore a magnificent ruby pendant on a gold and platinum chain around her throat.

Mayor Clerc, when not officiating at Aix-Les-Bains, is a successful playwright and gave the wedding ceremony a most impressive touch. As the marriage party broke up one of the Imams made a speech in Arabic, which was a eulogy of the marriage.

"I am very happy and especially delighted at the prospects of going to India next spring," said the bride. "It should be very interesting." Before leaving the city hall the bride dropped a check into the poor box, later said to be equivalent to $10,000.

Aga Khan and his bride departed for Italy this afternoon and will remain there a few weeks. Later they planned to live in a chateau on the shores of Lake Bourget, between Chambery and Aix.

FIRST OF FIVE RADIUM POISONING VICTIMS DIES

New Jersey Woman Succumbs After Awaiting Death Two Years.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—The end that she knew for two years was inevitable came to Mrs. Quinta McDonald today. She died at 3:30 p. m. in Memorial Hospital, West 106th street, where she had been for 10 weeks, a victim of radium poisoning.

Mrs. McDonald is the first to die of the five women victims in New Jersey, on whom medical science long ago passed sentence of death. All were poisoned by pointing with their lips the little brushes they used to paint radium numerals on watch dials when they worked in the plant of the United States Radium Corporation in Orange, N. J.

Mrs. McDonald lived in Orange. During the two years that she had known she must die she had thought not so much of herself as of her husband, James, and her two children, now nine and five years old. She never was sure her children had not contracted the poisoning from her.

She worked in the plant from March, 1917, to March 1919. Then she married. In the fall of 1923 she became ill and it was not until two years later that her sickness was diagnosed as radio-activity that had attacked her bones.

The four surviving victims are Miss Katherine Schaub of Newark, Mrs. Albina Larice, Mrs. McDonald's sister, of Orange; Mrs. Edna Hussman of Hillside, N. J., and Miss Grace Fryer of Orange. In June, 1928, when their damage suits against the Radium Corporation had been settled out of court, each received $10,000 in a lump sum and $600 a year and expert medical attention.

TWO ARMY FLYERS KILLED TRYING TO LAND IN CANYON

Ship Crashes Near Miami, Ariz.; Cigarette Smoker Sets Wreckage Afire.

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Ariz., Dec. 7.—Two United States Army aviators, Lieut. R. H. Gilley, 25 years old, of Houston, Tex., and Lieut. J. Q. Adams, 24, of Inglewood, Cal., stationed at March Field, Riverside, Cal., were killed today when their open cockpit biplane crashed and burned near the Inspiration Mine, four miles north of here.

The wrecked ship was burned, witnesses said, when an unidentified man who ran to the scene immediately after the crash, lighted a cigarette and threw the burning match to the gasoline saturated ground. The airplane was enveloped in flames and it is thought Gilley burned to death. Adams was thought to have died in the wreck.

The pilots, who came here several days ago to participate in dedication of an airport, took off on the return trip to March Field and had circled the mine when their motor apparently stalled. They attempted to land in a canyon but the plane struck a power line and crashed to the ground.

CAPITALIST'S WIFE DROWNED WHEN AUTO RUNS OFF DOCK

Husband and Son Get Out of Car After It Rests in 30 Feet of Water at Seattle.

By the Associated Press.

SEATTLE, Wash., Dec. 7.—Trapped in a closed car which plunged off a dock into Elliott Bay, Mrs. William Pitt Trimble, wife of the Seattle capitalist, was drowned late today.

Her husband and son, William Pitt Trimble Jr., managed to get out windows of the machine when it came to a halt at a depth of 30 feet and escaped after a vain effort to rescue the woman. Another son, Ford Trimble, who was standing by the car adjusting the motor, was carried into the water when it suddenly plunged through a guard rail, but also escaped drowning. His brother, who was at the wheel of the machine, had stepped on the starter while the car was apparently in gear, sending it leaping toward the water. The woman's still form could be seen propped in the back seat as rescue workers grappled with the machine.

BYRD ANSWERS MESSAGE OF PRAISE FROM CONGRESS

Calls Exploration Work "A Forty-Man Job" and Praises Comrades' Courage.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—Speaker of the House Longworth today received a message from Commander Richard E. Byrd from Little America expressing appreciation for the wireless message from the House congratulating him on his successful flight over the South Pole. The commander asked Longworth to convey to the House the following message:

"For my companions and myself I send you our deep appreciation for the honor you have paid us. It has encouraged every inhabitant of Little America. What we have been able to accomplish has been a 40-man job, where every man has had to do his part and only the unusual enthusiasm and manhood of my shipmates has pulled us through.

"For them and myself I thank you most sincerely and send you greetings and kindest wishes. Very many thanks to you personally and kindest regards always."

12 BELOW ZERO IN MINNESOTA

Crest of Cold Wave Reaches Winnipeg; Midwest Drop Due.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 7.—A fresh cover of snow drifted down over the West today as the latest siege of winter sent temperatures down 12 degrees below zero in North Dakota and Minnesota.

The crest of the cold wave reached Winnipeg today and thermometers there registered 17 below zero, but below the border states it seemed to be dissipated and warmer weather was on the way to the Northwest states today. A drop in temperature was forecast in the Chicago region, Iowa, and Missouri tonight with a reaction upward tomorrow. Thief River Falls, Minn., and Devils Lake, N. D., were the coldest points in the country today at 12 below zero.

MOGLER'S WIDOW AND HER LAWYER ARE QUESTIONED

She Voluntarily Grants Interview With Police That Throws No Light on Husband's Murder.

FIVE WITNESSES ARE HEARD AT INQUEST

It Then Is Continued Until Next Week to Permit Further Investigation Into Killing.

Mrs. Adelaide Mogler, widow of State Senator Joseph Mogler, and her lawyer, Murtha J. Hackett, were questioned at length by Chief of Detectives Kaiser at Police Headquarters yesterday. At the conclusion of the interviews, Kaiser indicated that he had learned nothing that might throw light on the unexplained murder of the politician, movie theater owner and bondsman who was shot to death by one of two masked men last Monday morning.

The examination of Mrs. Mogler, which lasted five hours, began shortly after an uncompleted inquest which was continued by Coroner Dever until next Saturday after five witnesses had been examined. Mrs. Mogler, who had not been asked to testify, and Attorney Hackett voluntarily went to Headquarters with detectives at Chief Kaiser's request. There Mrs. Mogler was closeted with Kaiser and his aids. Hackett was excused until afternoon when he appeared at the office with various papers belonging to the Mogler estate which had been intrusted to him by the widow.

It was learned that Mrs. Mogler reviewed her husband's life and habits, his friends and associates, his bond-signing activities, his investments and his theater enterprises.

Rarely Refused Favors.

As in previous interviews, she said she knew of no one who might have desired her husband's death and declared that he had expressed no fear of assassination. He had hundreds of friends, she said, many of whom came to their home at 4458 Athlone avenue seeking favors which he rarely refused, although at times he remarked that the signing of bonds was distasteful to him.

She repeated her previous statement that she believed his alleged association with other women was "nothing but political gossip." She declared he was in good spirits and joked with her when he left home last Monday morning for his office at the Mogler Theater, 3936 North Ninth street, where he was shot down.

At the inquest, Coroner Dever asked police if they had found on Mogler's person "a little black book," in which he had kept a record of his more intimate affairs, including transactions with gangsters and underworld characters whom he had befriended as bondsman and parole advocate. During the inquest it appeared that this memorandum book had disappeared. There was considerable speculation as to its whereabouts. However, Detective-Sergeant Moran announced later that he had examined the book at Mogler's home the evening after he was killed. Mogler, it seemed, had forgotten to put the book in his pocket when he left for his office.

Sidener in the Case.

Mrs. Mogler appeared at the inquest accompanied by a friend, Mrs. Roy C. Sandberg. A stout woman of medium height, Mrs. Mogler wore a black dress, shoes, hose and a gray squirrel coat. She did not enter the inquest room but remained in an anteroom, conversing for a time with former Circuit Attorney Howard Sidener who had entered the case as one of her counsel.

Sidener accompanied her to Police Headquarters and announced to reporters that she appeared willingly and was anxious to tell the investigators anything that might help them. Attorney Hackett protested at his being excluded while Mrs. Mogler was being questioned and was rebuked by Chief Kaiser who shook a finger in his face and exclaimed: "You think you're smart; if you get smart around here we'll put you in the holdover." Hackett declared he had no objection to the examination.

The only witnesses examined at the inquest besides police officers were Edward Phinney, janitor at

STARS OF STAGE IN PARADE FOR REDUCTION IN TAXES

Ed Wynn and Mae Murray Address Crowd in Front of Capitol in Washington.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—Stars of the stage and men active in the business, civic and religious life of the country paraded up Pennsylvania avenue today to plead for a reduction of taxes at the doors of Congress.

Gathered from many sections by the Hearst newspapers, leaders in the demonstration spoke before a crowd in front of the Capitol as legislative leaders gave attention to their pleas and promised relief so far as possible.

On the fringe of the crowd stood a big truck bearing the slogan, "Taxes and surtaxes on earned incomes can and should be substantially reduced below the rate on unearned incomes." It held huge bundles of petitions asking for a reduction of the tax burden.

As soon as the arguments got under way, Ed Wynn, comedian, had something to say about the proposition.

"I feel like a piece of carpet. I am so kept down by taxes," he said, adding that the theatrical business was "looking up." "By that," he explained, "I mean it's flat on its back."

Mae Murray, here from Hollywood, told what she thought about the present assessments, and Anna Fitzhugh, grand opera singer, and former Mayor Hylan of New York gave their indorsement.

Both Chairman Smoot of the Senate Finance Committee and Chairman Hawley of the House Ways and Means Committee promised to do what they could and then, with Miss Murray between them, posed for the cameras.

R. S. DOLLAR FINED $11,489 FOR CUSTOMS DUTY FRAUD

Vice President of Steamship Line Failed to Declare Wearing Apparel in Baggage.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—R. Stanley Dollar, vice president of the Dollar Steamship Line and son of the founder of the company, Capt. Robert Dollar, today paid $11,489.26 in forfeiture value and penalties to the Customs Department. The penalties were imposed for the presence of undeclared wearing apparel in his baggage yesterday when he and his wife arrived on the Leviathan from a trip around the world.

Dollar said the clothing had been purchased on the trip, but had been worn. He said he had not known that clothing that had been used was dutiable. George Brewer, Assistant Solicitor of the Port, estimated the value of the clothing at $5744.16. Dollar promptly paid his assessment and his six pieces of baggage, which had been seized out of 29 pieces, were returned to him.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—Immediately before adjournment today the House of Representatives voted unanimously to change the rules and make the membership of the Committee on Foreign Affairs 22 during the present Congress only in order that Representative Ruth Bryan Owen (Dem.), Florida, may have a place on that committee.

The Florida Congresswoman is a daughter of the late William Jennings Bryan.

500 MARINES AND WARSHIP SENT TO HAITI AFTER CLASH IN WHICH FIVE ARE KILLED

20 HAITIANS HURT WHEN 1500 ATTACK 20 U. S. MARINES

Only One of Patrol Injured Repulsing Aux Cayes Crowd Armed With Knives and Stones.

CITY IS QUIET FOLLOWING FIGHT

Arms Smuggling Suspected at Jacmel, Where Strike Leaders With New Pistols Are Arrested.

By the Associated Press.

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti, Dec. 7.—The apparently tranquil situation in the Republic of Haiti was shattered yesterday afternoon when 1500 Haitians from the interior attacked a marine patrol on the outskirts of the city of Aux Cayes and was repulsed with five killed and 20 wounded. There were no American casualties except one marine who was beaten in a hand-to-hand encounter with the leader of the band.

Aux Cayes was reported quiet today. The local Magistrate asserted that the repulse of the band probably saved the city from looting as an old enmity exists between the cities and the peasants in the outlying districts.

Evidence was discovered in the city of Jacmel indicating an extensive smuggling in arms.

The rest of the country was quiet except for demonstrations near outposts at Chantel and Torbeck in Cayes Province. In each of these places crowds of about 1000 persons marched in front of buildings of the National Guard, shouting "Down with President Borno."

The steamer Martinique is on the way here with American families whose evacuation from Cayes Province had been ordered by High Commissioner Russell.

Parley Without Effect.

First intimation of trouble near Aux Cayes came when the Magistrate reported to Capt. Roy Swink, District Commander, that the countryside was in open revolt and that a band which he estimated at 150 was marching on the city. A marine patrol, with the National Guard protecting the barracks and city, moved out but returned without making contact.

At 4 o'clock in the afternoon a patrol of 20 marines armed with one machine gun, six automatic rifles and regular army rifles under Capt. Swink and Lieut. John Blanchard of the United States marines established contact with the band near the entrance of the city. The band demanded that they be permitted to enter the city to join strikers there and, when told the strike was over and the city back at work, demanded that two leaders enter it to determine the facts.

This was permitted, but when the leaders returned and confirmed the news that the strike was over the band greeted the information with curses and jeers.

Marines Stoned, Open Fire.

The band whose total number by this time was estimated at 1500 advanced on the marines, throwing stones and surrounding the patrol. The marines fired three volleys at intervals over the heads of the advancing men, but this failed to stop them, and the position of the marines was described as precarious.

Capt. Swing finally opened fire and approximately 250 rounds scattered the attacking party in all directions. The Haitians were armed only with clubs, machetes and stones.

Arms Seized at Jacmel.

Capt. Hal Potter, district commander at Jacmel, found that five strike leaders whom he had arrested on charges of intimidating laborers at the customs on Thursday were armed with new automatic pistols.

A search unearthed a large number of papers in French, Spanish and German, apparently orders for pistols and rifles at Hamburg, Germany. Several names were contained in the papers, but much of them was undecipherable.

Airplanes took the papers im-

CAPITALIST DEAD

WALLACE D. SIMMONS.

W. D. SIMMONS DIES FOLLOWING HORSEBACK RIDE

Head of Hardware Firm for 25 Years Succumbs at His Home to Acute Heart Dilation—He Was 62.

Wallace Delafield Simmons, 62 years old, who for 25 years was president of the Simmons Hardware Co., died at 5:30 p. m. yesterday at his home, 46 Westmoreland place, a few minutes after returning from a horseback ride.

Mr. Simmons left his office in the Century Building at 2 p. m. and drove to a stable near Forest Park, from which he took his mount. When he returned to the stable, he appeared to be ailing, and a friend persuaded him to leave his automobile and be driven in another car to his home. He was beyond help when he reached the house. Death was attributed to acute heart dilation.

The funeral will be at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow at the Episcopal Church of the Redeemer, Washington boulevard and Euclid avenue. Burial will be in Bellefontaine Cemetery.

Daughter a V. P. Queen.

Mr. Simmons is survived by his widow, formerly Miss Jessamine Barstow; his son, Edward C. Simmons II; his daughter, Mrs. Carl Koehler, who, as Miss Eleanor Simmons, was Veiled Prophet Queen in 1921; and two brothers, Edward H. and George W. Simmons. A cousin, Miss Lizzie Glenn, who was brought up in the Simmons family, lived at his home.

He was the oldest son of Edward C. Simmons, founder of the hardware jobbing concern, which became one of St. Louis' most widely known firms. The elder Simmons died in 1920.

Wallace Simmons entered the business in 1890, and served in subordinate positions, including a term as traveling salesman. He was assistant treasurer of the firm when, at the end of 1897, his father retired from the presidency, and he was elected to that position. He remained at the head of the company until its consolidation, in 1922, with the Winchester Repeating Arms Co. and associated concerns of New Haven, Conn.

He became a trustee of the Associated Simmons Hardware Cos., and a director of Winchester-Simmons. The merger was dissolved last March, and the Simmons Hardware Co. is again in business here under its old name. Mr. Simmons was not active in the business since 1922, and gave much of his time to his own business affairs. He was a director of the First National Bank, the St. Louis Union Trust Co. and the Philadelphia National Bank of Philadelphia. He was formerly a director of the Pacific Development Corporation, an export trade concern, and was formerly a vice-president of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

HOOVER INQUIRY BOARD PROPOSED IN HOUSE MOTION

Prompt Response to President's Request for Commission to Report on Situation in Island.

"INTOLERABLE," SAYS SENATOR BORAH

Galveston Ordered to Jacmel—Two Naval Planes Are Due at Port Au Prince Tomorrow.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—President Hoover dispatched 500 more marines to Haiti today to aid the 700 there to quell widespread disturbances and asked Congress for authority to send a commission to obtain facts upon which to base the future policy of the American Government with respect to the island republic.

Orders for the departure of marines, who left from Norfolk, Va., today were issued on the recommendation of Gen. John H. Russell, American High Commissioner at Port Au Prince, who is apprehensive for the safety of Americans in the country. The Wright on which the force was dispatched should reach Port au Prince Tuesday night or Wednesday morning.

Two Loenning amphibian airplanes were dispatched today to Port-au-Prince and under favorable conditions should reach Haiti Monday. They will reinforce a squadron of 10 planes already operating under the command of Marines in the island.

The two planes departed from Quantico, Va., early today and tonight were at Fort Screvens, Ga., where they were forced down by fog. They plan to continue their flight via Jacksonville, Miami, Fla., and Cuba, following the Pan-American Airways route.

Dispatches from the Haitian capital that 20 marines had killed and wounded 20 in repulsing 1500 Haitians at Aux Cayes were scanned closely by President Hoover. He had previously confidential reports from the American authorities indicating that the situation had become serious.

Politicians Seize Opportunity.

While the disturbance in Haiti had its inception in a strike of students, official information from the island indicated that some political leaders have seized upon the situation to start a widespread revolt aimed at least in part at Americans.

In his message to Congress, which was delivered only to the House as the Senate was in recess, the chief executive reported his action in ordering marines to Haiti and asked authorization for immediately sending the commission of inquiry, which would include one or two members from the House and the Senate.

Borah Calls Situation Intolerable.

Prompt co-operation with the President in sending a commission was promised by Chairman Borah, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and Chairman Porter of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, but they expressed divergent views as to the situation.

"The immediate disturbance in Haiti is only symptomatic of a widespread and bitter unrest," Borah said. "The oppression and cruelty of the present government of Haiti is something beyond the power of language to describe, something you would not suppose could take place in this day and age. It does seem to me that if we are going to stay in Haiti, the least we could do is to compel the government of Haiti to be just and merciful toward these unfortunate people.

"If there is a program as indicated in the President's message of cleaning up that situation, I want to help, for present conditions are intolerable."

Representative Porter introduced a resolution to carry out the President's recommendation. Said the

STILL IN FIGHT FOR SENATE SEAT, VARE DECLARES

Announcement Taken to Mean That He Intends to Enter the Pennsylvania Primary May 20.

SAYS HE DEFENDS THE CONSTITUTION

Barred for Corruption, He Is Greeted as Conquering Hero on Return to Philadelphia.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 7.—William S. Vare, who was excluded from the Senate yesterday, announced today that he was still in the fight for a seat in the upper House of Congress.

"I am a candidate to the finish," he said, in a statement on his return to this city from Washington. "I shall fight with all the vigor that is within me to vindicate the right of my state to elect its Senator and to preserve for all time the integrity of the Constitution of my country."

This was taken among political leaders to mean that the Philadelphia Republican leader would be a candidate for the senatorial nomination at the primaries, May 20 next, when nominations are to be made to fill the unexpired term to which Vare was elected.

"The sentiment of the entire country," said Vare, "is with me in this fight and I am a candidate to the finish.

Says Newspapers Are for Him.

"Practically every paper in the country—and I personally have seen very many of those that were against me in my previous campaign—is now with me in my defense of the Constitution and the rights of the states to name their own Senators.

"I was given a clean bill of health by the Committee on Privileges and Elections. Telegrams and other messages have come to me from every part of Pennsylvania, many of them from former opponents, saying I am stronger now than ever before. One man wired me that I have four friends now where previously I had but one.

"I shall fight with all the vigor that is within me to vindicate the right of my State to select its Senators and to preserve for all time the integrity of the Constitution of my country."

Vare dictated his statement on the train from Washington, surrounded by members of his family and others.

Welcomed Home as Hero.

The Philadelphia leader arrived at the Broad Street Station of the Pennsylvania Railroad at 1:20 p. m., and was greeted as a conquering hero by a brass band and a crowd estimated at 2000 persons.

The crowd flowed all over the station platforms and waiting rooms. When he left the train the crowd formed a lane and as the political leader limped along leaning heavily on his cane he smilingly greeted his loyal followers.

In the crowd was a banner, held high in the air, on which was this inscription:

"Welcome to Senator Vare. From his loyal friends, 47th Ward."

Street traffic was completely blocked around City Hall as Vare made his way from the station to the west side of City Hall and then down Broad street to his office. Cheers of the crowd were constant as he moved along.

Gov. Fisher to Name No One in Vare's Stead Before Tomorrow.

By the Associated Press.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Dec. 7.—Gov. John S. Fisher announced defintely today that he would not make an appointment for the seat in the Senate denied William S. Vare before Monday.

While he has been in communication with various leaders of the Republican party in the State, the Governor said he planned no conferences on the appointment over the week-end.

The official notice of the vacancy has not been received at the executive offices and the Governor said under no circumstances would he appoint a Senator until the notification came to him. Vice President Curtis was directed by the Senate yesterday to forward official word of the Senate's action to Fisher.

Asked about the statement he made at Reading last night that the appointment was a "matter of hours," the Governor said: "I am going to act with deliberation and upon advice. It is my hope that whatever I may do will meet with the approval of the State."

The Governor's last remark was interpreted in official circles as meaning that he intended to pick a man for the post who could run for the remainder of the unexpired Vare term and would be elected.

Neither Joseph R. Grundy, president of the Pennsylvania Manufacturers' Association, nor anyone else has thus far been proffered the appointment, the Governor made known. As soon as the statement by Vare appeared in the newspapers, however, Fisher called in several of his friends and advisers at the Capitol.

It is thought here that Fisher will make a formal offer of the senatorial appointment to Grundy, with an urgent request that he accept it. Grundy's strength in the party in Pennsylvania is looked to as the only means of getting Vare to step aside, and prevent a rift in the party at the primaries next May, when nominations will be made for Governor, as well as Senator to fill the remainder of the unexpired Vare term after the first Monday in January, 1931, the expiration date of the appointive term.

Trouble Spot in the Caribbean

Text of President's Message

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.

By the Associate Press.

THE text of President Hoover's special message to Congress on the Haitian situation follows:

IN my message to Congress of the 3d instant I indicated my concern as to the future of our policies in Haiti. I stated that we had there about 700 marines and that we are confronted with a difficult problem, the solution of which is still obscure. I further stated that if Congress approves I shall dispatch a commission to Haiti to review and study the matter to endeavor to arrive at some more definite policy than at present.

Our representatives in Haiti have shown great ability and devotion and have accomplished signal results in improvement of the material condition of that people. Yet our experience has revealed more clearly than was seen at first the difficulties of the problem and the entire situation should be reviewed in the light of this experience.

Since the dispatch of my message, disturbances in Haiti have emphasized the importance of such an investigation and determination of national policies in the immediate future.

The students at the Agricultural School at Damien went on a strike on Oct. 31 as a protest against a new policy of the Haitian Government. The Haitian Government had heretofore allotted $10,000 per annum to this school for scholarships, but this year it withheld $2000 of the appropriation in order to make it possible for needy students to perform practical school work on the grounds. Sympathetic strikes were subsequently declared in the medical and law schools. President Borno appointed a committee of Haitians to inquire into the matter and it seemed probable at the time that recommendations presented by this committee and accepted by the authorities would adjust the difficulty. Unfortunately, advantage was taken of the situation by various agencies to foment disturbances against the Haitian administration and on Dec. 3 the American High Commissioner reported that the strike movement had spread throughout the country and that it was feared that the Haitian employes of the departments under American treaty officials might become involved.

On Dec. 4 Custom House employes at Port Au Prince abandoned their work in a disorderly manner and crowds have gathered in Port Au Prince. At the same time there were reported demonstrations by crowds at Cape Haitien in sympathy with the disturbance in Port Au Prince. The American High Commissioner reported that on the morning of Dec. 4 it was feared that disorderly conditions would arise at Aux Cayes and similar disturbances were possible at other places.

The High Commissioner has asked that additional Marines be in readiness to make sure that if the situation becomes serious American lives will be protected, and the force he has suggested has been ordered dispatched for that purpose.

I feel that it is most desirable that the commission mentioned in my message of Dec. 3 be constituted and sent to Haiti without delay and I, therefore, request the Congress to authorize the immediate sending of such a commission and to appropriate for this purpose $50,000. It is my intention to include one or two members from each house of Congress on this commission.

of the Chinese Eastern Railway dispute in Manchuria.

The Nationalist Government also approved the appointment of Tsai Yung-chen, Chinese Commissioner of Foreign Affairs at Mukden, as the Government's representative at formal negotiations with the Russians.

The preliminary agreement, it is stated, specified: First—Moscow will nominate the new manager and assistant manager of the Chinese Eastern Railway, subject to appointment by the Board of Directors. Second—A joint Sino-Russian committee will investigate the railway controversy, placing the blame upon those responsible.

No neutral delegates, it was said, were members of the negotiating committee.

500 MARINES AND WARSHIP SENT TO HAITI AFTER CLASH

difficulties in Haiti undoubtedly were the result of labor troubles.

"I have been to Haiti twice," he added, "and every Haitien interested in law and order to which I talked was more than pleased with the conduct of affairs by the United States marines."

Senator King (Dem.), Utah, who long has urged complete withdrawal of American Marines, announced that he would support the move for an inquiry, adding: "The people resent American occupation, and as long as we keep Marines in that country there will be continuing resentment."

Chairman Britten of the House Naval Committee, said the first duty of the American Government was to protect life and property in Haiti. He added that the Marines were to be complimented on their management of affairs.

Representative Garner of Texas, Democratic leader in the House, said the idea of the United States being "a wet nurse to countries of Central and South America is a mistake. It is spending American lives and money of the American Treasury to promote the interests of one or two groups of American capitalists."

Cruiser Ordered to Jacmel.

In addition to sending 500 Marines from Quantico and other stations from Norfolk today on the aircraft tender Wright, the administration ordered the cruiser Galveston from Guantanamo, Cuba, to Jacmel, Haiti. This craft has 300 officers and men, but only a small Marine guard, and the chief purpose of sending her to Haitien waters is to take aboard Americans who might be endangered in any further disturbances.

In an emergency, it could land a large force of Blue Jackets supplementing the Marines. Its batteries also could command a wide territory about Jacmel.

Dispatches from Gen. Russell said the opposition press and agitators had "inflamed" the country and that since the situation was not clearing as rapidly as had been hoped additional forces of Marines and naval ships would be needed.

The General reported that the telephone line from Cobedere to Jacmel and the line from Conaives to Grosmorne had been cut.

Secretary Stimson described the situation in Haiti as "distressing" and said it would be dealt with in the light of full publicity. He was keeping the President informed of events as they were reported by Gen. Russell.

The State Department tonight made public another dispatch from Gen. Russell sent last night but delayed in transmission to give priority to the commissioner's dispatch concerning the incident at Aux Cayes.

The message indicated that the situation at Aux Cayes, which led to the incident had been stabilized by the arrival of American Marines. The Public Works Service, which had planned to strike Dec. 5, decided against such action and more men than could be provided for were reported to be applying for positions at the Customs House at Port-au-Prince.

Press telegrams concerning the favorable comment of the State Department on the declaration of President Borno that he would not be a candidate for re-election in April had an "excellent effect" in Haiti, Russell reported.

Members of the Haitian press on Dec. 5 said they had no feeling or complaint against the United States forces, he added, and that they realized that one incident had led to another and the strike had rapidly developed a situation, the gravity of which had not been foreseen.

Former Haitian Diplomat Denounces U. S. Rule.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People today issued a statement asserting that "detailed and specific charges concerning American misrule" in the republic of Haiti had been submitted to the United States Department of State by Perceval Thoby, former Charge d'Affaires of the Haitian legation at Washington.

Thoby charged, the statement said, that 14 years of American occupation had resulted in "the greatetest misery ever knqwn in Haitian history."

The association quoted Thoby as saying the election of Louis Borno as president of the republic on April 10, 1922, by fourteen members of the council of state, was "in contemptuous contravention of the constitution," since the council was not empowered to elect a president and Borno himself was not a native-born Haitian.

"The old and liberal Haitian laws," the association's statement quoted Thoby as saying. "Have been abrogated. A new law was enacted in 1922 'to guarantee,' it is said, 'the independence and security of our press.' Under this law, undemocratic and medieval and modified four times in six years, more than 40 journalists have already suffered imprisonment. Several of these have remained for months, without trial, in the penitentiary."

The association recommended an impartial commission of United States citizens, including Negro members, to investigate the situation.

American Occupation Began in 1915 After Revolution.

American occupation of Haiti dates back to 1915 in which year the republic had its last and most terrible revolution when adherents of Dr. Rosalvo Bobo, revolutionary leader, seeking the presidency after twice being expelled from the country, arose in Port Au Prince.

President Vilbrun Guillaume took refuge in the French legation, which was violated. He was taken out and murdered by the mob, which later paraded the city streets carrying his head.

Then American marines landed and established order. Native leaders appealed for help in setting up a government, and with the protection of the marines a treaty was negotiated by which the United States established a virtual protectorate.

The republic in its present form was born in 1918, when a Constitution was ratified. The senior military officer of the country is the American High Commissioner, who also has the rank of Ambassador.

Charge d'Affaires at Berne to Go to Geneva for Formalities — League Campaign to Follow.

By Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and the New York World.

Copyright 1929 by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Co. (The New York World and Post-Dispatch.)

BERNE, Switzerland, Dec. 7.—The United States will sign both the Root protocol for adhesion to the World Court and the protocol for revision of the Court's statutes Monday, the Post-Dispatch correspondent learned today.

On that day Pierpont Moffatt, charge d'affaires of the American legation here, plans to go to Geneva for completion of the formalities, after which the League of Nations will start a campaign for speedy ratification of both conventions by all the World Powers and smaller countries as well.

The United States legation notified Sir Eric Drummond, secretary-general of the League, the other day of its intention of signing the protocols simultaneously. This notification reached Geneva immediately after President Hoover's message to Congress was delivered.

Although the League has been holding back because of Washington's slowness in carrying out its promise to sign, made by the State Department to the International Conference of World Court members during the September assembly, Monday's fulfillment of that promise will be followed by League pressure upon Albania, Abyssinia and Lithuania—three members of the Court which have thus far not signed either protocol.

The signatures of 50 other states within two weeks, which came as a result of Washington's assurance that the Root protocol was acceptable, constitutes a record for quick international action upon a document of signal importance.

Thus far Belgium alone has ratified the protocol for revision of the World Court statutes. Brussels significantly refrained from ratifying the Root protocol at the same time, because Washington had not carried out its promise to sign.

In some diplomatic circles it is thought that court members will still be reluctant to proceed with ratifications of the protocols until the Congress of the United States has approved American accession to World Court membership. It is pointed out that Washington used the procrastination of Abyssinia, Lithuania and Albania as an excuse for taking more than 10 weeks for signing, despite the fact that 50 other nations literally stampeded into the secretariat of the league to welcome the Americans.

The opinion is, however, that the league will bend every effort to secure unanimous ratifications in order to make Washington's membership in the court effective before September, 1930, when a new panel of judges is to be elected.

Christian General of China Peels Pears and Tells Why He Leads Army of 400,000

In Interview at Hilltop Home, He Says Selfish Leadership Has Kept Country in Turmoil for 17 Years.

The following interview with Marshal Feng Yu-Hsiang, commander of the rebellious Kuominchun or "People's Army" of Central China, was obtained by James P. Howe, Chief of the Peiping Bureau of the Associated Press, after a journey of hundreds of miles into the interior of China.

Copyright by the Associated Press.

TAIYUANFU, SHANSI, China.—Marshal Feng Yu-Hsiang, one of the great Chinese leaders and once known as "the Christian General," has let it be known in no uncertain language that he took the field against the Nationalist Government of Nanking because he thought President Chiang Kai-Shek had been double-crossing him.

"Chiang Kai-Shek for months has been urging other army chiefs to disband their troops, while he himself has continued recruiting," the Marshal told the Associated Press correspondent.

"That alone has vexed us considerably, to say the least."

In a flash of annoyance, the Marshal dug into a table the blade of a knife he had been using to peel an orange.

His chief grievance against President Chiang and the Nationalists at Nanking is that they have been furthering a kind of private state-ownership policy.

"If we come into power," the Marshal explained, "we would establish instead a policy of public state-ownership at the very earliest moment."

Largest Private Army.

Marshal Feng is credited with commanding the world's largest private army. It is known as the Kuominchun, or "people's army" and if he succeeds in ousting Chiang as the foremost leader of China he has his plans all made for setting up a government. One of the things he intends to do is to make Peiping the national capital again, abandoning Nanking; and in that case the name of the old city may again become Peking.

Feng is absolutely confident of the ultimate victory of his forces.

"We have the people's welfare at heart and I believe that that spirit is bound to win in the end."

The interview took place at one of the homes of Marshal Yen Hsishan, the "model governor" of Shansi, 30 miles north of Taiyuanfu, where Marshal Feng has made his headquarters for several months. Feng explained that he arranged this in order to be near Yen, "so we might talk things over, every day or so."

Two Wireless Stations.

Feng's house is perched on top of a hill and built like the castles of the Chinese feudal barons of olden times. There is but one entrance, a winding path leading up a steep slope. Surrounding the edge of the hilltop is a 10-foot wall of stone and sun-baked mud.

The Marshal's quarters overlook a wonderful valley stretching away for miles. In the distance are two wireless stations through which the Marshal keeps in touch with his men in the field. Marshal Yen lives three miles away, to the east.

Feng, standing 6 feet 6 in his sandals, has been China's most picturesque warrior for years. He wears the simple garb of a coolie, and is satisfied with coolie food and very proud of the fact that he has only one wife. He neither smokes nor drinks, nor do the officers and men around him.

Instead of smoking while discussing business or politics, the Marshal munches fruit. During an hour's talk with the Associated Press correspondent, Feng ate three Chinese pears and two California oranges, which he peeled with a big knife produced from the mysterious folds of a long blue gown that reached from his neck to his ankles. The pears might have come from any one of a dozen districts of the world, but the oranges were unmistakably from California; for the trade mark was stamped on the rind.

Bathtub Not in Use.

There was little else that is foreign about this house on the hill, 80 miles from a railroad in China's interior, except an American bathtub. The bathtub is ceremoniously kept in a corner of Feng's reception room, apparently waiting to be attached to its fixtures if water is ever got up the grade. The Marshal's interpreter - secretary, Kuo-Liang Ch'en, educated at Columbia University, New York, occasionally wears American style dress.

The Marshal began his conversation by asking the correspondent whether he had enjoyed the automobile trip from Taiyuanfu, how long he had been in China, and how long he intended to remain. Then the subject of Chiang Kai-Shek was brought up, and it required a very short time for Feng to state his opinion that China had been preaching one way and practicing another.

Feng is a brilliant politician, and he has survived China's recurring revolutions as much by political maneuvers as by fighting. He likes slogans and catchwords. Everywhere in the north he has his followers, and almost as many in the south.

Although he is a strict disciplinarian, he has a reputation for making friends. He is often away from his men for months, but they have always been loyal to him. If there is a job to be done, fighting, road building, or anything of that sort, Feng is likely to rouse his troops out of bed at 3 or 4 o'clock in the morning. They appear to like him all the better for it.

Struggle of Individuals.

"The cause of the political unrest in China for 17 years and more has been the struggle among individuals," the Marshal said, as he peeled his second orange, which was almost hidden in his enormous but well-shaped hands. "China's so-called leaders have been fighting one another for selfish ends. The people have been completely forgotten.

"We would end all this, and work together for the benefit of the people, with the welfare of the people as the first consideration at all times."

Feng then mentioned the faithfulness of his soldiers, which gave the correspondent an opportunity for questions about the Marshal's personal army.

"Is it true that his troops total 400,000?" he asked the interpreter.

"That is a military secret," Feng smiled at the correspondent as he offered him another pear.

7 LIVES LOST, 41 SHIPS IN DISTRESS OFF BRITISH ISLES

Two Steamers Go Down With All on Board—Crew of Italian Vessel Is Rescued.

70,000,000 CARGO OF PAINTINGS IN DANGER

No Word in 24 Hours From the Leonardo da Vinci, on the Way to England With Pictures.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 7.—Forty-one ships and innumerable fishing boats and barges were in distress tonight off the coasts of Great Britain and Ireland after a seasonal hurricane that centered off the British Isles and extended as far as Spain and Scandinavia.

The fierce gale, which lashed Britain for more than 24 hours, caused a loss of life tabulated so far at 37. It was one of the severest storms in many years.

The British steamer Hadyr foundered in Bideford Bay, Devonshire, with the loss of all 21 hands. The steamer Frances Duncan went down off Land's End with a loss of 16 lives. The crew of the Italian steamer Casmona abandoned ship after losing their rudder and were rescued by the steamers Edinburgh Castle and Pianza.

Ships of all nationalities were among those in distress, British, Norwegian, Dutch, Hungarian, Spanish, French and Italian.

Somewhere in the Bay of Biscay or the outer channel, the treasure ship Leonardo da Vinci from Italy was thought to be making her way through the storm to England, where her cargo of pictures, valued at $70,000,000, will be exhibited. The Leonardo da Vinci has been sending wireless reports on her progress every day, but has not been heard from since she reported that she had passed Gibraltar at 8 o'clock last evening.

Makes Port Without Rudder.

The liner Andalucia Star, bound for Madeira and South American ports, lost her rudder and had difficulty making her way safely to the port of Falmouth. Engineers made emergency repairs after the ship had sent out a call for help. Eight persons were killed in the interior of the British Isles by falling chimneys, uprooted trees, broken windows and falling walls.

The velocity of the wind reached 103 miles an hour today in the Scilly Isles and then broke the recording instrument. It was estimated that it went as high as 112 miles an hour, which if true established a new record for England, which has heretofore never felt more than 111 miles an hour.

The gale which had raged over the Merseyside near Liverpool for 24 hours persisted tonight, but the wind had dropped to 70 miles an hour velocity.

The liner Carinthia with passengers for New York was stormbound in the Mersey. The liner Albertic was also stormbound in the Gladstone Docks. The Minnedosa from Canada, due this morning, was delayed 24 hours. The liners Hector and Nestor of the Blue Funnel line delayed sailing for the Far East.

Thames Overflows.

The storm caused the Thames to overflow its banks at Maidenhead tonight, turning a stream into the principal streets where it flowed at seven miles an hour. Civic authorities took emergency measures to aid the inhabitants.

All cross-channel traffic by sea and air has been suspended until further notice.

More than 120 feet of the Dover seawall had crumbled tonight under the pounding of the storm.

The Selsey lifeboat returned safely after 13 hours of battling mountainous seas off the Sussex coast in response to an SOS from the Hungarian steamer Honved which finally made port by its own efforts.

The epic of the night, however, was the tremendous fight against the elements by the New Haven lifeboat crew which put out in the face of the gale and rescued 10 men from a stranded schooner off Eastbourne. The wives and other relatives of the lifeboat-men stood pantily clad on the beach unmindful of the rain and driving spray to pray for the safe return of the lifeboat.

The steamer Neville went ashore near Barry Island and lashed by heavy seas was in a dangerous position.

In Danger of Losing Wireless.

The Spanish steamer Sebastian was in distress and her captain reported her in grave danger of having her wireless cabin washed away.

The crew of the Italian steamer Casmona was reported taking to lifeboats while the Spanish steamer Galdames reported to the Land's End wireless station that she required immediate assistance.

A vessel whose identity could not be ascertained was reported in distress near Barry Head with a steamer standing by unable to render help until the weather moderated. The distressed ship was laden with timber.

The Firth of Forth and the west coast of Scotland also were swept Georges Carpentier Among Injured on the Homeric.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Dec. 7.—The gale which swept the entire Atlantic coastline of France last night and today greatly afflicted the fishing fleets and hampered navigation in general. From Douarnenez came a report that a distress signal had been hoisted on the La Vieille lighthouse. No craft was able to put out during the day to the assistance of the lightkeepers.

S O S signals were received from a number of craft in the English Channel and tugs fought their way out to render assistance.

The liner Homeric reached Cherbourg 12 hours late after two days of struggle with the gale. Four passengers, including Georges Carpentier, the boxer, suffered slight injuries. Officers of the ship said that the storm was the worst they had encountered for a quarter of a century. Late today the vessel was forced to heave to for an hour because of the terrific buffeting and did not make port until late evening. There had been reports that the Homeric had taken the crew from a sinking vessel, but it appeared that the Homeric had been confused with the Baltic which had made such a rescue.

Great excitement was caused on board the Cunarder Lancastria during an electrical storm over the English Channel last night. Lightning burned out part of the radio apparatus but did no extensive damage.

Brest reported that a woman was drowned when the Danish steamer Helen sank during the storm in the Gulf of Gascony. All others on board were saved by the salvage tug Iroise.

All airplane services were cancelled in Paris.

YOUTH, 17, KILLS HIMSELF WHEN DISPLAYING A PISTOL

Gilmore Pearson, East St. Louis, Pulls Trigger to Prove "It Wouldn't Go Off."

Gilmore Pearson, 17 years old, an East St. Louis filling station attendant accidentally killed himself yesterday afternoon when he pulled the trigger of a pistol which he had placed at his temple in order to prove that "it wouldn't go off."

The pistol was one of two which he had at the filling station to protect himself against robbers. Three men were present when the pistol was discharged. The station, 3912 State street, is owned by Albert Bowles, for whom Pearson had worked three months.

While exhibiting the pistols, the youth, according to those who were present, pointed one of them at J. C. Tibbet, 839 North Fifty-fourth street, East St. Louis, who protested, "Don't do that, it might go off."

"It won't go off, I'll show you," said Pearson, who pointed the pistol at his own right temple and pulled the trigger. It is supposed he thought the safety catch was on. Pearson got the pistols after being held up and robbed of $45 on the night of Nov. 22 and of $10 the next night.

He was the son of Mrs. Fannie O. Pearson, with whom he resided at 1374 North Twenty-third street, East St. Louis.

SICK AND 82, ENDS LIFE

Former Head of Mexican Navy Department Ends Life.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 7. — Manuel E. Yzaguirra, 82 years old, who lived through several generations of Mexican politics to become the chief of the Mexican navy department, shot himself through the heart here today with his service revolver. Before he killed himself he wrote a note saying he took his life because of failing health.

the Mogler Theater, who repeated his account of the killing, as previously publishd, and Lawrence Frederick, 3202 North Nineteenth street, who testified he was walking past the theater when he heard a shot inside and saw two men run out the door and past him toward Bremen avenue. Both Phinney and Frederick said they did not think they would be able to identify the men they saw.

Police Captain's Testimony.

Capt. Charles H. Loepker, of Angelica Street Police Station, testified that he was at the station, a block from the theater, when he was told that Phinney had appeared with the news that Mogler had been shot. Hurrying to the theater with several of his men, he said he found Mogler's body lying face down on the floor of the theater about six or eight feet from the entrance. Mogler had been shot in the left cheek. His overcoat was fully buttoned and his scarf, gloves, jewelry and money were undisturbed.

The Captain's testimony was corroborated by Patrolman Fred J. Dietz and Detective-Sergeant Thomas J. Moran. The latter told of interviewing about 50 persons, including friends, associates and employes of Mogler, and had not obtained any information pointing to a solution of the crime.

Phinney testified that he unlocked the theater at 8:55 a. m. Monday and was about to sweep out the cashier's cage when two men entered through the front door.

"Is Mr. Mogler in yet?" inquired one of the men. "No, sir," Phinney replied, his back turned. "We want to see him about a case coming up in court," the man said.

Forced to Lie on Floor.

"I was about to turn around when I felt a revolver pressed against my back," Phinney testified. "The man told me: 'Don't turn around, buddy. Keep your face to the wall.' He marched me down the center aisle to a cross aisle and made me lie face down on the floor with my arms outspread.

"The keys to the theater which I carried in my coat pocket bumped against a seat. Without saying a word, one of the men reached in my pocket, took the keys and threw them to the other man, who was returning to the lobby."

Phinney said one of the men sat on him and he heard nothing until a few minutes later when the front door opened. Then, he said, he heard a shot and the voice of the man who fired, shouting: "Come on; I got him (or it). Let's go." He was not sure whether the man said "I got him," or "I got it." After the man who was sitting on him ran up the aisle to join his companion, Phinney said he scrambled to his feet and ran out a rear door, hurrying to the police station.

Detectives have searched the theater for the janitor's keys and, failing to find them, have concluded that they were taken away by the slayers. Phinney, however, did not have keys to Mogler's private office where he kept theater money in a safe.

mediately to Port-au-Prince and reinforcements of two National Guard officers and 52 men were sent by truck to Jacmel. The authorities at Jacmel have been ordered to make wholesale arrests if conditions warrant it.

Reports have been received there that the peasants may attack the town, which is at present under effective control.

A total of 50 persons were under arrest here and at various other points. They will be brought to speedy trial in the provost courts. First offenders under the curfew ruling which is enforced under martial law were released this morning with a warning that a second offense would bring them before the provost court.

A plane was sent to Jeremie when telegraph communication was lost. The telegraph wires were out between Gonaives and Port-de-Paix.

The attacks on Aux Cayes were considered the result of active anti-Government propaganda which began in the south five months ago. Agents were reported to have circulated rumors that the Government would forbid cultivation and sale of coffee, tobacco and other crops and would impose heavy taxes.

This report gained such headway that in some instances the peasants stopped planting or destroyed already growing coffee bushes and tobacco plants. Government agencies took prompt steps to reassure the countryside and the situation improved materially.

The agitation was again renewed with alarmist reports based on the passage of new alcohol and tobacco tax bills following upon passage of a coffee standardization law designed to improve the quality and cleanliness of coffee shipments.

The south is the center of the coffee trade, which constitutes 75 per cent of Haitian revenues.

Three general factors appear to lie behind the agitation which began with the student strike of Nov. 30 and now have culminated in widespread disturbances. The campaign seemed to be first directed toward inducing President Borno to call general legislative elections in February. His failure to do so led to a campaign to prevent his re-election to a third term as unconstitutional. His declaration two weeks ago that he was not a candidate was not accepted without equivocation.

The third factor was apparently a desire to force an American congressional investigation with the object of compelling withdrawal of American forces before the expiration of the treaty in 1936.

'SLAIN' FARMHAND APPEARS, SEEKS TO CLEAR PRISONERS

Man Who Says He Is Connie Franklin Denies Whole Story of Attack—Sheriff Doubts Identity.

BATESVILLE, Ark., Dec. 7.—A man, who said he was Connie Franklin, young farmhand who was thought to have been cremated alive after being beaten and tortured into insensibility last March 9, walked into the county jail at Batesville today and was greeted joyously by two of the five men charged with his murder, Joe White and Herman Greenway.

"It's all a frame-up on these fellows," said the visitor. "I left the hills after a drinking bout and have been working different places ever since. Nobody beat me. The only bruise I got was when I fell off a mule."

"It's just a slick move on the part of the defense," was the comment of Sheriff Sam Johnson. "That man isn't Connie Franklin."

Franklin disappeared after he had obtained a license to marry 18-year-old Tillie Ruminer. Both were residents of the St. James community, near Mountain View, an illiterate district frequently terrorized by bands of night riders.

According to witnesses, the pair were waylaid as they were on their way to be married, Franklin beaten until he fainted and then burned on a brush fire and his bride-to-be criminally attacked. Five men were indicted for the murder, two of them being additionally charged with the attack.

Tillie Ruminer told the Grand Jury that the night-riders, unable to destroy Franklin's remains by fire, dumped them into a sack and started toward the White River. Eugene Chauncisse, a woodsman, told how he had stood behind a tree and seen "considerable."

Both witnesses and a third, a young deaf mute, were threatened by night riding bands after they had whispered their tales to the grand jury and Sheriff Johnson himself was paid a visit by Aleck Fulk, alleged leader of the night riders from Cagin Creek and Dry Creek, who was accompanied by Hubert Hester, Herman Greenway, Bill C. Younger and Joe White.

Fulk suggested that the crime had not been committed and that Johnson had best see that the prosecution be dropped.

"All right, men," the Sheriff replied, "you bring back Connie Franklin and I won't bother you any more." The men promised to do so and returned to the hills. Three of them went into the Oklahoma mountains and have not been heard from since.

JAMES G. ARBUCKLE JR. DIES IN BUFFALO HOTEL

BUFFALO, N. Y., Dec. 7.—The funeral of James G. Arbuckle Jr., formerly of St. Louis, was held here today. The body was sent to St. Louis for burial. Mr. Arbuckle died after a brief illness in Hotel Utica, where he resided. He leaves his widow, two brothers and a sister.

Mr. Arbuckle was the son of a St. Louis business man of Scotch descent, who sometimes signed his name James the Graeme Arbuckle. The elder Arbuckle organized the Latin-American and Foreign Trade Association here, was Consul of Colombia in St. Louis, and was knighted by the King of Spain for his services to international trade. Maclyn Arbuckle, prominent stage actor, and Andrew and Kathryn Arbuckle, moving picture players, were his brothers and sister.

TWO LINERS COLLIDE IN FOG ON SAILING FROM NEW YORK

Transylvania and Creole Suffer Minor Damage; No One Is Injured.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—A heavy fog, which covered New York harbor delaying all shipping, resulted in the collision of the two outbound ocean liners today—the Anchor Line Transylvania and the Southern Pacific Creole. They crashed while just off the Battery and were forced to return to their piers for repairs.

No one was injured. The Creole, bound for New Orleans, had 69 passengers aboard and the Transylvania, Europe bound, carried 309 on its passenger list.

Capt. David Bone of the Transylvania said the collision occurred when the Transylvania turned to avoid two tugs which appeared out of the fog bound up the river. A hole three feet in diameter was torn in one of the Transylvania's plates just below the deck and several feet of railing was twisted, as the ships scraped sides.

The Creole went into dry dock at Hoboken, where, after a careful examination, it was said repairs might be completed in time for sailing at midnight.

After repairs had been made, the Transylvania sailed again at 7:45 o'clock tonight.

TWO MEN SERIOUSLY HURT IN COLLISION OF AUTOS

James W. Williams, 3948 South Grand boulevard, a member of the executive board of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, was seriously injured, and Mrs. Williams was cut and bruised when an automobile in which they were riding collided with the machine of Phillip Rosenmeyer, 2614 Accomac street, at Ohio avenue and Russell boulevard last night. Rosenmeyer also was seriously hurt.

Williams was being taken to a train on his way to Lakeland, Fla., where he was to attend a union meeting, by his son-in-law, Pierce Doyle, 3674A Gravois avenue, who was accompanied by his wife and two children. They were uninjured.

PILOT DROPPED NOTE BEFORE FATAL CRASH

Nelson's Message, Found on Roof at Warren, O., Told Searchers Where to Look.

By the Associated Press.

WARREN, O., Dec. 7.—A farewell message from pilot T. B. Nelson of the Air Mail Service who lost his life in the crash of his plane near Chagrin Falls, O., early Monday, showing that the flyer had realized disaster was near, was found here today. Written on a piece of paper tied to a small piece of metal, it had been dropped by Nelson from his plane shortly before the crash.

"Search for me in this section. Trouble," it said. At the bottom of the message, Nelson had signed: "T. B. Nelson, N. A. T."

Gretchen King, 10-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank R. King, found the note this morning, hanging from an eave-trough on her home.

Nelson, who was carrying the air mail from Bellefonte, Pa., to Cleveland, had battled through a snowstorm above the mountains of Western Pennsylvania during the night. Evidently his plane was in a crippled condition when he reached the vicinity of Warren, and he realized it might not hold up much longer.

Facing the possibility of a crash Nelson had tried to arrange at least so that the searchers who were bound to look for him, would find him as quickly as possible. So he wrote the note and dropped it.

Nelson apparently jumped just before the craft hit, but too late for his parachute to save him.

The Coroner at Chagrin Falls, shortly after Nelson's body was found, Thursday, said the pilot had been knocked unconscious and had died of exposure.

$10,000,000 TO STOCKHOLDERS

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—The Harriman National Bank and Trust Co. today announced that it was giving its stockholders a Christmas present valued at nearly $10,000,000.

In a newspaper advertisement headed "Merry Christmas," the bank disclosed that the directors had approved a 5000-share stock dividend to be pro rated on the basis of one new share for each three held. "The new stock is to be paid for by the bank itself out of its undivided profits," said the announcement. Harriman bank shares closed yesterday at $1700 bid, $1850 asked.

MRS. SIDI SPRECKELS WEDS ARMY AVIATOR

Divorced Wife of Turkish Prince Becomes Bride of Lieut. R. A. Gardner.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—Sidi Wirt Spreckels, former wife of Prince Suad Chakir of Turkey, today was married to Lieut. Roger Alan Gardner of the Army Air Corps, at Fairfax County Courthouse, Virginia.

They obtained the license at the Courthouse and immediately were married by Deputy Clerk Elton R. Holbrooke of the Circuit Court. Gardner gave his age as 27 and Mrs. Gardner 35. She gave Reno, Nev., as her home.

Gardner, who was formerly stationed at Crissy Field and met Mrs. Spreckels there is now attached to Langley Field and officers there today said he was on a short leave.

Today's marriage was Sidi Wirt's fourth. Her first, to Harry Williams, an advertising man, ended in divorce. Later she married John D. Spreckels Jr., San Francisco millionaire, who was killed in an automobile accident. In 1923 she married Prince Suad whom she met on a visit to the Near East. This marriage also ended in divorce.

CALLS HONEST LAWYER BEST HOPE IN CRIME SITUATION

"The most hopeful aspect of the present crime situation in St. Louis is the fact that we have an able body of men practicing criminal law who have conscience," Circuit Attorney Franklin Miller said at the annual banquet of the Benton College of Law at Hotel Chase last night.

"I do not include in this classification the shyster lawyer, because he is really not a lawyer at all," the speaker said. "Nor do I include the civil lawyer who feels himself above the practice of criminal law. I refer to the average lawyer who makes his living at the practice of law and wants to do it honestly."

The speaker suggested more openness between the defense attorney and the trial judge in criminal cases, stating that, as long as no political influence was brought to bear, the defense attorney should feel free to discuss the cases with the judge privately in order to get all the facts before the Court.

WOULD SEND ARMY FLYERS AFTER EIELSON

Secretary Wilbur Suggests Expedition to Hunt Aviator Missing in Arctic.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—Secretary of the Interior Wilbur today suggested to the War Department that active steps be taken for an Army expedition to rescue Lieut. Ben Eielson and his mechanic, Earl Borland, lost somewhere in Northern Alaska or on the Siberian coast.

The action of Wilbur followed receipt of a telegram from six leading citizens of Nome, Alaska, informing him that the private expedition headed by Frank Dorbandt had been unable to function and that Dorbandt had wrecked his plane at Teller, Alaska.

Charles D. Jones, United States Marshal at Nome, informed the Interior Department that the planes available in Alaska for the Eielson search were unsuited for such work. He urged that the Government give assistance to the search with planes suitable for long cruising.

Eielson has been missing since early in November, when he made his second trip from Teller, Alaska, to North Cape, Siberia, where he had been engaged in removing passengers and a $1,000,000 fur cargo from the icebound trading ship Nanuk.

Colorful Figure Passes In Death of J. L. Schuler, City's "Marrying Justice"

Dairyman, Saloon Keeper and Politician Reported Always to Carry a "Roll" of More Than $1000.

JOSEPH L. SCHULER.

Political St. Louis lost one of its most colorful figures in the death of Joseph L. Schuler of pneumonia yesterday at St. Mary's Hospital.

For nearly half a century he was a fixture of the political meeting-place and battle-ground between Eleventh and Fourteenth streets, Clark avenue and Market street. Dairyman, saloon keeper, genius loci of the old Four Courts and Brigadier of the Koeln faction—these weer the stages in his advance to the ultimate role of "marrying Justice."

And Joe Schuler always dressed the part. As Justice of the Peace who married 15,000 pairs in the last 15 years, he wore a fresh pink carnation every morning. His pleated shirt was spotless, his tie white, his collar winged, his coat long and formal, his stud a two-carat diamond which he successfully defended against four attempts to steal it.

His expression, like his business, suggested the law less than the clergy. There was something kindly about his mouth, something Puritan about his glance.

Nor were these so incongruous in a saloon keeper of the rare and respected type to which Schuler belonged. He was a dispenser of counsel with his beer, of aid with his free lunch. And it is recorded in the memory of uncounted politicians that all four were excellent.

His Bar in the Old Days.

It is not recorded in the memory of many, however, when his saloon was established at the southeast corner of Eleventh and Clark. Thirty years ago it was a going institution, distinguished for its neatness, its beer and its perennial throng of politicians from "across the street."

Jury warrants and witness fees were cashed in Clark avenue saloons which were the rendezvous of lawyers, reporters, attaches of courts and police headquarters, visitors to the adjacent jail. More than once a winning attorney stood the drinks for Judge, jury and opposing counsel.

Clark avenue opposite the Four Courts was lined with saloons. But the two which stood out were those at the ends of the row — Schuler's on the west and Schweickhardt's at the southwest corner of Twelfth and Clark. Schweickhardt moved on as proprietor of the Cottage, which sold beer in Forest Park under official supervision, and Schuler was left without a rival.

Some of his "sales appeal" was quiet and decency, due in part, to the Schuler disposition but possibly more to the frequent presence of the Schuler women-folk. And political St. Louis knew Mrs. Schuler's pies well and favorably.

In those days a policeman could drink beer without standing behind the saloon icebox. A certain policeman, who has long since passed on, liked his beer in a lemonade glass. Good beer and good measure for 5 cents, his order became almost universal at Schuler's, and its was phrased after the policeman's name, "Gime me a 'Paddy.'"

When the courts moved to the new Municipal Courts Building, Schuler moved with them to Fourteenth and Clark. He obtained contracts for feeding grand and petit jurors. Sometimes he signed a bond.

Schuler was much around the Four Courts, but customers rarely or seekers for aid or advice rarely looked for him vainly in the saloon. Often he would be sociably in front of the bar. Behind the bar would be one or both of his sons, Fred and Anton.

The latter, Tony, was a middle-sized but well-set up lad, quiet, but friendly, and gifted with a memory for first names. Patrons remembered him, and now he is Public Administrator.

It would have been strange if political power had not come to the Schulers through that saloon. When Joseph Schuler, formerly a Republican City Committeeman, was elected Justice of the Peace his marrying career was ready-made.

Persons without a particular minister or Justice in mind were directed from the Marriage License Bureau across the street to his office at 200 South Twelfth.

Anton Schuler went from the saloon to a political career even more successful if less picturesque. Chief Deputy Marshal in Police Court No. 1 at 22, he was appointed City Marshal by Mayor Kiel in 1921. In 1924, when he was elected Sheriff, he led the Koeln slate in an epochal fight in local Republican politics.

He alone of the immediate family survives Joseph Schuler, who was 78 years old. The Marrying Justice became ill 12 days ago at his home, 308A South Fourteenth street, and was taken to the hospital last Monday. Beneath his bed was found $1700, a reminder of the tradition that he always carried a "roll" in excess of $1000.

Soda Water Manufacturer Dies.

Ernest Schweigler, soda water manufacturer, died yesterday at his home, 2113 Ohio avenue. He was operated on five weeks ago to remove a tumor from his throat. Mr. Schweigler was 44 years old and had conducted the E. Schweigler Soda Water Co., 2705 Juniata street, for 22 years. He is survived by his widow, his mother, Mrs. Anna Schweigler, a son, George, and a daughter, Dorothea. Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 3 p. m., at the Wacker-Helderle Undertaking Co., 3634 Gravois avenue. Burial will take place in St. Matthew's Cemetery.

REPORT CONTRADICTS M'CORMICK'S DOCTOR

Medical Record Read in Cross-Examination of Assistant House Physician.

By the Associated Press.

SANTA BARBARA, Cal., Dec. 7.—Newton D. Baker, chief counsel for Mrs. Katherine McCormick in her fight for guardianship of her incompetent multimillionaire husband, Stanley McCormick, today cross-examined Dr. Nathaniel Brush, assistant resident physician for the last 10 years.

Mrs. McCormick is seeking to oust Harold McCormick and Mrs. Anita McCormick Blaine, brother and sister of the mental invalid, as his guardians and trustees of his $50,000,000 estate, on the grounds the fortune is being dissipated and the patient is not improving.

In his cross-examination of Dr. Brush, Baker dug into the mental and physical history of McCormick. He uncovered information that the patient had made considerable progress from year to year since 1917, but that he had some slumps and also period as far back as 1920 when he was able to converse coherently and lengthily.

Testifying that he first saw the patient in 1917, Dr. Brush said that when he became resident physician two years later he found considerable improvement.

"I got the impression," the witness said, "that in my two years away he had gotten things to fill his mind."

Baker asked how he was at Christmas in 1922.

"As I recall he was not very good," the doctor replied.

Baker read from the doctor's own medical report in which he said that by all means this was the best and most pleasant Christmas enjoyed by the patient in years. Dr. Brush said that in 1923, as he recalled, Christmas also was not very good. Baker read again from his medical report that the patient was very pleasant in the morning, was cheerful when he opened his Christmas gifts, arranged the gifts in a circle around the Christmas tree and seemed to enjoy himself most of the day.

A. P. Corrects Erroneous Report.

PARIS, Dec. 7.—The Associated Press on Nov. 14 erroneously reported that the Countess de Lasanne de Vauroussel, formerly Ethel Macomber of Brookline, Mass., had filed an action for a formal separation from the Count. On that date the Count and Countess recorded with the French courts their marriage contract establishing their individual property rights. Due to an error in the translation of the French legal terms the Associated Press cabled the erroneous report.

KILLED WHEN FREIGHT TRAIN HITS HIS AUTO

J. J. de Wald, Radio Act Agent, Loses Life at Crossing East of Collinsville, Ill.

Joseph J. de Wald, of Fort Wayne, Ind., and St. Louis, publicity man for a cowboy vaudeville and radio act, was killed about 9 o'clock last night, when a freight train of the Illinois Terminal Railroad struck the automobile he was driving at a crossing on National Route No. 11, three miles west of Troy and five miles east of Collinsville.

De Wald's neck was broken. The car was demolished. A man riding with him, whom he had picked up on the highway, suffered minor injuries. The body was taken to Troy for an inquest tomorrow.

De Wald was 42 years old. For more than a year he had been publicity man and agent for the Otto Gray Oklahoma Cowboys' Band, whose act has frequently been broadcost in St. Louis. When in St. Louis, De Wald stopped at the American Hotel or at 5207 Vernon avenue. His mother lives in Fort Wayne, Ind. He was married.

Lawrence Tyler, who was riding with De Wald, said the latter had picked him up in Jefferson, Ind. He did not know De Wald's name, identification being established through papers in the dead man's pockets.

BERNARD SHAW A HAS-BEEN AS PLAYWRIGHT, HE ADMITS

Congratulating London Manager, Prophesies Great Things for the New Drama.

Copyright, 1929, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Co. (The New York World and Post-Dispatch.)

LONDON, Dec. 7.—George Bernard Shaw has just confessed that as a playwright he is now a has-been. He did it in a letter to Charles B. Cochran, whom he congratulated on his production here of Sean O'Casey's play, "The Silver Tassie."

"Really must congratulate you on the Tassie," Shaw wrote, "before it passes into the classical repertory. It is a magnificent play, and it was a magnificent gesture of yours to produce it. The highbrows should have produced it; you, the unpretentious showman, did, as you have done so many other noble and mash things on your Sundays. This, I think, will rank as the best of them.

"I hope you have not lost too much by it, especially as I am quite sure that you have done your best in that direction by doing the thing as extravagantly as possible. That is the worst of operating on your colossal scale; you haven't time to economise, and you lose the habit of thinking it worth while.

"No matter! A famous achievement! There is a new drama rising from unplumbed depths to sweep the nice little bourgeois efforts of myself and my contemporaries into the dustbin, and your name will live as that of the man who didn't run away.

"If only someone would build you a huge Woolworth theater (all seats sixpence) to start with O'Casey and O'Neill, and no plays by men who had ever seen a five-pound note before they were 30 or been inside a school after they were 13 you would be buried in Westminster Abbey."

The occasion of Shaw's letter was the announcement here that "The Silver Tassie" is being withdrawn. The scenery and accessories will be shipped to New York.

FRISCO TO MAKE RECORD EXPENDITURE OF $24,127,177

Outlay in 1930 for Roadway, Structures and Equipment in Line With Hoover Policy.

In line with President Hoover's policy of business expansion during 1930, President J. M. Kurn of the St. Louis-San Francisco Railway Co. announced yesterday that his railroad would spend $24,127,177 during the year for roadway and structures, new construction and new equipment. This is the largest yearly expenditure ever to be made by Frisco Lines.

The total roadway and structures appropriation is $9,402,478, of which $2,310,000 will be spent for 175 miles of new 110-pound rail to be laid in the Frisco's heavy traffic districts. A half million dollars has been appropriated for the separation of 22 grade crossings during 1930.

A total of $12,562,053 will be expended during 1930 for new equipment, including the purchase of 2500 box cars, 1000 coal cars, 300 automobile cars, 20 large Mikado type freight locomotives, 10 baggage and mail cars, 10 baggage cars and three diners.

3 TRAPPED MINERS RESCUED

Men Are Taken Out After 34 Hours at Cassville.

By the Associated Press.

MORGANTOWN, W. V., Dec. 8. (Sunday)—Three miners, trapped behind a fall of coal for 34 hours in the Brock mine of the Continental Coal Co. at Cassville, were rescued early this morning by fellow workmen. The miners, reported in good condition, except for hunger and cold, were brought to a hospital here.

The rescued miners were Sam Kratchen, L. Holt and J. Martindale, the latter two Negroes.

Former Prima Donna Dies

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—Mrs. Ida Brooks Hunt, a former prima donna in operettas and musical comedies, died yesterday in Brooklyn. She was the widow of Dr. G. Edwin Hunt, a surgeon of Indianapolis, Ind. She had a leading role in the "Chocolate Soldier" in 1909.

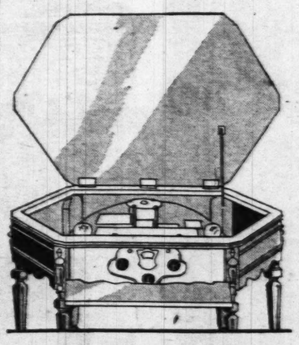
ATWATER KENT RADIO

Featuring the Kiel Golden-Voiced Table—A Masterful Achievement in Radio—With Screen Grid—and Dynamic Speaker



All parts and tubes are easily accessible without removing chassis. Simply raise the hinged top for servicing of inner parts.

As a piece of furniture, it lends itself to practical utility . . . and is a graceful example of the table maker's art . . . with all sides beautifully ornamented and finished. Top measures 24½x36 inches, and is 31 inches high.

Priced Complete $152 Easy Payments

THE advent of the Kiel Golden-Voiced Table, combined with Atwater Kent's latest Screen-Grid Radio, sets a new standard of perfection in Radio reproduction. Built with the exacting precision of the finest musical instrument, it produces a clarity of tone that is without precedent. Scientifically designed by the best acoustic engineers with all wood parts of proper thickness to prevent tone-distorting vibrations.

Something Entirely New in Radio Furniture

You'll be delighted with its neat installation. All wiring for aerial, ground and power connections are concealed in the table legs. There is no exposed wiring above the floor. Also wired for lamp connections, so it may be used as a reading table.

Officially Recommended by Atwater Kent

It took one of the largest Radio manufacturers in the world to produce an instrument of this type in as handsome a piece of furniture as the Kiel Table . . . at a price within convenient reach of the average income.

Order Yours Now- You Need Not Pay for It Until Next Year

A small down payment will secure delivery of this marvelous Golden-Voiced Radio to your home in time for Christmas and arrangements can be made to pay the balance by the month.

Unnecessary Exposure At Funerals

Cautious persons have always been chary about taking off their hats at funeral services during bad weather at the side of the grave. Heavy colds sometimes follow removing hats at funerals. McLAUGHLIN UNDERTAKERS of St. Louis are seeking to break down the custom of uncovering the head in inclement weather. Raise the hat and replace it is a sufficient mark of respect, and we shall have fewer illnesses and less mortality as a result of attending funerals.

ARABS COMPLETE THEIR VERSION OF PALESTINE RIOTS

Last Witnesses Heard by British Commission Seeking to Fix Responsibility for Outbreak.

By Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and the New York World.

Copyright, 1929, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos. (The New York World and Post-Dispatch.)

JERUSALEM, Dec. 7.—The Arabs yesterday completed presentation of their case before the British Commission seeking to establish the causes and responsibility for the rioting in Palestine last summer by calling their last witnesses.

The Zionists at the same time arranged to take in camera the testimony of two Arab leaders, Hashan Shouri, Mayor of Haifa, and Sheik Aswad Ihkeri, of Acre, in refutation of the Arabs' own case.

Among the witnesses before the commission yesterday was Aref El Aref, district officer of Beersheba, described by Sir Boyd Merriman, Zionist counsel, as a notorious Arab agitator. He admitted his presence in Hebron on Friday, Aug. 23, which, since last summer's disorders, has come to be referred to locally as "Bloody Friday;" but denied that he had incited his co-religionists to violence. He testified that he had seen Sheiks addressing crowds at the Mosques, burt had ben too far away even to hear what they were saying.

Aref is remembered in Palestine as a man who, together with the present Grand Mufti, was sentenced to jail for incitement to riot in 1920. He was not included in the general amnesty extended by former High Commissioner Sir Herbert Samuel to political offenders, but was late rpardoned. After being first a teacehr and later a journalist, Aref entered the Government service in October, 1920, since which time he has been often promoted. The witness said he could produce clippings from Jewish newspaper thanking him for his friendliness and justice in dealings with Jews.

Mohammed Raghed, sub-inspector of agriculture, was another Arab Government official to testify yesterday. He tried to show that Jewish agriculturists produce less than the Arabs, in spite of the improved methods of the latter. Th Jewish colonist, he said, is a successful horticulturist, but is unable to produce grain successfully, despite occupying the "fat plain," while the Arabs cultivate the shallow soil of the hillsides.

Sir Boyd Merriman produced, in rebuttal of his testimony, figures to show that the Jewish barley crop has sometimes been double that of the Arabs.

Auni Abdul Hadi, junior Arab counsel, put questions to Arab witnesses, tending to show that the transfer of land to the Jews and the increasing Arab population would, within 10 years, force many Arabs to emigrate.

Sir Boyd Merriman pointed out that the Jewish national fund gave the Arab settlers other land in return for that acquired from them, and compensation even before it was obliged to do so by law. The witness agreed that the Jewish settlers in Palestine take malaria-infested swamps, drain them and make them cultivateable and livable. The Jewish counsel also brought out, under cross-examination of Aunis who complains of the sale of land to the Jews, that he himself had acted in the latest important land transaction here, advising a mortgagee to sell his land and recover his investment in it. Auni replied that he brought the action on behalf of a client to recover money, not to sell the land.

The commission was told that there were only 84 Arab tenants on nearly 9000 acres recently bought by the Jewish National Fund.

Gospel Quartet Benefit Concert.

The Spirit of St. Louis Gospel Quartet of Negro singers will give a concert in the Coliseum, Dec. 19, for the benefit of a widows' and orphans' Christmas celebration. Since its organization in May the group has sung in a number of Missouri, Illinois and Kentucky cities. All the proceeds of their appearances go to Negro charities. The officers are: W. H. Hill, president; N. J. Patton, secretary; P. Watkins, treasurer, and Rev. J. S. Dunn, manager.

SMOKE LEAGUE PLANS TO PROLONG ITS EXISTENCE

Financed for Three Winters Ending This Season — Hopes to Make Funds Do for Another Year.

A change in the nature of the activities of the Citizens' Smoke Abatement League has been decided upon as a result of the passage a year ago of the new antismoke ordinance. The league, whose finances had been planned to cover three winters ending with the current season, now intends to prolong its life and to make its present funds serve for an additional winter.

The new leading purpose of the league will be to educate St. Louisans and their immediate neighbors to co-operate effectively with the city government in enforcing the new law. This ordinance, which was sponsored by the league to "put teeth in enforcement" of smoke prevention rules, has established the city as the active abatement agency. The city's powers to act against the smoke evil have been enlarged and through a small annual tax on boilers the city has sufficient funds for the necessary staff of inspectors.

More Education.

An intensive campaign to show the people how to combat smoke is projected by the league. The radio, newspaper advertisements, pamphlets and speakers will spread the message. These mediums will tell how to use smokeless fuels efficiently, how to install equipment that burns coal with the minimum of smoke and how minor changes in household heating plants may greatly reduce the volume of smoke. The greatest trouble in smoke abatement has been with domestic plants.

The first radio address will be over station KMOX by Sidney R. Baer, president of the league, at 9:30 p. m. Tuesday. Speakers will appear subsequently at meetings of various organizations.

Co-operation will be given the city by the league if it becomes necessary to prosecute incorrigible offenders. The law provides for padlocking of offending furnaces and boilers as an extreme measure. The league previously had devoted itself largely to making records of chimneys smoking excessively, and to making house-to-house educational visits. It still offers service to the public about changes in heating plants, at its office in the Arcade Building.

Task Half Done, Baer Says.

In an announcement yesterday Baer says:

"The task is now half done. Only through the combined efforts of the city government and the citizenry of St. Louis can the work be completed. Last winter saw a decrease in soot falling averaging approximately 50 per cent. It is obvious that if such strides could be made last year, increased funds and a mandatory smoke law, now in force, must bring far greater improvement in the future. The Citizens' Smoke Abatement League is anxious to help the city government execute its new trust and urges every St. Louisan to join this great and growing movement. When smoke is entirely eliminated, we shall have a cleaner and a more healthful city and our civic pride will be on the increase.

Study of Situation Goes On.

"Two years of work by the league has already resulted in a material reduction of the sootfall in this city. In those two years thousands of janitors and home owners have been instructed in proper firing methods and in reconstructing antiquated heating equipment. Accurate, scientific tests show that as a result of the campaign initiated by the league in March, 1927, the sootfall last winter was from 46 per cent to 60 per cent less than at the time the fight on smoke was begun.

"Only through active and unrelenting effort can the city government further reduce the sootfall in St. Louis, and only through the fullest co-operation of the citizenry with the city government can improvement in the situation be brought about. To secure such activity and co-operation the league is continuing its research into firing methods, smoke abatement devices and furnace equipment. It is continuing its study of atmospheric pollution and working towards the discovery of devices which will eliminate such pollution."

CAR CONDUCTOR FINED $200 FOR PUNCHING PASSENGER

Thomas Sadler Says He Paid Fare Upon Boarding Sarah Line Car.

William S. Merrell, a street car conductor, 3945 McRee avenue, was fined $200 in Police Court yesterday after Thomas Sadler, 61, 4339 Shaw avenue, had testified that Merrell punched him about the face on the platform of a Sarah street car while contending that he had not paid his fare.

Sadler said he boarded the car, southbound, at Manchester avenue, handed Merrell a transfer and remained on the rear platform. When he reached his destination, Shaw avenue, he said the conductor refused to open the door and struck him when he insisted he had paid. Sadler produced two witnesses to corroborate him. Counsel for the Public Service Co. appealed the fine.

66,195 ARRESTS MADE BY U. S. DRY AGENTS LAST YEAR

New York Has Largest Number, 8265; Kentucky Next; New Hampshire Lowest, 17.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—Federal prohibition officers arrested 66,195 persons during the fiscal year which ended last June 30 and assisted in the arrest of 11,156 others by state officers.

New York was the scene of the largest number of arrests by Government agents, a total of 8265. Prohibition Commissioner Doran reported today. Kentucky was second with 3963; Pennsylvania third with 3674, and Texas fourth with 3437. New Hampshire had the smallest number, 17, and Kansas the next smallest, 31.

With the high average of interest rates, the banks have made good money and their losses have been only moderate.

$170 TAKEN IN TWO HOLDUPS

East St. Louis Drug Store and Filling Station Robbed.

In a holdup of a drug store at 1601 St. Clair avenue, East St. Louis, six customers were herded behind the prescription counter, while Edward R. Chase, proprietor was forced to open the cash register by an armed robber who took $50, at 8:20 o'clock last night.

Ten minutes later a robber of the same description held up Edward D. O'Connell in his filling station at 901 St. Clair avenue, took $100 from the safe and $20 from the pocket of a Negro patron, then locked both men in the washroom.

R. SHAD BENNETT PERMITTED TO FORECLOSE ON PROPERTY

Man Under Indictment for Murder Conspiracy May Collect on Real Estate.

A decision which will permit R. Shad Bennett, St. Louis attorney, to foreclose on real estate owned by bankrupt King Meat Co., of West Frankfort, Ill., held by him as security for a $20,000 loan, was handed down by Federal Judge Wham in East St. Louis yesterday.

Bennett is under indictment in Murphysboro for conspiracy to murder Olen King to obtain the latter's $12,000 life insurance which is also security for the loan. Permission to use the policies to collect on the loan was withheld by the Court pending the clearing up of the firm's business.

The decision also permitted Bennett to foreclose on the firm's chattels to recover $975 in rentals due on the property leased to the company.

Bennett's foreclosure suit was filed just before creditors filed their bankruptcy petition. Besides King, the other defendants were Perry T. Vanwey and Marshall W. King.

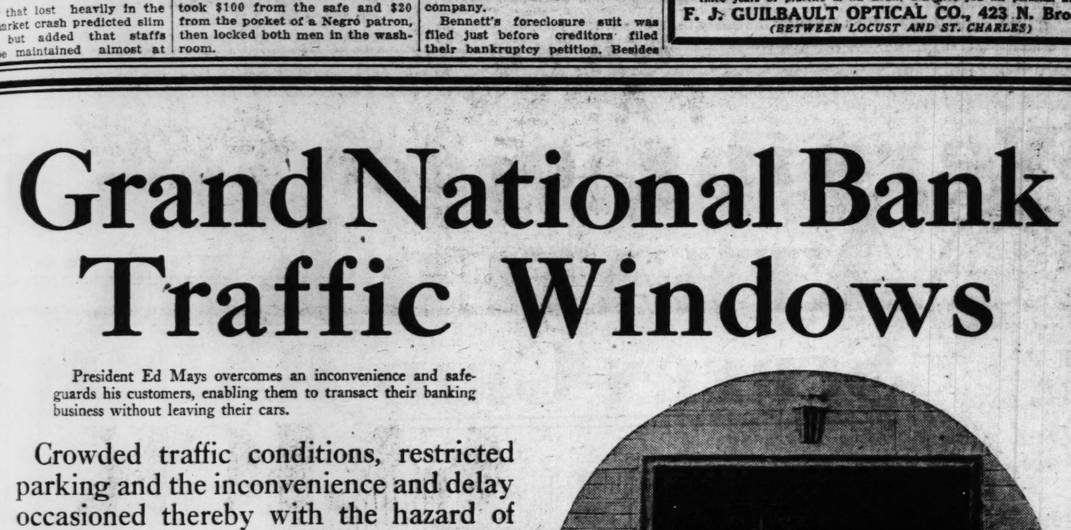
Grand National Bank Traffic Windows

President Ed Mays overcomes an inconvenience and safeguards his customers, enabling them to transact their banking business without leaving their cars.

Crowded traffic conditions, restricted parking and the inconvenience and delay occasioned thereby with the hazard of carrying funds between the bank and automobile, when one has to park two or three blocks away, inspired President Ed Mays to overcome this hazardous inconvenience for the customers of the Grand National Bank in the construction of the new home of this institution at 3617-19 Olive street.

Close-Up of Lady Customer at Grand National Bank Traffic Window



Traffic Windows of Bank on Automobile Driveway Extending from Grand to Spring

The traffic windows have frames of cast steel. The openings are enclosed with Duplate Bullet-Proof glass 1 1/8" in thickness, the outer layer being 1/4" in thickness, the core or center 3/4" in thickness, and the inside layer 1/8" in thickness. The glass is as transparent as ordinary plate glass, and will withstand the fire of four to five 45-caliber steel-jacketed bullets.

The combination speaking aperture and gun port shown in the center amplifies the voice. Immediately under the speaking aperture is the pass tray that permits of the passing of packages of moneys. This device is rather unique in that when it is open in front, it is closed in the back. The entire ensemble does not permit of a possible chance for the man behind to be intimidated with a gun or otherwise.

The bank's responsibility to its customers has been the first thought, as is evidenced by the adoption of the latest protection against surprise or holdup, consisting of Bullet-Proof glass and Bullet-Proof bronze devices.

As a further means of protection to the bank, its officers, employes, and customers, Mr. Mays will install Tear Gas equipment, surrounding the tellers' cages. This will make the Grand National Bank the best protected bank in the Middle West, and is in keeping with the bank's policy of protection and service to its many customers.

MRS. EDITH M'CORMICK COMPLETES LOVE SONG CYCLE

John D. Rockefeller's Daughter Composes Verses Another Woman Sets to Music.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 7.—The final composition of the "Love Song Cycle" written by Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick, with music by Mrs. Eleanor Everest Freer, was made public today. Its title is "Love". Mrs. McCormick is a daughter of John D. Rockefeller.

Previous numbers in the song cycle were "How Can We Know?" written in 1925 and "I Write Not to Thee, Dearest," written in 1927.

The words of Mrs. McCormick's latest poem follow:

Love is not a mendicant
Who goes from door to door,
And asks for food and shelter
Just to ask for more and more.

Love is not a tyrant
With all commanding tone
Who gives and gives and gives and gives again
Nor questions for his loan.

Love is not a watcher
Who's always on his guard
To catch the straying footsteps
And look for his reward.

Love is so evasive
To wishing child of man
That only God's great compass
Can trace where it has been.

STOCKHOLDERS' ANSWER IN INVENTOR'S $1,000,000 SUIT

Clarence H. Howard and Others of Commonwealth Co. Say A. F. Howe Received "Gifts."

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Dec. 7.—An answer to the suit of A. F. Howe of 6954 Cornell avenue, University City, Mo., for a share estimated at $1,000,000 in the profits of various inventions by him while an employe of the Commonwealth Steel Co. of Granite City was filed in Federal Court here today by the Stockholders' Committee of the company. It denies the charges.

The committee, consisting of Clarence H. Howard, Harry M. Flager and Harrison Hobiltzelle, is one of the groups of defendants in the suit, which was transferred here from Circuit Court at Edwardsville. In its answer the committee admits that the property of the Commonwealth Steel Co. has been turned over to the new General Steel Casting Corporation of Philadelphia for a consideration of $35,000,000. Howe's suit had sought to stop this sale until accounting had been made to him of profits derived from use of his patents, which he asserts have amounted to more than $4,000,000.

Howe charged that during 25 years' work with the company in various positions he received no compensation except his salary, but that Howard, president of the Commonwealth company, promised him pay for his patents. The committee's answer declares that Howe received, besides his regular salary, "gifts" aggregating thousands of dollars for "merit in his work," and that it had been understood his inventions were to be available to the company.

CAROLINE O'FALLON MILLER ESTATE LEFT TO HER FAMILY

The will of Mrs. Caroline O'Fallon Miller, who died in Paris, France, Nov. 11, was filed in Probate Court yesterday. She left $15,000 to her daughter, Mrs. H. H. Gatch, 1 Lenox place, to be spent for the pleasure of the latter's daughters, Caroline and Katherine Gatch.

One-third of the residue of the estate goes to her husband, Col. Joseph Gilman Miller, while the remainder was left in trust of the husband and the St. Louis Union Trust Co., with directions to pay the income in equal parts to Mrs. Gatch and John O'Fallon Miller, a son. As the son died Nov. 26 from a heart attack caused by an overdose of a sleeping potion, his interest, under the terms of the will, reverts to the other heirs.

No estimate of the value of the estate was made. Mrs. Miller set forth in the will that the trust created for her son was in accordance with his own request. He was a former art student in St. Louis and New York but had lived for the last two years in Paris where his mother was visiting when she died.

He returned to this country with her body and attended her funeral the day before his own death.

FOUR STATES PROTEST AGAINST BOULDER DAM POWER RATE

Charge Secretary Wilbur's Decision Discriminates in Favor of California.

By the Associated Press.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Dec. 7.—The Salt Lake Tribune will say tomorrow that the four upper Colorado River basin states—Utah, Colorado, New Mexico and Wyoming—have united in a formal protest against power and water storage rates at Boulder Dam, as proposed by Secretary of the Interior Wilbur.

The Tribune will say further that the contention of the complainants is that in fixing a power rate below the competitive production cost Wilbur is favoring Southern California and making it impossible for the upper basin states to profit by the Boulder Dam project.

276 Births, 215 Deaths in Week.

There were 276 births and 215 deaths reported in St. Louis last week. Sixty-five persons died of organic heart disease, 23 of cancer, 21 of Bright's disease, 16 of pneumonia, eight of tuberculosis, seven of apoplexy, seven of diabetes, and six of digestive troubles. There were five suicides, four homicides and 15 accidental deaths, two of which were caused by automobiles.

A. F. L. LEADERS ATTEND J. P. NOONAN'S FUNERAL

Electrical Workers' International President Buried in Calvary Cemetery.

Funeral services for James P. Noonan, a vice president of the American Federation of Labor and president of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, were held at the New Cathedral yesterday with President William Green of the American Federation and other prominent labor leaders as pallbearers. Burial was in Calvary Cemetery.

The pallbearers, in addition to Green, were: John Coefield, a vice president of the A. F. of L.; Frank Morrison, secretary of the organization; Martin Ryan, treasurer of the Federation; William J. McSorley, president of the Building Trades Department; William J. Spencer, secretary of the Building Trades Department; James O'Connell, president of the Metal Trades Department of the A. F. of L., and Bert Jewell, head of the Railway Employes Department.

Officers of the Building Trades Council and the Central Trades and Labor Union, and representatives of the St. Louis locals attended the services.

Mr. Noonan, who was 55 years old, was burned to death in his Washington apartment early Wednesday.

T. A. T. ANNOUNCES FARE CUT

Special Week-End Rates Also Are Planned.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 7.—Officers of the Transcontinental Air Transport here today announced that fares on the Transcontinental air-rail route would be reduced approximately 25 per cent, effective Dec. 15. The reduction of the fares will apply on lines both east and west of Kansas City.

They also announced that special week-end round trip rates, effective the same date, will be announced soon. The Western Air Express air line from Kansas City to Los Angeles recently reduced its rates.

THREE YOUTHS IDENTIFIED IN $261 THEATER ROBBERY

One Confessed, Implicating Others; Two Accused in Guaranty Motor Theft.

Three young men arrested yesterday were identified as the robbers who took $261 from the Manchester Theater, 4249 Manchester avenue, on Sept. 22. Two of them were also identified as the men who robbed the Guaranty Motor Co., 2936 Locust street, of $600 on Nov. 18.

The youth, who described himself as Richard Walker, 19 years old, 4467 Delmar boulevard, admitted the robberies, according to police, and implicated the other two men. In searching the Delmar boulevard address, detectives found two sawed-off shotguns and several loaded pistols.

Hill Must Pay White $850 Monthly.

LIVINGSTON, Mont., Dec. 7.—Walter J. Hill, youngest son of the late James J. Hill, pioneer railroad builder, has been ordered by District Judge B. E. Berg to pay his wife, Mildred Richardson Hill, $850 a month pending determination of her suit for divorce. He was ordered to pay also $2000 to the clerk of court toward her attorney fees and an additional $1000 to the court official toward his wife's expenses in prosecuting the action.

STRAITJACKET OUSTED AT CITY SANITARIUM

Only 62 of 3260 Patients Under Restraint—Credit Given to Hydrotherapy.

Hydrotherapy has abolished the straightjacket at City Sanitarium, physicians related in the scientific session of superintendents of State hospitals, which was held there Friday by invitation of city officials.

Not only the straightjacket, but the "maniacal building" was abolished by the effectiveness of the soothing water treatment, commented Dr. M. A. Bliss, specialist in mental diseases and member of the Eleemosynary Board. He said:

"It was not only called the 'maniacal building,' but the words were carved in stone over the entrance," he related. The place was so noisy that physicians and attendants could scarcely make themselves heard. Within three weeks after hydrotherapy was inaugurated the maniacal division was so transformed that the Neurological Society met in the building free of disturbance."

About ten years ago, it was explained, the city sent a physician to Ward Island to study the hydrotherpy. Later a woman physician taught it to attendants here whose expertness was demonstrated to the visiting superintendents. They were impressed with the report that now only 66 of 3260 patients in the City Sanitarium were under any form of restraint.

Explains Treatment.

Dr. L. H. Kohler, assistant superintendent of the sanitarium, explained two current methods of hydrotherapy and took occasion to puncture some popular fallacies on the physical effects of water and the nature of the skin. The treatment is not one for even a physician to attempt, he remarked, "before he is familiar with the patient's condition as revealed by physical and laboratory findings."

"While a correctly applied wet pack does limit the movements of the patient," he emphasized, "it should never be prescribed as a restraint, punishment or substitute for seclusion. It should be given for its therapeutic effect only."

"With most of the skin surrounded by water in the 'continuous bath' method, insensible perspiration is suspended and the fluid usually eliminated by that means accumulates in the skin. The cutaneous nerve endings thus become supersaturated. This absorption of uneliminated fluid lessens nerve sensibility. As a result, the nerve centers are at rest and are given a chance to accumulate a store of nutrition and energy. Consequently delirium, agitation, excitement and motor activity are relieved and sleep is induced."

Sleep-Inducing Effects.

Elimination of toxins was considered a factor in the relief obtained by the other method, that of a wet sheet pack under foolen blankets.

"The first effect of contact with the cold, damp sheet is an irritation to the cutaneous nerves and narrowing of the cutaneous bloodvessels," he said. "As soon as 'the first shock is over'—it lasts one to five minutes and sometimes produces shivering—these vessels begin to dilate and the system makes an effort to equalize the temperature between the skin and the sheet.

"We often find a patient slumbering as soon as the temperature is equalized. Warmth is evolved by the reactive process, which dilates the cutaneous vessels and thus furthers cerebral anemia conducive to sleep."

TESTIFIES FORMER MEDICAL EXAMINER WROTE HIS ANSWERS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Dec. 7.—Documents purporting to be Col. W. H. H. Miller's own answers to questions written for an applicant taking the state examination for a physician's license in Illinois were on record today as evidence in Miller's trial for alleged operation of a "diploma mill."

Eight pages of writing were entered as exhibits against Col. Miller, former head of the State Department of Education and registration.

The answers were written for Rudolph Balmeyer, the latter testified, when he found that he could not answer some of the questions in his examination for a license.

The handwriting was identified as that of Col. Miller by J. Fordyce Wood, handwriting expert.

MRS. IDA KOLLMEIER ESTATE IS INVENTORIED AT $104,850

The estate of Mrs. Ida Kollmeier, 6310 Kingsbury avenue, University City, who died Oct. 21, is listed at $104,850.48 in an inventory filed in Probate Court at Clayton yesterday. Stocks and bonds comprise the bulk of the estate in amounts of $55,922 and $42,250, respectively. Stocks include $46,029 in the Independent Packing Co., of which Mrs. Kollmeier's father, Henry Bischoff, was one of the founders.

In her will, which also was filed recently, Mrs. Kollmeier bequeathed a house and lot at 4551 Arco avenue to her husband, Edward G. Kollmeier. The remainder of the estate was divided in four equal parts, three of which were left to her three daughters. The fourth part was left to a son-in-law, Herbert Hetzler, to be held in trust for her husband with the provision that income from it be applied to his maintenance.

FAKE DRY AGENTS ROB PICKLE MAKER OF $1900

Three Men Kidnap 12-Year-Old Son of Granite City Man After Holdup.

Three armed men, posing as prohibition agents, entered the pickled pepper establishment of Christ Koless, 926 Pacific avenue, Granite City, at 5:20 a. m. yesterday, served a spurious warrant and then robbed Koless of $1900.

Kidnaping his 12-year-old son, Vasil, the robbers escaped in an automobile. The boy was thrown from the car in Madison and suffered lacerations and bruises.

Koless formerly conducted a saloon. After prohibition he entered the pickled pepper business and built up a nationwide trade, dealing chiefly with Macedonians and Bulgarians. He is a Macedonian.

It is his custom to keep a large amount of cash on Saturdays to cash pay checks of customers.

A $130 payroll was taken from Arnold A. Thurnau, president of the Thurnau Grain and Feed Co., by three armed Negroes who held him up at the company's warehouse, 4001 Duncan avenue, at 5:30 o'clock last night.

Three employes had been paid and Thurnau, who was alone, was waiting for other workers.

Kansas City Girl University Queen.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Dec. 7.—Miss Marguerite Attebury of Kansas City was crowned arts and science queen of the University of Missouri here tonight at a dance which closed the institution's observance of Arts and Science week. The dance followed a banquet at which Dr. Herman G. James, president of the University of South Dakota, spoke.

CHICAGO SOCIETY MATRON TAKES JOB AS MANNEQUIN

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 7.—The billboards invited the movie-going public today: "See Mrs. Charles M. Fargo wear 'The Gown of Tomorrow.'"

Tnd the public learned that the young society matron was adding to her purse by appearing at a downtown theater as the leading mannequin in a "velvet fashion revue." A graduate of junior and amateur theatricals, it was her debut as a professional before the footlights.

Wife of an officer of the Great Lakes Aircraft Co. and daughter of the Francis R. Harts of Beacon street, Boston, Mrs. Fargo confirmed her billboard announcements today but was quick to explain her duties in a four weeks' contract.

"I am not a chorus girl," she said. "I am the leading figure of a fashion revue."

SIR CHARLES MONRO, BRITISH GENERAL, DIES

Won Praise for Saving His Troops at Gallipoli During World War.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 7. — Gen. Sir Charles Monro, 69 years old, famous British soldier who won wide praise for his successful withdrawal of British and Anzac forces from the Gallipoli Peninsula during the World War, died today.

Sir Charles joined the army in 1879 and saw service at Malakand and later was on the staff in South Africa. He was in command of the second division in the first fighting in 1914 and later had command of the First Army Corps.

In October, 1915, he was appointed to take over the command of the Mediterranean Expeditionary Force and to determine whether the Gallipoli campaign should be continued. He decided on evacuation of the Peninsula and succeeded in withdrawing his forces from a most dangerous position with slight losses. It had been feared that the troops would be wiped out during the evacuation, but the German and Turkish commanders were taken completely by surprise.

Sir Charles was to have succeeded Marshal Haig in command of the First Army, but in October, 1916, was sent to India, where he remained as Commander-in-Chief until 1920. He was Governor and Commander-in-Chief at Gibraltar from 1923 until 1928.

MIAMI HEAT AIDS FLORIDA TO WIN OVER OREGON, 20-6

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 7.—Three wing-footed University of Florida backfield men romped through the University of Oregon Webfoots for a 20 to 6 victory in the intersectional football game at Madison Square Garden's winter sports stadium here today.

Quarterback Clyde Crabtree led the march toward a Florida victory over the sweltering Oregonians with an 80-yard dash down the gridiron in the second quarter for the first touchdown of the game. The crowd of 17,000 that basked in the glaring sunlight had barely quieted their clamor over Crabtree's feat when Ed Sauls, Gator halfback, thrust his way through the Oregon line for 38 yards and another counter.

Red McEwen, another halfback, accounted for the third Florida score in the third period when he skirted right end for the 10-yard distance to the Oregon goal.

The Oregon team, generally jerseyless in the last half because of the heat, was outclassed during the first half, but took a brace in the latter part of the third quarter that ended with their one touchdown four minutes before the game ended. The score came on a 40-yard pass, Shearer to Walter Brown.

The game was developed around straight football in almost every instance, with but one forward pass completed, despite nine attempts by Oregon and one by Florida.

Al Browne, Oregon halfback, was injured in the game and taken to a local hospital.

John Londahl, piloting the Oregon team, led the third quarter drive of the Northwesterners. He had previously shaken off Florida tackles for a 62-yard gain on the first play of the game.

Florida gained a total of 293 yards as compared to the 103 of Oregon, and made 11 first downs against Oregon's four.

Oregon was penalized but once, for being off side. Florida's three penalties included one of 25 yards for blocking and holding.

Today's game dedicated the huge wooden stadium erected here by Madison Square Garden Corporation for winter sporting events.

BILLIKENS WIN OPENING CAGE GAME, 24 TO 14

By Glen McDonald

The St. Louis University basketball team opened its cage season last night by defeating the Southern Illinois Normal College quintet before the largest first night crowd in several seasons. A crowd of 2300 persons saw the Billikens come back strong in the second half to score an easy victory after the visitors from Carbondale, Ill., had put up a great battle in the first period. The final score was 24 to 14.

The Billikens were not at their best during the first half and in several instances did not look like a veteran outfit. White, the visitors' lanky starting center, made the game a tough proposition for Les Roberts, Coach Mike Nyikos' only inexperienced starter.

The Royal Blue quintet led the visitors by a single field goal at the intermission, but got going the beginning of the second half and Strong and Oldfield ran up a substantial lead while the defense checked the Teachers' attack with one field goal until the closing minutes of the game.

The Bills showed more than the Teachers that it was their opening game. Their passes were wild and their shooting was inaccurate. Ham Strong and Barney Oldfield were the only two members of the local quintet who played with any degree of consistency. Strong was the leading scorer of the contest with 10 points, while Captain Wilson, the visitors' veteran guard, was runner-up with 8 points.

Wilson received the ball on the opening tipoff of the second half and tied the score at 10-10 but the visitors' rush stopped there for Strong scored a pair of field goals, Oldfield dropped in a free throw and Anderson added another to make the score 16-10. With a comfortable lead, the Billikens took their time and waited for the Normalites to come out of their zone defense.

Slugger, Gaining Last National League Award, Only One Named Twice

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—Rogers Hornsby, slugging second baseman of the pennant winning Chicago Cubs, has been voted the National League's "most valuable player" for 1929.

The announcement of his selection by the vote of a baseball writers' committee, of which James Crusinberry of Chicago was chairman, came from the National League offices today. It is the sixth and last official award by the league, carrying with it a bronze medal and cash prize of $1000.

Hornsby takes the honor for the second time and is the only player to repeat in either major circuit in this contest, which, as a result of criticism of the selections, has now been abandoned by both the American and National leagues. While with the Cardinals in 1925, Hornsby won the award for the first time. He has been a prominent contender every year under the National League regulations which did not, like the American League, bar former winners.

Helped Cubs Win Pennant.

Although his work was a big disappointment in the world's series, Hornsby's batting and all-round play was considered by most of the writers to have played a big part in the pennant victory of the Cubs.

Nevertheless, Hornsby was declared the winner only after a close contest with Frank (Lefty) O'Doul of the Phillies, who won the league batting championship with a mark of .400.

Out of a possible maximum of 80 votes, Hornsby polled 60 and O'Doul 54. Each of eight writers named 10 players in the order of value. Hornsby was placed first on three lists, second on two, fourth on one and sixth on another. He was passed up entirely by one expert. O'Doul was accorded two first places, two thirds, one fourth and one sixth and one seventh.

Hornsby's vote was the lowest of any winner in the six official National League contests, Dazzy Vance led with 74 in 1924, Hornsby with 73 in 1925, Bob O'Farrell with 79 in 1926, Paul Waner with 72 in 1927 and Jim Bottomley with 76 in 1928.

Hornsby Has .365 Batting Average for 15 Years.

Hornsby, born 33 years ago at Winters, Tex., has completed 15 years of major league play with a life-time batting mark of .365, surpassed only by Ty Cobb. The Rajah's stormy career has seen him as star second baseman of the St. Louis Cardinals, manager of a world's championship club in 1926, captain of the New York Giants in 1927, manager of the Boston Braves in 1928 and this year second baseman of another pennant winner, the Chicago Cubs. He is the highest salaried as well as "most valuable" player in the older circuit.

Hornsby holds a record of averaging more than .400 at bat for five successive years, 1921 to 1925, inclusive. He has been the league batting champion seven times and except for one year, 1926, when he suffered an injury to his back, always was a contender for batting honors.

POLL OF VOTES IN "MOST VALUABLE PLAYER" CONTEST

THE poll of votes in the National League's sixth and last "most valuable player" award follows:

Rogers Hornsby, Chicago	60
Frank O'Doul, Philadelphia	54
Bill Terry, New York	48
Burleigh Grimes, Pittsburg	35
Lloyd Waner, Pittsburg	30
Red Lucas, Cincinnati	29

Honor list—Root, Cuyler and English, Chicago; Hafey and Bottomley, St. Louis; Thompson, Philadelphia; Sukeforth, Cincinnati; Lindstrom and Hubbell, New York; Paul Waner, Pittsburg.

DAVIS-ELKINS DEFEATED BY OKLAHOMA CITY

By the Associated Press.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Dec. 7.—Davis-Elkins College, previously undefeated in 11 starts, suffered its first football loss of the season here today at the hands of a fighting band of Oklahoma City University players, 27 to 14.

The Gold Bugs outplayed the West Virginians in every department of the game and before the contest was 10 minutes old had piled up a lead the visitors were unable to overcome.

Davis-Elkins fought desperately to overcome a 13 to 0 lead piled up in the first few minutes of the game but almost every advance they made was met by a stubborn defense that bewildered the West Virginians. Instead they saw the lead mount as Ted Hand, hard-hitting Oklahoma City halfback, and Joe Zinn, his running mate, plunged at the Davis-Elkins line for gains ranging from one to 43 yards. The 43-yard run was made by Hand and was good for the second Oklahoma City touchdown.

Ringle, fullback, and Warren, halfback, did most of the line plunging for the visitors but the

LAYTON WINS FROM COCHRAN, 600-530, IN 3-CUSHION PLAY

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—Splitting even in the last two blocks, Johnny Layton of St. Louis defeated Welker Cochran of Hollywood, in a 600-point three-cushion billiards match completed here tonight. The score was: Layton, 600; Cochran, 530.

Cochran, former holder of the world's 18.2 balkline crown, won the afternoon block, 72 to 50 in 62 innings. Each had a high run of six. Tonight Layton won by 50 to 24, compiling another high run of six to five for the Hollywood star.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 7.—Leo Diegel of Agua Caliente, Mexico, won the Professional Golfers' Association national championship for a second successive year when he defeated Johnny Farrell of New York today, 6 and 4.

Some 4000 persons who trailed the match today saw, not so much an exhibition of great golf, but rather a closing rally by the champion that was aided largely by two unexpected "breaks." One up going into the twenty-seventh, Diegel added that hole when his ball was knocked into the cup by Farrell's putt.

The crowd hardly had recovered from its surprise when the same incident occurred on the next hole. As on the preceding green, Diegel laid his slender rival at half stymie. Each time Farrell tried to shave past and each time failed. His ball propelled Diegel's into the cup for unlooked-for wins.

"I'm Lucky," Says Diegel.

After the match had ended and Diegel was being presented with the champion's cup, medal and $1000 check, he said:

"I'm just a very lucky boy. Johnny putted for me a couple of times and I guess that won the match."

The first round was an unexciting affair and produced some of the poorest golf of the tournament, but the gallery thrilled to several brilliant recovery shots and a few long putts whose perfect execution gave Farrell a new lease on life and enabled him to stop for lunch with a 1 up lead.

After the first two holes were halved, Diegel captured the third to take a 1-up lead. He won the next three in a row and it appeared that Farrell was in for a first-class trimming.

Farrell in Comeback.

The New York youth steadied to win back holes 7, 8 and 9, which left him 1 down at the turn. On the eighth, a great out from a trap put Farrell's ball less than a foot from the pin, while on the ninth he sank a 30-foot putt for the win.

Diegel won the eleventh to go 2 up, but lost the next hole when Farrell uncorked a sparkling niblick shot that set his ball two feet from the cup. The next four holes were halved. Farrell squared the match on the seventeenth when his 40-foot putt curled into the hole for a birdie 3. Diegel had the ball on the eighteenth, reaching the rough twice, and finally missed a 3½-foot putt for a half. Farrell dropped his for a 5 and went 1 up.

Diegel Regains Lead.

After the rather loose exhibition in the morning, Diegel got down to business in the afternoon. He won the nineteenth with a birdie 3 to square the match. The next two holes were halved and Diegel won the twenty-second with a birdie 4. Farrell evened the count again on the twenty-third, but went down on the next green. A bad tee shot, pulled into the rough, and a strong chip shot that overran the green, lost the hole for Farrell. It was the turning point in the fortunes of the two contenders. Diegel kept on, adding to his

Stribling Is Winner; Carnera Disqualified For Blow After Bell

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Dec. 7.—William L. (Young) Stribling, Macon, Ga., heavyweight, won on a foul in the seventh round of his return match with Primo Carnera, six feet ten inch Venetian carpenter, here tonight. Carnera, who recently won on a foul from Stribling at London, was disqualified for hitting the Georgian after the bell ending the seventh round had sounded.

It was a disappointing ending to a fight in which Stribling found the big carpenter no set-up to be brushed aside when he pleased. Carnera went down for a short count in the sixth round, but otherwise just about held his own with his American rival whom he outweighed by some 85 pounds.

Stribling easily outboxed his giant opponent in the first two rounds, but his blows did not seem to worry Carnera. At the start of the third, the Italian tried to rush Stribling, but the American evaded most of his blows and returned sharp lefts to the head and stomach. Just as the round ended

Dempsey Refused $2500.

HOPING to put over his recent fight show in a big way, Brooklyn Tommy Sullivan, matchmaker for the Stockham Post, engaged Jack Dempsey as referee of the main event. The house was a flop; but after the show a check for $2500 (Dempsey's contract price) was made out to Jack.

Dempsey took the check, but tore it up.

"You boys lost money on the show—I don't want any pay," Jack explained.

This was not a gesture. It was typically Dempsey. It is one of many things that account for the former champion's popularity.

Then and Now.

POPULARITY is relative. Today we think of Dempsey as the most popular fighter of all time. But listen to Jim Corbett, who, as he lounged in his dressing room at the St. Louis Theater discoursed to a Post-Dispatch reporter about this self-same subject.

"Dempsey is a fine fellow and is popular, but not to the degree that some of our ring champions of the past have been," observed the man who beat the "unbeatable" John L. Sullivan. "I think Sullivan was, without doubt, the most idolized fighter of any day.

"Mobs followed him wherever he went—and they were not made up of motion picture men, photographers, reporters and personal henchmen. They were really worshipers. They were nutty about him.

"I have no illusions about my own personal or ring popularity. It never compared with Sullivan's. But I can remember that in Boston and other cities where I was arriving the station neighborhood would be jammed for blocks around and the police sometimes called out to handle the situation. People hung out of the windows along the railroad yards as the train pulled in. It wasn't curiosity that the crowds felt, in those days—they were for you, heart and soul."

DECISION IS UNANIMOUS; RELATIONS TO END JAN. 1

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 7.—The University of Iowa today was definitely barred from Western Conference athletic competition, beginning Jan. 1, 1930.

After 14 hours of wrangling, in secret session, the Conference Faculty Committee turned down the Hawkeye petition for reinstatement to good standing and voted to concur in its action of last May by severing all athletic relations with the institution.

The decision, in effect, makes the Big Ten become the "Big Nine."

In a resolution adopted by the committee, it was announced the decision was unanimous, which clearly indicates Iowa did not vote. The committee expressed as its reason for refusing to restore Iowa to good standing was that the reform within the institution's athletic department had not been sufficiently complete.

Iowa Can Appeal Again.

No official explanation was made, but it was understood the conference had expected Iowa to disqualify for future athletic competition such star athletes as had been benefited by various "slush funds" or means of subsidy which had been admitted to exist by Iowa officials.

The Faculty Committee expressed the hope that Iowa, at some future date, might find itself in a position to renew its petition for reinstatement to good standing, thus leaving the door open for the Hawkeyes to make another appeal. The committee usually holds meetings twice a year, one in December and one in May, but may call a special meeting should Iowa decide to make another appeal.

Text of Resolution.

The committee, in its resolution, said:

"Whereas, at its May, 1929, meeting a resolution was adopted by the conference to the effect that beginning with Jan. 1, 1930, athletic relationships with the State University of Iowa shall be discontinued, and

"Whereas, Iowa has now petitioned for the rescission of the May resolution, and

"Whereas, the faculty intercollegiate conference, while definitely of the opinion that Iowa has made earnest and definite steps to correct the evils which led to the May action, are nevertheless of the opinion that there are steps remaining to be taken.

"Now therefore be it Resolved, that the petition of the State University of Iowa for the present be denied.

"It is to be observed that the adoption of the above resolution does not mean that Iowa ceases to be a member of the conference on Jan. 1, 1930. Nor does it mean that Iowa is then suspended. The action means that the resolution of May, 1929, under general regulation VII. of the conference, severing athletic relations with Iowa, effective on Jan. 1, 1930, becomes operative on that date.

"It is the earnest hope of the conference that Iowa may find itself in position in the near future to renew its petition."

The nine faculty committee members, who voted, were Professors Frederic Woodward, Chicago; O. F. Long, Northwestern; J. F. A. Pyrge, Wisconsin; James Paige, Minnesota; A. C. Callen, Illinois; William Marshall, Purdue; Ralph Aigler, Michigan; Thomas E. French, Ohio State, and W. J. Moenkhaus, Indiana. Pro. Marshall was chairman.

Iowa Representative Surprised

Dean C. C. Williams, newly appointed chairman of the Iowa Athletic Council who presented the petition, and E. H. Lauer, Iowa director of athletics, were disappointed and dismayed by their failure to convince the committee that Iowa had "cleaned house," eliminating proselyting, subsidization of athletes, undue alumni control, the existence of slush funds and other evils which precipitated the committee's action last May.

Both Dean Williams and Lauer

GEORGIA UNIVERSITY PROVES TOO STRONG FOR TECH AND WINS, 12-6

35-YARD DASH AFTER BLOCKED KICK PROVIDES VICTORY MARGIN

By the Associated Press.

ATHENS, Ga., Dec. 7.—Capitalizing the breaks and successfully subduing Georgia Tech's backfield aces, Thomason and Mizell, the University of Georgia today won the twenty-fifth gridiron meeting of the two institutions by a score of 12 to 6.

Scoring early in the first period on a fourth down pass from Chandler to Maffett, the Bulldogs held their edge until midway of the third period when Holt, substitute for Watkins, recovered Chandler's blocked kick behind the goal line.

Georgia's final touchdown and margin of victory also came as a result of a blocked kick in the final quarter. Bryant, substitute for Rose, crashed through the Georgia Tech forward wall to block Mizell's punt. The ball shot far up into the air but Bryant was under it when it came down and scampered some 40 yards for the score.

A drizzling rain began in the first period, making the ball and field slippery.

Running true to the form of previous meetings between the rival Georgia schools, the contest was spirited and hard fought throughout.

Mizell and Stumpy Thomason, playing their last game of collegiate football, gained practically all the ground the Yellow Jackets were able to cover, but the hard charging Red and Black line had them effectively blanketed throughout.

About 20,000 saw the game.

Lineup and summary:

ALFANO ON FIGHT CARD TOMORROW NIGHT AT HANNIBAL

Ray Alfano of East St. Louis will oppose Jackie Mason of Miami, Fla., in the 10-round feature bout of a card scheduled for tomorrow night at Hannibal, Mo. Alfano and Mason both won recent bouts at Hannibal. They will weigh 128 pounds.

Frank Kroll of St. Louis will appear in the semifinal, an eight-round battle at 147 pounds, against Austin Behymer of Hannibal.

Roy Jamieson and Buck Krause will oppose each other in another bout of six rounds, at 165 pounds, and Matchmaker George Mullen plans to have a fourth bout as a curtain-raiser.

Harry Cook of St. Louis will referee.

INDIANS SELL TAVENER TO FORT WORTH CLUB

CLEVELAND, O., Dec. 7. — Jackie Tavener, Cleveland Indian shortstop, has been sold to Fort Worth, Tex., William G. Evans, the Indians' general manager, announced late today. Evans did not announce the terms.

Tavener, with Ken Holloway, came to Cleveland from the Detroit Tigers last season in the George Uhle deal. He had a poor season and late in the campaign was replaced as a regular by Ray Gardner.

Vashon Defeats Sumner, 13-6, in Negro Title Game

Vashon defeated Sumner High School, 13 to 6, yesterday afternoon at the Public Schools Stadium, for the championship of the Negro High Schools of St. Louis. The attendance, estimated at 3000, was held down by the inclement weather.

The winners scored in the opening period when Campbell passed 20 yards to Blocker for a touchdown. Blocker plunged through center for the extra point.

Sumner rushed the ball to the two-yard line in the second quarter, from where Pogue went over on an end-around play. The winners made sure of victory at the start of the second half on Foster's touchdown.

Vashon out-weighed Sumner by 10 pounds per man.

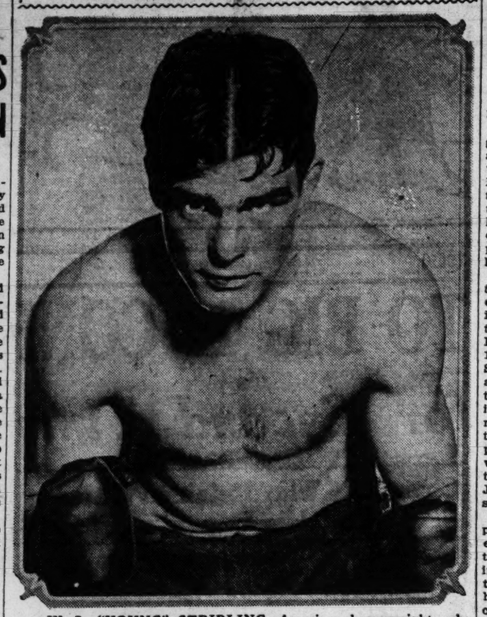
Wins on a Foul



W. L. "YOUNG" STRIBLING, American heavyweight, who won from Primo Carnera of Italy on a foul in their bout last night in Paris. Recently, in a match in London, Carnera won on a foul in the fourth round after Stribling had gained a point advantage over his opponent.

IOWA DENIED RE-INSTATEMENT TO THE BIG TEN

said that until they returned to Iowa City to discuss the situation with President Walter Jessup they could make no definite statement as to what Iowa's future relations with the conference might be or whether another petition would be made.

"What is Iowa going to do now?" Lauer was asked.

"Well, for the immediate future, it means a lot of hard work," he replied. "It will be a hard winter trying to get things straightened around."

Lauer said Iowa had anticipated immediate restoration.

"In fact," he said, "we were so confident of it we did not make any plans for unfavorable eventualities. The verdict went against us primarily because we did not disqualify those players whom the Western Conference aimed at originally. In other words everything revolved on eligibility rather than on the slush fund, recruiting, proselyting and that sort of thing."

When the decision was reached, the faculty committee members dispersed quickly, refusing to make any comment on their resolution.

"We have nothing to say; the statement speaks for itself," they chorused.

After the decision was announced, coaches of all sports in the conference plunged into the task of framing schedules for 1930 with Iowa out of the picture.

The nine football coaches convened to draft their schedules for next fall, six big games going into the discard as a result of Iowa's rejection. The 1930 gridiron opponents for Iowa were to have been Chicago, Illinois, Michigan, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Purdue.

Iowa Working Out Schedule.

While Burt Ingwersen, Iowa's football coach, declined to make any statement, it is understood he had partially completed a tentative football schedule for next year, anticipating an adverse decision from the faculty committee. Overtures are understood to have been made for games with Notre Dame, Southern California, Pittsburg, Nebraska and other important teams.

While they did not vote, all athletic directors of the conference attended today's meeting and took a prominent part in the cross-examination of Professors Williams and Lauer. Chief among them were Amos Alonzo Stagg, Chicago; Fielding H. Yost of Michigan and George Huff of Illinois. As they emerged from the meeting most of them were outwardly cheery, although Stagg seemed weary of the long-drawn debate.

Iowa's Statement.

Iowa was denied reinstatement because it refused to dismiss George Baesnahan, track coach; several athletes ineligible under the classification of improper financial aid, and because it has not materially changed the personnel of its athletic governing board. Iowa Director of Athletics Lauer said tonight.

"Iowa did not do these things for the reason that it was not willing to sell its soul to gain the world," Lauer said in a statement, which was so bitter that it indicated Iowa might never again seek reinstatement.

"At the June meeting, the chairman of the Faculty Conference Committee quoted a scriptural passage to Iowa's representation," Lauer's statement read. "The passage was apt and had to do with the necessity of good work as a sign of repentance. Iowa took this seriously and good work has been done. It is now Iowa's turn at scriptural citations. 'What does it profit a man though he gain the whole world if he loses his soul?'

"Iowa lost only the thing it was asking for. As revealed to me in the conference, the reasons for continuing the sentence against Iowa were: It had not materially changed the personnel of its athletic governing board; it had not dismissed Coach Bresnahan from his position as track coach; it had not declared any athletes ineligible under the classification of improper financial aid.' Iowa did not do these things for the reason that it was not willing to 'sell its soul in order to gain the world.'"

Big Six Will Investigate.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Dec. 7.—A fact finding committee to investigate rumors of alleged subsidization of athletes in the Six Six conference will be formed, it was announced tonight by Herb G. Gish, athletic director of the University of Nebraska.

Gish, speaking for athletics directors, coaches and faculty representatives of the conference, said it was voted this morning to form the committee, but no announcement of the decision was made at that time at the request of those in attendance.

Tonight the group decided it was advisable to announce the action, Gish explained.

Representatives from each school will conduct the investigation for their own institution, Gish said.

A questionnaire, to be prepared by T. N. Metcalf, athletic director of Iowa State and secretary of the conference and Dean S. W. Beyer, also of Iowa State, will be mailed to each school.

Athletes will be questioned as to their work outside of school hours, who employs them and what wages they receive.

Rumors that football athletes were being given financial aid because of their gridiron ability caused Big Six officials to decide to go to the bottom of the matter.

Perhaps the first rumors centered around Jim Bausch, sophomore fullback at the University of Kansas. University of Kansas officials denied he was being paid but admitted he received $75 a month as a salesman for an insurance company for whom he worked in his off hours.

The questionnaires will be mailed to member schools, who will form the committee, so the investigation can begin shortly after the Christmas holidays and the reports be in the hands of the conference at the May meeting.

STRIBLING IS WINNER, CARNERA DISQUALIFIED FOR HITTING FOUL BLOW

Carnera landed sharply on the side of Strib's head.

Carnera tried another rush to start the fourth round but was sent back to the ropes by the hardest blow Stribling landed during the fight.

Stribling landed a straight left on Carnera's jaw to open the fifth round. The wallop enraged the big Italian and he cut loose with a series of furious punches which had Stribling backing up. The American landed with both hands on Carnera's head and body often enough to keep the round even.

The American appeared anxious for a quick triumph at the start of the sixth round and carried the fight to Carnera. In the close range fighting Stribling landed a hard blow in the pit of Carnera's stomach, sending him to his knees. The Italian rose immediately. Stribling looked none too comfortable all through the round and most of his blows seemed to lack weight.

Stribling Knocked Down.

The seventh round opened with another series of clinches, the American apparently reserving his strength for a telling punch. He made the Italian wince once with a body blow. Just as the round ended he got in two more hard wallops at Carnera's mid section. These punches enraged the Italian and he rushed Stribling after the gong had sounded, landing a hard blow to the head which sent Stribling to the canvas. This action drew a storm of hoots from the crowd and caused Carnera's disqualification.

Ousted Laid to Disgruntled Director.

MASON CITY, Ia., Dec. 7.—A charge that the ouster of Iowa from the Big Ten Conference was "based solely upon the claims of a disgruntled former athletic director," was made today by W. Earl Hall, alumni member of the University of Iowa board in control of athletics.

"The ouster from schedule making rights last spring, accomplished without so much as a semblance of a hearing, was based solely upon the claims of a disgruntled former athletic director. Subsequent investigation has disclosed beyond the shadow of a doubt that the one thing most essential to a renovation of athletics at Iowa was the discharge of that director.

"In the final analysis, Iowa is being penalized for having put its athletic house in order," Hall continued, "and I am confident that is the interpretation the sports public is going to place on this latest decision. Ultimately, the verdict of the public will be more valuable than that of a faculty committee which had to call in the conference athletic directors to help shape its decision in the face of the fact that 'faculty control' was held up as the predominent issue of the case."

SCOTT TO MEET VON PORAT ON CHARITY CARD

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—Phil Scott, gangling fire laddie from London, and Otto von Porat, studious Norwegian, travel to the leather wars Monday night with something more than just a fight in prospect. For the loser there will be nothing but lumps and the chance to start all over again. For the winner a pleasant and lucrative winter looms.

Someone must box Jack Sharkey, the one American port in the storm of foreign heavyweights crowding in on the vacant heavyweight throne, at Miami Beach, next February, and the winner of this 12-round skirmish in Madison Square Garden Monday night probably will draw the assignment. If the bout ends in spectacular fashion, the Garden probably will look no further for Sharkey's mate in the second annual battle of the palms. An ordinary performance will force the winner to eliminate the victor of the Tuffy Griffith-Johnny Risko battle here later this season.

Despite Von Porat's power as a puncher and Scott's skill as a boxer, considerable of the interest in the affair centers on the third man in the ring. Jack Dempsey, once the ace of all heavyweight clouters, has been granted a referee's license here and has been named unofficially to handle the main bout. Because of a State Athletic Commission law, the referee cannot be named officially until the boxers are in the ring.

Since the injection of Dempsey into the affair, the demand for tickets has increased steadily. The bout now is expected to draw close to $100,000, with at least half of that profit for charity, the Chirstmas fund, of which Mrs. William R. Hearst is chairman.

An attractive card supports the main bout, in the semifinal, Maxey Rosenbloom and Yale Okun, contenders for the vacant light-heavyweight title, box 12 rounds; the first 10-rounder brings together Marty Gallagher, Washington (D. C.) heavyweight, and George Hoffman of New York, former amateur champion.

ITALIAN-BELGIAN TEAM WINS 6-DAY RACE IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—Gaining a lap on their opponents in the final frenzied hour of the long grind, Franco Georgetti of Italy and his Belgian partner, Gerard Debaets, tonight won New York's 47th international six-day bicycle race at Madison Square Garden. The winners finished with a one-lap lead over three rivals who were tied for second place in distance.

EAST ST. LOUIS SOCCER IN SECOND HALF

Opening games in the second half of the East St. Louis Municipal Soccer League are scheduled at Jones Park this afternoon. The Edgemont A. C. faces the Slacks in the first duel while the Spanish-American A. C. opposes the Prospects in the second game.

The Spanish-Americans won the first half, which ended last Sunday, and qualified for the three-game post-season series with the second half winner for the 1929-1930 championship.

High School Basketball Season Opens Saturday Night; Veteran Cleveland Team Is Favored

By Harold Tuthill

The early opening of the City High School League basketball season gives the veteran Cleveland five a decided handicap over its four inexperienced opponents. The inaugural doubleheader will be played next Saturday night at Roosevelt with Soldan scheduled to meet Roosevelt and Cleveland to play Central. Beaumont draws the bye.

The officials of the circuit this year decided that in order to cut down expenses both games would be played at one auditorium, instead of dividing the contests between two schools as was done last year. The twin bill attraction is expected to draw capacity crowds. The second double-header will be played at Beaumont.

Although Cleveland did not fare so well in its first practice game, losing to McBride, 23 to 10, yet another week of practice is expected to eliminate many of the glaring mistakes.

Four Lettermen at Cleveland.

Cleveland's four lettermen are Kenneth Bieber, Earl Jansen, George Ketterer and Pete Haim. In addition to this quartet, Coach Bert E. Fennga has Ralph and Ray Landry, Louis Schneeman and Roy Paglusch from his second team.

The probable lineup against Central will be Ketterer and Ray Landry, forwards; Schneeman, center; Bieber and Halm, guards. Of the 10 points scored against McBride, Ketterer and Bieber each made five.

Central, Cleveland's opponent, is basing its hopes on two lettermen, Ralph "Bud" Yourtee and William Schechter, Henry Steinberg and Irwin Paul to carry the remainder of the championship burden.

Central Made Good Showing.

Central, although it lost, made a better showing against McBride than Cleveland, since it scored 12 points, seven of them being made by Edelman.

The probable starting lineup of the Midcityans will be Ens and Edelman, forwards; Shechter, center; Yourtee and Krasner, guards.

Both Soldan, the defending champions, and Roosevelt, the runnersup, are in the same category of lack of veteran material. Dave Cook, captain and guard, is the only member back from the championship five, while Albert Alvis and Charles Yeager, neither of whom saw much service, are the mainstays on the Rough Riders' squad.

Soldan's chances can better be gauged after the football men and Ben Reese and Cook work out with the team this week. Reese, who has been nursing an injured hip, will be assigned to a guard position with Cook, as soon as the injury heals.

The showing made by Barney Passer against East St. Louis makes him a logical starter at one of the forwards, but the other position will be contested by Keith Walker, Robert Mautz and Frank Swann. It is likely that Coach Harry White will send either Bob Lahey or Tom Cass in at center. Cass is six feet five inches tall.

Besides Alvis and Yeager, Coach Walther Lorenzen is depending upon Henry Graul, Shirley Griffin and Gorman Broe to win from Soldan. This five is going to have a bitter fight on their hands to prevent being supplanted by Ward Parker, Kenneth Dillman, Kenneth Roth, Kenneth Koerner and Maupin Patton.

Neither combination was successful against Western Military Academy, the Rough Riders going down to a 25-to-13 defeat. The cadets will be met by Cleveland Friday at Alton.

Beaumont Has Extra Week.

Beaumont, which has an extra week of practice before it opens against Cleveland, is better fixed in the matter of experienced material than most of its rivals. Coach Raymond C. Lewis groomed his second team to replace the graduating veterans, and four of them will be in the initial lineup.

The only letterman is Otto Schwandt, a guard, but Bernard Walsh, Bob Bernard, Raymond Toberman and Arthur McLeod broke into some of the games last season. The new material with which Lewis is working consists of Bob Kalbitz, center; Arthur Gerst, Tom Dowley and John Guhman, forwards and Harold Klein and Campbell Elliott, guards.

WRAY'S COLUMN

the world title with gloves. And he is the only one who for years has been able to sustain himself in affluence and to accumulate considerable wealth through other than pugilistic talents. For 36 years Corbett has made a large income through the stage and writing.

"I started in the theatrical business just after my victory over Sullivan," Jim said. "And I have been on the stage ever since. I only made one or two big stakes out of my fighting—the Sullivan bout brought me $30,000 altogether. The stage has been my main support for more than 30 years.

"The first play I appeared in was 'Gentleman Jack' and of course there was a three-round fight scene in which I vanquished the champion. The same idea was incorporated in my next play, which had a naval setting. One night my opponent failed to show up and we had to cancel the fight. The crowd never missed that feature, and we found out that our show went over on its own merit. We abandoned the boxing and I have not appeared on the stage in a fight scene for more than 30 years."

The Lure of the Spotlight.

CORBETT is 63 years old and in affluent circumstances. He has a splendid estate on Long Island and could well afford to retire. But each season the veteran trouper feels the call of the stage and goes on the road again.

"It's hard to quit and hard to keep up," said Corbett, as he lounged in his room between appearances, smoking a long and deadly looking weed. "Toward the end of the season I become tired of the grind. It used to be better when we had only two shows a day. Now it is three and even four appearances and that wears on you. But I get a kick out of it and I don't like to be idle. I guess the curtain will ring down on my stage career before very long."

If it does, it will not be because of any weakening physically on the part of this remarkable man. Corbett is still a fine, broad - shouldered, upstanding fellow who could pass for 45 instead of 63. There's not a gray hair visible and the only facial lines he shows are laugh wrinkles. There is not a mark on him to show that he ever practiced pugilism. His ears are as shell-like as when he was 16.

His "Toughest Spot?"

"WHAT was the toughest spot you were ever in?" the writer asked Corbett, meaning, of course, as to fights.

"Well, that's an easy one," said Corbett. "That happened only a few months ago. I went to a banquet of more than 2000 celebrities. Mayor Walker was the main speaker of the evening. I was seated at the speaker's table with many other men, on the promise that I would not be called upon. With nothing on my mind, I was enjoying the occasion. Mayor Walker was late and several acts were put on to tide over the affair until he arrived. Finally everything ran out. The Mayor sent word he could not appear because of illness. The toastmaster got up and explained, and talked on. Presently as I listened and it dawned on me that I was the subject of his remarks. Pretty soon I saw it coming—he was going to call upon me and put it up to me to bat for Mayor Walker! And I was without an idea in my head!

"THAT was my toughest spot!

"I thought I had ice water instead of blood in my veins. Then I began to sweat and by the time the chairman finally singled me out and I had to drag myself to my feet the situation was so tough that it tickled my Irish and I burst out laughing—and the crowd laughed, too.

"I stumbled through somehow"—Corbett is modest. His friends say it was one of the finest impromptu speeches ever heard at a big gathering—"but believe me I will make them post a $5000 bond next time they promise that I'll not be called on."

Noblesse Oblige.

IT may be mentioned that one of the things Corbett brought out in that talk was the obligation of a champion or a leader in everything to live up to the ideals that the youngsters endow them with.

"You know," said Corbett, "somebody once pinned the nickname of "Gentleman Jim" onto me. And to that man I owe more than I can tell. 'Gentleman' in those days had something of the silk-stocking significance. But there was nothing silk-stocking about me, except that doing chores in a bank I had to wear a white collar. I became a boxing instructor and fighter but as champion I became 'Gentleman Jim.'

"That was a name I had to live up to and I started out to do it. I don't know whether I made good or not; but it gave me a high mark to shoot at. I don't think after all that I missed it very far."

That "Grizzly Bear," Jeffries.

"THERE was another time I was in a tough spot, going back to that subject, and again I don't mean in a fight, but just before one," continued Jim. "That was my second go with Jeffries. Jeff had whipped me once, knocking me out in the twenty-third round, after I had beaten him badly throughout the fight. One left hook fixed me.

"Here I was fighting him for the second time. We were walking down the aisle. Jeffries was in front of me. I looked at his back, his tremendous body and legs. He was so big that he seemed wider than the aisle. As I looked at him I thought how tough it was that I, who had once been flattened by Jeff, should be here again trying to level that grizzly bear. But my Irish came to the rescue and I laughed out loud. Jeff turned around and glared. My seconds thought I had hysterics!

"Boy, that WAS a tough spot. History knows that I didn't win that fight, but I got knocked out trying."

Should Have Been Three.

ROGERS HORNSBY, for the second time, has been chosen the "most valuable player to his club" in the National League. It should have been the third time, for Hornsby failed of the award in the very best year of his career.

In 1924 Hornsby broke all hitting records to that time and was fielding remarkably. He looked to be the best bet for the nomination. But because one member of the League commission forgot to mention Hornsby's name, the award went to Pitcher Dazzy Vance!

BALL TO OPPOSE BREADON TO BACK UP BROADCASTS OF BALL GAMES

By W. J. McGoogan

Sam Breadon, president of the Cardinals, departs for New York at noon today to attend the major league baseball meetings scheduled to be held there this week. Phil Ball, owner of the Browns, already is in New York. Ball went to Chicago Tuesday and from there to New York, arriving there yesterday.

The National League meeting is set for Tuesday, Dec. 10, the American League session for Wednesday and the joint meeting of the two leagues for Thursday.

Although there is always a possibility that a player deal may be made at the winter gatherings of the big league magnates, it is considered unlikely that either St. Louis club will figure in a trade of major importance. The Cardinals feel they are "set" for next year and, while the Browns are eager to strengthen their club, it is not likely they will be able to land anybody who could help without giving up too much.

When Branch Rickey was in Chattanooga he talked over a deal with representatives of another major league club and Breadon said this might be consummated at New York. He said it was a deal of minor proportions not involving any of the Cardinals' first string players.

Ball may do something about the proposal to trade Outfielder Fred Schulte to Washington for Goose Goslin, but it has been reported that Clark Griffith, owner of the Senators, wants more than Schulte for Goslin.

Divided on Radio Broadcast.

There are other matters of importance to be decided by the major leagues, however, in which both St. Louis owners are vitally interested. Probably the most controversial question will be that relating to the radio broadcasting of ball games. Ball and Breadon are diametrically opposed on this subject. Ball is in favor of forbidding the broadcasting of games on the ground that it has cost his ball club many paid admissions, while Breadon thinks radio has created many new fans and has proved a very effective method of advertisement for baseball.

Ball contends that if radio stations are to be permitted to continue the broadcasting of games, they should be made to pay the club owner for the privilege, as he contends that radio stations make huge profits out of baseball. Breadon has an open mind on that phase of the subject. He says he will investigate the profits the stations make and if it should prove true that they make large sums of money, he would be in favor of making them contribute some of their profits to the ball clubs whose games they broadcast.

Agree on Changing Schedule.

The St. Louis owners are in agreement on the subject of shortening the major league schedules not through a reduction of the number of games played but in the condensation of the time consumed in playing them. Breadon says any proposal to reduce the number of games played by each team is ridiculous, as such action would not result in a saving of expenses to the owners and would result in a loss of revenue. Each major league club now plays 154 games.

There was much complaint last season over the number of open dates toward the close of the campaign. The Browns, for instance, had three open dates in Cleveland and three in Chicago at the finish.

Branch Rickey, vice president of the Cardinals, returned from the minor league meeting at Chattanooga yesterday, well pleased over the decision in the George Torporcer case, but unconvinced that minor league baseball suffers through the ownership by major league organizations, despite Commissioner Landis' broadside against the practice.

Rickey did say, however, that the commissioner's attitude might result in preventing any expansion of the Cardinal farm system.

EAGLE OF ARMY ONLY MEMBER OF 1928 ELEVEN HONORED AGAIN

THE Post-Dispatch presents herewith the All-America Football Boards' all-star selections for 1929. This board, made up of coaches—Glen Warner of Stanford, Knute Rockne of Notre Dame, "Tad" Jones of Yale, and Bill Alexander of Georgia Tech—represents football authority of all sections of the United States and its members have directed or observed the best of the players. The selection, the authentic team since the days of Walter Camp, is the sixth made by the board, which had southern representation this year for the first time.

Notwithstanding better facilities and a greater abundance of first-hand evidence than at any meeting in the past five years, this board was able to reach an All-America agreement from the wealth of 1929 material, only after prolonged consideration and in certain instances following discussion that bordered on deadlock. The counsel and assistance rendered by Captain Jones of West Point, and his advisory committee, was invaluable and the addition of a Southern member to the All-America board proved wise and necessary.

Aside from selecting the team itself the most important and interesting decision of the board was the elimination of first and second teams. Hereafter the best player will be named for eleven positions only, other players of outstanding merit will be given All-America honors without relation to rank or preference.

Schwaigler of Washington was a bulwark on the West Coast. But St. Marys, a comparatively small college, playing a hard major schedule, was undefeated and Ackerman at tackle was the chief stumbling block to the enemy. By scores of 21 to 6, his team defeated Oregon, a team tied with four others for the conference title. The University of California was held to a scoreless tie and was clearly outplayed. All this was attributed, in a large measure, to Ackerman, the 200-pound fast, aggressive and most valuable player on his team. Sleight was not only a great power in Purdue's championship line

By W. J. McGoogan

Sam Breadon, president of the Cardinals, departs for New York at noon today to attend the major league baseball meetings scheduled to be held there this week. Phil Ball, owner of the Browns, already is in New York. Ball went to Chicago Tuesday and from there to New York, arriving there yesterday.

The National League meeting is set for Tuesday, Dec. 10, the American League session for Wednesday and the joint meeting of the two leagues for Thursday.

Although there is always a possibility that a player deal may be made at the winter gatherings of the big league magnates, it is considered unlikely that either St. Louis club will figure in a trade of major importance. The Cardinals feel they are "set" for next year and, while the Browns are eager to strengthen their club, it is not likely they will be able to land anybody who could help without giving up too much.

When Branch Rickey was in Chattanooga he talked over a deal with representatives of another major league club and Breadon said this might be consummated at New York. He said it was a deal of minor proportions not involving any of the Cardinals' first string players.

Ball may do something about the proposal to trade Outfielder Fred Schulte to Washington for Goose Goslin, but it has been reported that Clark Griffith, owner of the Senators, wants more than Schulte for Goslin.

Divided on Radio Broadcast.

There are other matters of importance to be decided by the major leagues, however, in which both St. Louis owners are vitally interested. Probably the most controversial question will be that relating to the radio broadcasting of ball games. Ball and Breadon are diametrically opposed on this subject. Ball is in favor of forbidding the broadcasting of games on the ground that it has cost his ball club many paid admissions, while Breadon thinks radio has created many new fans and has proved a very effective method of advertisement for baseball.

Breadon has an open mind on that phase of the subject. He says he will investigate the profits the stations make and if it should prove true that they make large sums of money, he would be in favor of making them contribute some of their profits to the ball clubs whose games they broadcast.

club" in the National League. It should have been the third time, for Hornsby failed of the award in the very best year of his career.

In 1924 Hornsby broke all hitting records to that time and was fielding remarkably. He looked to be the best bet for the nomination. But because one member of the League commission forgot to mention Hornsby's name, the award went to Pitcher Dazzy Vance!

ALL-AMERICA BOARD OF FOOTBALL ANNOUNCES ITS 1929 ALL-STAR TEAM

CAGLE OF ARMY ONLY MEMBER OF 1928 ELEVEN HONORED AGAIN

THE Post-Dispatch presents herewith the All-America Football Boards' all-star selections for 1929. This board, made up of coaches—Glen Warner of Stanford, Knute Rockne of Notre Dame, "Tad" Jones of Yale, and Bill Alexander of Georgia Tech—represents football authority of all sections of the United States and its members have directed or observed the best of the players. Lapel shields will be given to this year's certificate winners.

A gold football, mounted on a red, white and blue shield will be the All-America insignia.

Seven Players From Undefeated Elevens.

As the matter of actual selection was approached it was surprising with what readiness and unanimity the first seven names were proposed and adopted. But thereafter complications and obstacles developed.

And with the reaching of a final and complete decision—which was only attained after serious debate regarding the backfield positions—it was noticeable that seven of the 11 players were selected from the four undefeated teams of the year—Notre Dame, Pittsburg, Purdue and St. Mary's of California. At first glance this gives the impression that an outstanding player on an undefeated team is virtually assured of All-America selection and as a sequel to such a formula, a player on an undefeated team has a better chance of making All-America than a superior player on a second division team. Such reasoning is entirely contrary to the methods employed by this board as is best exemplified by the selection of Cagle chiefly on the strength of his performance against Notre Dame, Illinois and Harvard—although Army failed to win any one of these games.

Eleven Most Valuable Football Players, in Eyes of Warner, Rockne, Jones and Alexander

Naming Carideo at Quarter Board's Easiest Task, Leaving Nagurski Off Team Is Hardest

The easiest man to place on the All-American team for 1929 was Carideo, quarterback field executive for Notre Dame. Opinion favoring Cannon his teammate was equally unanimous.

The most perplexing problem of the day was finding a place for Welch, Cagle, Banker, Uansa, Parkinson and Nagurski—with only three positions available. The hardest, single decision of the entire conference was eliminating the mighty Minnesotan, who can play and has played great football this year both in the line and in the backfield—a mark of versatility which stamps a man as most valuable to his team but at the same time may work against his claims for All-America placement over men who have displayed outstanding powers in one position throughout the entire season. Several women were named and the hardest one to eliminate was Sington, Alabama's great tackle.

Ticknor, Moynihan, Siano, Cox and Hughes stand at the head of a fine class of excellent pivot men. Ticknor, Harvard's captain-elect, appears to have more supporters on first call than any of his competitors. He weighs 195 pounds, is fast and inspirational to his teammates. When Ticknor was on the sidelines, the Harvard front wall functioned with difficulty but when in the actual fray Ticknor was invariably where the enemy attack was strongest. Of necessity, to win his honor he is a reliable passer under any and all conditions. On defense he is constantly in and out of the line and his work either as defensive guard or defensive center hardly has a flaw. Moynihan, the All Marsters of Dartmouth, was the victim of football fate in his final year. Followers of Notre Dame have said the South Bend line is 20 per cent weaker in the absence of its big first-string center and his presence in the Army game may or may not have strengthened Moynihan's All-American claims. A fractured ankle cheated him of his last chance just as serious injury robbed Marsters, Dartmouth's great halfback, of an opportunity to prove his All-America rating in three of his team's major games.

Cannon Unanimous Choice for Guard.

Montgomery and Cannon are assigned to the guard positions. Green, Barrager, Law, Brooke, Anderson are all stellar guards and only lose to Montgomery by a shade. But Cannon—appropriately named both as a weapon of powerful defense and devastating attack—stands out over all the guards of the day. By old-timers he has been compared to Truxton Hare of Pennsylvania memory and that is the last word in guards—according to the football elders. This mighty man of the Notre Dame line has the speed of a halfback and absorbs punishment like a punching bag. He scorns a headgear, asks no quarter and gives none. His work as an interferer for end runs and off-tackle plays, as well as weak-side spinners—amazed and helped defeat every opponent on his schedule. On defense Cannon is literally all over the field. At blocking kicks he has no superior. At rushing the passer he is a constant and dangerous threat. And whether the battle raged in Chicago, Atlanta, Evanston or New York City, the eye of the spectator never left this boy Cannon—holding down a job generally obscure and frequently despised.

Cagle, Banker and Welch Chosen as Backs, Purdue Star Largely Because of Aid to Mates

The tackle selections of this team would be Ackerman and Knight—mighty linemen on two undefeated teams, whose goal line were seldom crossed. Good tackles were not scarce this year but none were as good as those selected. Captain of Yale is the best in the east. No one in the South approached Sington's play for Alabama. Schweigler of Washington was a bulwark on the West Coast. But St. Marys, a comparatively small college, playing a hard major schedule, was undefeated and Ackerman at tackle was the chief stumbling block to the enemy. By scores of 21 to 6, his team defeated Oregon, a team tied with four losers for the conference title. The University of California was held to a scoreless tie and was clearly outplayed. All this was attributed, in a large measure, to Ackerman, the 200-pound fast, aggressive and all around valuable player on his team. Sleight was not only a great powerful in Purdue's championship line but the best tacle of the year in the Western Conference. He is a born tackler and a born leader, both of which qualities stemmed the tide in the Iowa game and during several critical spots in other games.

Donchess, rated the best wingman in the East, gives Pittsburg two all-star men in the line, while Tappan of Southern California would take care of the opposite flank. Fesler and Tanner were the best pair of ends in the Middle West, with Holland and Hug holding similar rank in the South.

Good ends in the East included Yudicky of Dartmouth, Booms of Dartmouth, Barres of Yale and Bates of Western Maryland. Tappan, the best end in the Far West, has yielded ground that could only be measured in feet, if not in inches. All season long he has been a steady, consistent performer. On the offensive, this boy makes the average tackle look helpless and in snaring forward passes he takes his place alongside of Oosterbaan, one of the best ever produced. Donchess is perhaps the safest playing end in the game today. Leaving his position uncovered, no matter what the apparent advantage, is not recorded in the entire service record of Pitt's star wing. His downfield work is flawless, he boxes a tackle with all the finish of a postgraduate star and the man to run back a kick against him has yet to make his appearance.

The important position of quarterback was so simple to fill that no discussion was necessary. All four members of the board said "Carideo" at the same moment and nominations were closed. Of course, the year has seen good quarterbacks in many sections of the country, but none has compared with Notre Dame's field executive in the long list of requirements for this vital position.

Football critics throughout the South stamped Carideo as the best quarterback in the past five or six years. Opinion elsewhere was equally generous.

No one playing college football today can handle punts like this daring and deliberate lad and his ability to kick the ball out of bounds at any given spot was Notre Dame's life saver in several of its hardest games. Booth of Yale had several big days and Wood of Harvard, another Sophomore star, was the keynote of his team's successful play in several major games. Eisan and Saunders were the best signal callers in the Far West with Parker, Dodd and Grubbs sharing honors in the South.

Nagurski Crowded Out by Full-Time Backs.

Now come the three backfield jobs with Cagle, Banker, Welch and Nagurski topping a field of exceptional ballcarriers and triple threat performers.

Uansa and Parkinson, both of Pitt, were thoroughly discussed and all their claims placed upon the table. Brazil of Detroit, Glasgow of Iowa, Dowler of Colgate, Masters of Penn, Wittmer of Princeton, Lom of California, Hufford of Washington, Summerhays of Utah, Clark of Colorado, Wilson of Baylor, Bergherm of Northwestern, Cawthorn of Florida and Fleischaker and Smalling, both of Stanford—all figuratively were called before the board. Details of their season's play were examined with care and fairness.

One by one the list, at first very long, grew very short. Eventually all were eliminated from backfield consideration, but Cagle, Banker, Welch and Nagurski, and of course, Carideo—who was selected by acclamation. Nagurski, the pride of Minnesota, and justly so, has played in the line and played at full. His work has been the bulwark of Minnesota's attack but when the last cold analysis put the backfield names on paper Nagurski could not be retained at the expense of three men who have played the entire season behind the line and turned in one great game after another. Welch, at halfback for Purdue, has all the characteristics of a natural halfback. With the assistance of Sleight in the line, Welch carried Purdue to its first title in the Western Conference. His deadly interfering made Harmeson a great ballcarrier and this, plus his many other attributes won for Welch from many critics the title of best halfback in the Big Ten circuit.

In Banker, this All-America team would carry one of the greatest all around backfield stars ever known to Southern football. For three years he has been the power of Tulane and when it comes to individual performance, Banker can play any position on a football team and earn his place on the roll of honor.

The remaining berth goes to Cagle the Southern product who has electrified the North for several years. His Army career on the gridiron closes against Stanford, Dec. 28 and the greatness of this indomitable character and spectacular performer will not be fully appreciated until West Point endeavors to replace him later on—an almost hopeless task.

Because Army has found the going very hard this year, some critics have been inclined to discount the work of Cagle. He gained more yardage in the years Army beat Yale or Harvard or Notre Dame, but never in his bright career has this lad played more magnificent football than in his game against Notre Dame this year—practically a solo fight against a powerful rival. Against Harvard he was Army's one threat and without him the Cadets would have gone down to defeat.

In the Illinois game, with Army hopelessly beaten and in spite of heart-breaking flukes, Cagle with little protection and little assistance, kept tearing and fighting to the final whistle. Nothing rattles him; winning or losing he is the coolest man in every Army game. No situation escapes his uncanny judgment and instant grasp.

Although a marked man in every game, Cagle is one of the iron men of football and seldom has been known to leave the game because of injuries. His change of pace and galloping cutbacks make him one of the hardest of all men to down, and but for Law's magnificent tackle at Yankee Stadium, the Army halfback would have scored a tying touchdown. A teammate of Law's overpowered Cagle from the rear after Law had paid the price of intercepting this human express train—and Law, writhing on the ground, unconscious.

Cagle has a knack of shifting his hips when tackled that would break the grip of a grizzly bear. Retreating, 20 and sometimes 30 yards, before hurling a forward pass half the distance of the field, has been the high light of Cagle's repertory but to the student of football he has many other attributes, less dramatic, but equally important.

Cagle is the only player named this year who was on the 1928 all-America team.

Cannon, Carideo and Cagle are today the high Cs in all-America football.

CLIFF DOETZEL TO MEET BURKE NEXT THURSDAY

Interclub bouts featuring leading local contenders for Western A. A. U. flyweight and middleweight championship honors will furnish two of the four special attractions on an amateur boxing program to be held Thursday night at the South Broadway A. C. Clifford Doetzel of the South Broadway club, meets Gene Burke of the Missouri Pacific A. C., in the flyweight event, and Steve Marre of Sherman Park Community Center, engages Johnny Miles of the South Broadway squad, in the middleweight bout.

Doetzel, a former district champion, relinquished the title last season when his club failed to place a team in the annual championships. He has had the satisfaction, however, of defeating Gilbert "Peewee" Terry, his successor on the senior flyweight throne, and has also defeated Woodrow Williams, the junior titleholder. Burke recently scored a knockout victory over Harold "Spider" Kaderabek, a South Side midget, who had nine straight conquests to his credit.

DIEGEL KEEPS PRO GOLF TITLE BY BEATING FARRELL

advantage; he was threatened from that time on.

The two "breaks" when Diegel's ball was knocked into the cup followed. On the twenty-ninth the Agua Caliente representative received a little uncalled for aid when his second shot plunked into the back of a spectator and bounded into the fairway. The victim of the misplaced shot was Conway Tearle. As a result of the carom shot off of the motion picture actor's back, Diegel played from a good lie and ended with a half for the hole. He won the thirtieth and thirty-first to put Farrell dormie 5. Farrell's hopes were shattered on the thirty-second. After Farrell had missed a 10-footer for a 4, Diegel dropped his from four feet away to win the hole.

Diegel Eliminated Hagen.

To repeat for his championship Diegel was forced to fight his way through a lower bracket that included two former national and P. G. A. titleholders. On successive days he disposed of Gene Sarazen and Walter Hagen. Diegel qualified with a 140 for the 36-hole test. In the first round he overwhelmed P. O. Hart, Wheeling, W. Va., 10 and 9. Herman Barron, Port Chester, N. Y., fell a 10-9 victim in the second round and Sarazen succumbed 2 and 2 on the following day. In the semifinals, he beat out Hagen, 3 and 2.

Farrell medaled 148. In the first round he defeated John Golden, Paterson, N. J., 1 up and eliminated Henry Cuici, Bridgeport, Conn., 2 and 1. He took the measure of Craig Wood, Bloomfield, N. J., 1 up on the thirty-seventh and disposed of Al Watrous, Detroit, 6 and 5 in the semifinal.

As runnerup, Farrell, a former national open champion, received a check for $600 and the P. G. A. runner's-up medal.

Farrell's Game "Cracks."

On the 320-yard twenty-eighth, Diegel got a second successive "break" when Farrell putted up and knocked his rival's ball into the cup. Diegel's ball had stopped on the lip of the cup, laying Farrell a half-stymie as on the twenty-seventh. It gave Diegel a par four.

They halved the 450-yard twenty-ninth in fives, Diegel being saved on the hole when his second shot landed on the back of Conway Tearle, motion picture actor and the ball bounded back toward the green.

It was apparent to the crowd that Farrell's game had cracked as Diegel won the 192-yard thirtieth with par three that made him four up. Diegel matched a birdie three to win the 392-yard thirty-first and put Farrell dormie five.

Diegel was on the thirty-second and deciding green in three, while Farrell went into the rough at the right, going on in four, eight feet from the pin. He missed the putt, and conceded the match to Diegel who was five feet from the cup. Diegel won the hole with a birdie four against Farrell's par five.

CHALLENGE FILED FOR WESTHUS TO PLAY FOR TITLE

A challenge to Mike Shimon of Milwaukee, national amateur three-cushion billiard champion, to risk his title in a match with Bud Westhus of this city, has been dispatched to the Amateur Billiard Association of America, in Chicago, by Charles C. Peterson.

If Shimon accepts the challenge, the match probably will be played at Peterson's parlor this month.

THIS WEEK'S SCHEDULE.

Monday—Kansas City at Tulsa; St. Paul at Duluth.
Tuesday—Minneapolis at St. Paul.
Wednesday—Kansas City at Tulsa.
Thursday—Duluth at St. Paul.
Friday—St. Paul at Minneapolis; St. Louis at Kansas City.
Saturday—St. Paul at Duluth.
Sunday—St. Louis at Kansas City.

There is nothing wrong with the scoring punch of the St. Louis Flyers, judging from the number of goals and assist with which they are credited, for they lead the American Hockey Association in both particulars. But that there is something wrong with their defense is shown emphatically by the fact that have had more goals scored against them than any other team in the league.

So far, in eight games, the Flyers have counted 22 times and they are credited with 14 assists, while they have been scored against on 26 occasions. The league leading Tulsa team has scored 18 goals, four fewer than the Flyers, and has been scored against 11 times, 15 fewer than the Flyers. Kansas City has the strongest defense in the league, apparently, having yielded but 4 tallies in 6 games.

All of which means that Coach Jamieson's men will have to offer a more alert defense for their net if they expect to overhaul the leaders in the race.

Goyer Leading Scorer.

Larry Goyer is the leading point scorer for St. Louis, with 7 goals and one assist for a total of 8 points, while Breen is next with 4 goals and three assists, 7 points. Then come Headley, Cameron and Hill, with four points each; Powley and Acaster with three each; Jamieson and Bolleau with one each.

In figures released by the Association and including games of Nov. 28, Goyer is shown as leading the league in scoring. At that time Goyer had scored 6 goals and had one assist for a total of 7 points, while Breen was tied with Des Jardins of St. Paul for second place with 6 points.

Jamieson and his men are working daily at the Winter Garden in preparation for the two games with the Pla-Mors at Kansas City this week. The Flyers and Pla-Mors meet Friday and Sunday evenings after which both teams come to St. Louis for games on Dec. 17 and 18.

The Flyers will have to be at their best to beat Kansas City, for Grant had his men in hand for some time before the opening of the season and has them away to a good start. The Pla-Mors looked like easy pennant winners the early part of last season, but faded out of the picture toward the close and didn't get into the playoffs.

Injury Keeps Clarke Out.

Incidentally, it was Moose Jamieson who knocked Kansas City out of the pennant series for, playing with Duluth, he scored two goals and defeated the Pla-Mors in the game which put them out of the running.

Jamieson plans to use Curly Headley at center ice as soon as Nobby Clarke recovers and is able to take his place at defense. Clarke has been laid up for some time with a broken hand and it probably will be Jan. 1 before he will be able to resume play. Meanwhile, Headley, Jamieson and Breen will handle the defense.

Headley and Cameron suffered minor cuts in the final game against Minneapolis, but neither of them was forced out of practice.

Bates Finally Comes Through.

Bates College won the championship of Maine for the first time in 23 years and Dave Morey, coach, was promptly signed to another contract.

OKLAHOMA CITY WINS FROM DAVIS-ELKINS

aerial route resulted in both of the invaders' touchdowns.

The Oklahoma City boys outweighed by several pounds, entered the game the under dog but soon turned the tide by making two touchdowns in quick succession. They also scored in the second and third periods.

With the end of the game looming, Davis-Elkins made a dangerous scoring threat but an intercepted pass gave the ball to the Goldbugs just before the final whistle.

Sankari	107	2	4	3h	4	4	4	4	R. O'Brien	2.80

Galahad, showing big improvement over his recent race and well handled, ran into the lead when ready and won galloping. Patricia Marian, away fast, showed fine speed and was next best. Mixup beat the gate and kept close to the pace and ran a good race. Sankari had speed for three furlongs, then dropped back and was eased up in the stretch.

$2.00 mutuels paid: Galahad, win $4.40, place $2.90, show out; Patricia Marian, place $2.70, show out; Mixup, show out.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 7.—Over a heavy, holding track, Phil Reuter's Galahad, 4-year-old gelding by Prince Galahad, scored an impressive victory when he landed first money in the Baton Rouge Handicap, which featured a splendid race programe here today.

Galahad was favorite, the talent making him the choice despite his recent bad race when he was beaten by many lengths. Patricia Marian was second and Mixup third.

Galahad was always the choice of the big crowd, and paid $4.40 in the mutuels.

The start was fair. Mixup walked through the gate and Starter Hamilton released the webbing. Mixup beat the gate by a length or so, but before the field had gone a furlong, Patricia Marian ran into the lead, with Mixup second and Galahad third. The favorite was rushed up to a contending position at the half pole and Horn let him rate along. Around the last turn Galahad was permitted to run. He went to the outside where, clear of interference and closing strongly, he ran into the lead and won galloping by four lengths. Patricia Marian beat Mixup four lengths for the place.

Bud Charlton Repeats.

Bud Charlton, which recently won in muddy going, came right back to win the first race. He led all the way and paid $9.00 for $2.

Bud Charlton got off well, rushed to the front and saving ground was never headed. He won easily by three lengths from Wood River. The latter got second by four lengths over Dabster.

Former Jockey Jack Howard put over his first winner of the meeting when he saddled Maiden's Tryst in the second event. The filly was at home in the going and won handily. She paid $8.40. Salona was second and Bridegroom third.

Blameless, suddenly finding her racing legs, was a winner of the third race, a five and one-half furlong sprint for 2-year-olds. Red Mountain was second and Meridianese third. Justina, a hot favorite, was a poor fourth.

Red Mountain and Justina jumped into the lead and held the advantage to the top of the stretch, where Blameless, circling the field, got out to the firm going and closing fast, won by a length. Red Mountain beat Meridianese three lengths for the place. A $2 ticket on the winner this time was worth $12.

Extreme, which was defeated the other day by virtually the same field, came right back with a brilliant effort and won the fifth race in a drive. Extreme paid $5.10 for $2. Gold Mint was second and Double Heart third.

Double Heart made the early pace, but in the stretch Extreme came with a rush and won driving hard by a head over Gold Mint. Gold Mint closed very fast and beat Double Heart a length and a half for the place.

Ruane, favorite, paying $5.10 for $2, was a driving winner of the sixth race, which was at a mile and one-sixteenth. Only four went to the post. Alto sprinted into a long lead in the first quarter, but he tired fast when they reached the last turn. Ruane took the lead in the stretch and won by a head from Sanford. Alto was two lengths back, with Marlboro a head behind.

The seventh race was won by Frank Hawley, with Torcher second and Vole third.

Hyacinthian	115	5	2	3h	4d	8	8	8	L. Jones	32.50

Maiden's Tryst off well, had good speed, followed the pace to the stretch where he ran into the lead and drawing out won handily. Salona was rushed up on the outside and led to the final furlong, where she tired slightly. Bridegroom well up all the way ran a good race. Little Gyp saved ground all the way and finished well. Dr. Fred did not like the going. David Boone off poorly, made a bid around the turn but weakened in the stretch.

$2.00 Mutuels Paid: Maiden's Tryst, win $8.40, place $6.60, show $4.10; Salona, place $3.00, show $4.40; Bridegroom, show $6.30.

THIRD RACE—$1000, 2-year-olds, five and one-half furlongs: Start poor, won driving; place easily. Went to post 2:54 p. m.; at post ¼ minute. Winner, b. f. 2, by Black Servant-Miss Rowland. Trainer, Hainton. Time, :24 1-5, :49 3-5, 1:10 2-5. Value to winners: $700, $175, $100, $25.

Corroosis	101	1	7	6d	6d	6d	7	7	J. Leyland	27.25

Blameless in going best and showing a liking for the going came wide in the stretch, closed earnestly, won eoine away. Red Mountain had lots of speed, saved ground and held on gamely. Meridianese was kept out in the best going and was well up the way. Justina was hard ridden but stopped fast in the last furlong. La Golondrina is worth remembering. Corroosis had no chance with the start.

$2.00 mutuels paid: Blameless, win $12.00, place $4.40, show $3.40; Red Mountain, place $3.40, show $3.60; Meridianese, show $3.60.

Stepalong	103	2	4	5h	4h	7	7	7	M. Rose	42.35

Extreme, going in greatly improved form, followed pace to the stretch, ran into the lead and held on well. Gold Mint was off on fast in tangle and suffered early interference, came to the outside and finished with a rush. Would have won in another stride. Double Heart had plenty of speed but weakened badly in the final sixteenth. Stupendous came very fast at the end. First Mission Tired. Bramabiza was outrun.

$2 mutuels paid: Extreme, win $5.10; place, $3.20; show, $2.20. Gold Mint, place, $3.40; show, $2.60. Double Heart, show, $2.60.

SIXTH RACE—$1000, claiming, 3-year-olds and up, one mile and one sixteenth. Start good, won driving; place same. Went to post 4:13 p. m.; at post half minute. Winner B h 5, by Behave Yourself-My Boots. Trainer, J. R. Partridge. Time, :25 2-5, :50 4-5, 1:18 2-5, 1:46 3-5, 1:54. Value to winner, $700, second $175, third $100, fourth $25.

HORSE.	WT.	PP.	ST.	¼	½	¾	Str.	Fin.	Jockey.	Equivalent Odds to 1

Marlboro	102	1	2	3d	4	4	4	4	R. Cramer	3.95

Ruane was nicely handled. He was kept close to the pace, moved up very fast turning into stretch, closed gamely and held on well to win. Sanford was taken wide around first turn and rated to the final furlong, closed very fast. Alto opened a wide lead in the first half mile, but weakened fast at the end. Marlboro dropped far out of it early but closed gamely.

$2 mutuels paid: Ruane, win $5.10, place $4.10, show out; Sanford, place $5.30, show out; Alto, show out.

SEVENTH RACE—Claiming, 3-year-olds and upward, one and one-quarter miles—Start good; won driving; place same. Went to post 4:40 p. m.; at post one-half minute. Winner, br. g. 5, by Bonfire—Miss Mocson. Trainer, J. McCaul. Time, :25 3-5, :51 3-5, 1:17 2-5, 1:47 3-5, 2:14. Value to winner, $700; second, $175; third, $100; fourth, $25.

HORSE.	WT.	PP.	ST.	¼	½	¾	Str.	Fin.	Jockey.	Equivalent Odds to 1.
Frank Hawley	114	2	4	3d	2d	2½	1d	1nk	M. Knight	1.50

MADISONS TO MEET MILLERS IN PRO SOCCER

Confronted with an opportunity to advance into a four-cornered tie for first place in the St. Louis Professional Soccer League race, Phil Kavanaugh's tail end Madisons will show a rearranged battlefront this afternoon in their game with the leading Ben Millers. The second contest on the weekly program will be between the Hellrungs and the city champion Tablers, which are tied for second place.

A victory for the Madisons and a tie score for the Hellrungs and Tablers would enable the three elevens to climb into a tie for the leadership berth with Willie Foley's Ben Millers. This season's race has been marked by upsets and even scores, so there is a possibility that the four clubs may wind up the day sharing the top rung.

Ollie Fink to Return.

Manager Kavanaugh's halfback line will be strengthened, due to the fact that Ollie Fink will be able to take his regular berth on the middle wall. Fink will supplant the youthful Egan who played last week. Barnes, the recent Muny League graduate, will again be given a start at outside right, while O'Neil, an allround forward, will be seen at the other wing. Grennon, the regular outside right, will be shifted to the inside with Joe McCarthy and Eddie Flavin will be stationed at center.

Joe Hennessy, the regular Ben Miller center forward, will not be able to play because he injured his toe in last week's game. "Beano" Bollam, a retund goal-getter who, at times, has shown flashes of clever playing, will open at the pivot berth, while Mulroy and Curran, wingmen, and Kickham and Nash, inside players, will form the rest of the scoring line. The loss of Hennessy is expected to slow up the Millers' scoring attack.

Schweppe in Tabler Line Up.

The Tablers will also show some changes, according to Manager Johnny Marre, who stated that George Schweppe, former Ben Millerite, will appear at right halfback in place of Art Claeys.

The youthful fullback combination of Doorley and McGirl will be seen in the starting lineup, but Milton Zenson, who was a regular defensive man last season, will be sent into the battle in the second half. Zenson, according to many soccer followers, is a fine prospect. Manager Marre also contemplates on using Harry Bochnicek and Buddy Brengle, a pair of veterans, as reserves against the speedy Hellrungs. Bochnicek is a dependable center forward and inside player and he will be called upon as soon as one of the Tabler goal-getters indicates he is slowing up. Brengle and Gene McAuliffe, young outside right, are slated to divide the afternoon's work.

No Changes for Hellrungs

Three consecutive victories have convinced Manager Tate Brady that the Hellrungs are a pennant-chasing eleven, so there will be no changes in their lineup.

The Ben Millers are leading with nine points, the Hellrungs and Tablers second with eight each, and the Madisons last with seven.

Robert (Ribby) Murphy will referee both games. The starting time of the first game is 1:45 o'clock.

KANSAS CITY, Dec. 7. — The Golden Eagle bowling team of St. Louis rolled into seventh place in the five man event of the annual middle west bowling tournament on Harvey's alleys here tonight with a total of 2892. The other three St. Louis teams that rolled in the same squad did not do so well, although the Congress alleys totalled 2833.

Two Kansas City bowlers caused the only changes in first places when Zeno Pucci took first place in the all events, Con Maloney rolled into first place in the singles on 702.

University City Opens Wednesday Against Soldan

The University City High School will open its 1929 basketball schedule Wednesday night when it plays host to Soldan High of the City League. The Delmar squad has been practicing for only a week, because of its prolonged football season. In the post-season game at Tuscaloosa, Ala., many of the boys were bruised and, as a result, Deckert and McMurrey will not be at their best.

Coach Muhl has cut the 75 players who answered first call to a workable squad of 20. Of these only three are lettermen of last year. No one is sure of a position for this first game. Vescovo, Feldman, Dourfmouth or Rude will be at the forwards; Schoenthaler or McMurray at center, and Deckert, Campbell, Todd or Bickle at the guards.

This will be the second game of the season for the Soldan team, which defeated the East St. Louis team Friday night. Coach White's team will be seeking revenge for the defeat handed them by University City in the semifinal round of the district tournament last year.

The starting Soldan lineup is doubtful. Fasser, who played well against the East Side team, will more than likely start, as will Swann, but Cass may be replaced by Cook and Mautz by Reese.

The gymnasium in the new University City school is not as yet completed, and therefore the game will be played on the old floor.

WOMEN BOWLERS WILL ROLL AGAINST MEN

The Kobusch & Cornwell House Furnishing bowling team, leaders of the Washington Ladies' Scratch League, will oppose the Kobusch & Cornwell men's team of the Floriss Recreation League in a return match on the Washington alleys at 2 p. m. this afternoon.

In the first match which was rolled on the Floriss drives two weeks ago, the men's team was returned victor by a small margin and the women are seeking revenge. The women's team will line up as follows: Mrs. A. Bostelman, Miss Flo Schlenk, Mrs. H. Temperle, Mrs. Lohmueller and Mrs. Myrtle Schulte.

DOUBLES TOURNAMENT AT K. OF C. ALLEYS

A doubles bowling tournament is in progress at the new Knights of Columbus alleys, Lindell boulevard and Vandeventer avenue. The event is open to teams from all city and county councils of the Knights of Columbus, and councils in East St. Louis, Belleville, Granite City, Alton and St. Charles. A large number of entries were received for the event.

The tourney will close next Saturday and Sunday.

ALL-HEAVY CARD IS PLANNED FOR ARENA SHOW

By Damon Kerby

Three possible policies to pursue in lining up his next Arena fight card are being considered by Matchmaker Tom Packs. He will take no action until the date for his next program—to be held around Jan. 5—is definitely set.

Packs said yesterday he was considering these three courses:

Obtaining Benny Bass and Eddie Shea for a main event of 10 rounds.

Lining up a heavyweight card, with Tuffy Griffiths and Otto von Porat as the feature attractions. (But not against each other).

Putting Sammy Mandell, the lightweight champion, against King Tut in a nontitle event.

The last listed possibility can be eliminated without further consideration. At least so think local boxing followers, who cannot imagine that Tut and Mandell would appear in a nontitle bout in St. Louis, when they could draw more fans and make more money by appearing in larger boxing centers.

Packs, however, has the word of Eddie Kane, Mandell's manager, that he will show the Rockford boy in St. Louis against any opponent that Packs can line up. Kane is now on the West Coast and will stop off in St. Louis next week and confer with Packs, on his way to Chicago.

The Shea-Bass fight looks at this time to be more of a probability than the Mandell-Tut event, but the former appears none too sure. The reason, as is known, is that these boys will likely demand more than Packs can guarantee with the assurance of even paying expenses.

The fight itself also is a "natural." Both Shea and Bass have shown in St. Louis, and are known to be hard hitters. They probably would draw a crowd that would approach the attendance of 18,000 that saw Andre Routis and Davey Abad fight on the first Arena card.

One thing that stands in the way of an all-heavyweight card would be the fact that opponents of known quality would be hard to obtain for Griffiths and Von Porat. Anything less would be looked upon with something akin to coolness by St. Louis fans.

Matchmaker Packs will meet with Arena officials tomorrow to set definitely a date for his next show. With the date agreed upon, Packs will then go ahead in lining up his card.

Brooklyn Tommy Sullivan, matchmaker for the Fred W. Stockham Post, which holds its shows in the Coliseum, has reiterated that he will not attempt to put on a fight card until after Jan.

Ernest Schweigler Dies.

Ernest Schweigler, for many years a familiar figure in the bowling game here, died yesterday. Mr. Schweigler was 44 years old. He is survived by his mother, wife, a son and a daughter. The funeral is to be held tomorrow.

HANDICAP GOLF MEETS PAY ALL COSTS AND WILL BE CONTINUED

By W. J. McGoogan

Handicap tournaments conducted under the auspices of the St. Louis District Golf Association during the past season yielded enough revenue in entrance fees to pay for all prizes and incidental expenses in connection with those events, also enough to defray the expenses of the Chicago-St. Louis intercity match and leave, in addition, a reserve of $50 to start on in 1930.

Chick Irwin, chairman of the committee which handled the handicap events for the district association, has submitted his financial report showing that entry fees amounted to approximately $2000, while the total expenses for the handicap tournaments amounted to $1300, leaving a balance of $700, out of which came the expenses of the intercity matches and left $50 in the treasury.

Association Meeting Jan. 11.

This showing makes it certain that the monthly handicap tournaments will be continued next year and John Nangle, president of the association, has instructed Irwin's committee to prepare a list of dates for the events in 1930, together with a schedule of all other tournaments to be conducted by the district associatoin next season, and submit it to a meeting of the organization which has been set for Jan. 11.

At that time a Tournament Committee composed of one member from each club will be named to handle all the events, each club will be notified the tournament it has been awarded and at a meeting to be held in February, a definite tournament schedule for 1930 will be adopted.

The Tournament Committee will consider a proposition to hold the district event at a later date than it has been held in the past, many golfers thinking it should be held in June instead of in May.

Two Divisions Proposed.

There also will be some modifications of the handicap tournaments discussed, for it is planned to hold these events in two sections at two different clubs on the same day in order to avoid the congestion which was so troublesome last season.

Some members of the committee think that all players having handicaps of 1 to 15 strokes should constitute an A class and play at one club, while players having handicaps of from 16 to 20 should form class B and play at another club. It is also the opinion of the committee members that prizes should be more attractive next season.

RED GRANGE'S OWN STORY: How the Iceman Became Football's Most Colorful Figure

PADDED OVERALLS WERE HIS FIRST FOOTBALL PANTS; FATHER PAID HIM 25 CENTS PER TOUCHDOWN

THE Post-Dispatch presents herewith the first installment of Red Grange's Own Story of his colorful football career, as told to Westbrook Pegler, in which the former "Wheaton Iceman" tells of his boyhood, how he got into the game, why he selected Illinois University for college training, and what has happened in four years since he quit school to play professionally. The story, in four parts, will appear each Sunday in the Post-Dispatch.

By Red Grange.
As Told to Westbrook Pegler.
INSTALLMENT I.

IT has been four years since I quit the University of Illinois, a green country punk who had stagged most of the time in college because I seldom had 15 cents to buy a girl a soda.

There were other reasons why I was a stag, but this one was sufficient. I might mention, however, that I had been an iceman in the summer time for eight years and had seen the backstairs side of romance and matrimony because the iceman does not knock. He just yells, "Ice!" kicks open the door, and walks into the kitchen.

Within three months after I quit school about Thanksgiving 1925, I had received $100,000 in cash. Later on, I got some more money. I am still making money, for that matter, but those three months were harvest time with me. I haven't got $100,000 now. Just how much I have left of the fortune I collected with Charlie Pyle is a matter which I will leave to your deduction when I have set forth, as I will, in the course of this recountal, a general record of receipts and disbursements.

This should be rather amusing, I think, by contrast with some of the free hand estimates of my earnings, based on free hand estimates of the gate receipts, royalties, and fees Charlie and I picked up.

Athletes Shysters' Prey.

My experience has been such, however, that even if I still had $100,000 I should keep the fact to myself because the public giveth, but the public also taketh away and a man who suddenly makes a fortune in the sport business must write off thousands of dollars for expenses which never occur to a man growing rich in hides and tallow, furniture and carpets or drugs and sundries. There were times when Charlie and I had to send $200 a week for tickets to strawberry festivals, amateur theatricals, dinners, balls and local talent recitals for the benefit of various charities, some of them dubious but influential, which were coming off on dates when we would be 500 miles away.

Moreover, an athlete who suddenly makes a lot of money becomes fair game for all the hair trigger litigants and shyster lawyers in the country. I understand that Gene Tunney never owned an automobile while he was heavyweight champion, realizing the world was full of people who would fall down and yell "Ow," claiming his car had run over them, if they merely heard Gene was in town.

Jolts for the Bank Roll.

I always had wanted an automobile when I was a young fellow and the desire was too strong to be denied when I found I could afford it, but I always loaded my cars with insurance until the axles bowed. A man in that position doesn't dare own a dog. If he does and the dog happens to yawn in public 10 per cent of any given population are sure to sue him for $100,000 each for dog bite. My statistics may not be strictly accurate, but that doesn't affect my general contention, which is borne out by the fact that liability rates on $4000 cars are much higher than the rates on the rolling 'junk piles which wobble through the streets.

People sue the big shots. And juries being composed of people, are generous about their verdicts, on the theory that even if the rich man wasn't to blame, he won't miss the money.

But I am not gloomy. I mention this kind of thing only in passing to show the nature of the invisible wounds a bank roll may suffer in the course of the grapple to keep a dollar once it has been earned in the sport business.

Chooses Stage Business as His Vocation; Picked Illinois Over Two Other Schools

I have seen the country, I have had a good time. Instead of rattling around from job to job, first in one kind of work and then in another, for several years after leaving college, I have learned that my work lies in the show business and have made some progress and money in it. Having made two movies and trouped for almost a year in vaudeville, I have gone so far in my work that I can now walk on a stage without tripping over the backstays and when I'm out there, unlike most world series heroes and fighters who go to the drama, I don't merely stand round sucking my thumb and saying, "Well."

Realizing that there was more to this show business than just charm, I went t some teachers to learn how. So now I can shuffle my feet in the dance numbers and when I have lines to say, I bring my voice up from my kneecaps, instead of emitting reared squeaks from the neck like a ventriloquist's dummy.

One other thing, I have been able to pay back my father, the best friend I ever had, who raised me by hand from the age of about 6, when my mother died, and went into debt for the money to send me through the University of Illinois.

Had Three Schools in Mind.

Incidentally, if the Carnegie Foundation was right about subsidies pay and perquisites for football players, then, I must have been a mental defective when the time came for me to shop around for inducements.

There were three state universities, all members of the Western conference, which looked alike to me when I was ready to sign up. They were Michigan, Ohio State, and Illinois. I had competed in the Illinois State scholastic championship track meets at Champaign in 1918, 1920 and 1921, entering the 100, 220, high jump, and broad jump. In '19, I won the 100 and 220. The next year I won the high jump only and in 1921 I won the broad jump. Whenever a high school athlete would win an event some two or three representatives of various universities would look him up and get him into a casual discussion of his preferences and intentions, if any, beyond high school.

Carl Lundgren, the baseball coach at Illinois, was one of the men who edged over to see me. I happen not to remember who the representatives of the other schools were. But Lundgren had nothing to offer beyond the fine old traditions, the prestige and spirit of Illinois, and it struck me at the time that these were not fit diet for a kid with an undisciplined appetite.

When I was ready to pick my college, two parties of ivory hunters called at the Grange estate in Wheaton, which consisted of a small flat above a store, where my dad, my younger brother, Garland, and I had been keeping bachelor quarters for years.

One party spoke for the University of Michigan. They were alumni. They offered me a job in a clothing store at $50 a month. An Ohio party came later, offering a job in the gymnasium at Columbus on the same terms. But they let me understand that these both were regular working jobs and, of course, that made me think. I had heard of mock jobs for athletes who reported to the haberdashery every third Tuesday, sold one collar button and collected their pay, which was kicked back to the haberdasher by some mysterious alumni committee.

And, in the case of the gymnasium job, it was my impression, strictly from loose talk and hearsay, that a fellow merely had to drop around and dust off a dumb bell every now and again to earn his $50 a month. These alumni delegations assured me, however, that if I took their jobs I would have to do a lot of sweeping, fire the boilers, count up soggy towels, wait on customers and one thing and another as the case might be, whenever I wasn't in class or playing football.

Influenced by George Dawson.

In fact, it seems to me that college town employers, including the colleges themselves, take close advantage of the necessities of students who are working their way through. There is such active competition for work that will pay any money at all, that a man with a store can get student labor for much less money than he would have to pay for the same service in a normal labor market. It must be hard for a family man to make a living as an employe in a college town with hundreds of students around who are willing to take his job for less money. It is something like coolie competition and it may account for the feuds between townies and students in some places.

Well, George Dawson, who has since become rather famous as an amateur golfer, had lived next door to me in Wheaton and had gone to Illinois one year ahead of me. I might say he was the one who recruited me for Illinois, after all. I had a chance to work in a clothing store, there, too, but I would have had to bounce out of my upper deck cot about 5 a. m. every day, including the days of the football season, get up steam, drag out the ashes, sweep and sometimes scrub the floor, dust off the show cases and, in my spare time, wait on dudes coming in to spend 75 cents for a shirt.

I decided I would never be able to carry on my studies and make any teams in athletics if I took this job and my dad told me not to try it because he could borrow the money. So we let it go that way. However, there was one job I turned down on principle of prejudice. That was the job of waiter. This wasn't hard work, but there was something about the idea that stopped me. I used to think it over and a couple of times, when I was a little more broke than usual, I tried to convince myself that I could get used to it. But I just didn't have the gizzard to walk through those kitchen doors with a tray on my arm the first time. My ideas on this subject haven't changed. I freely will concede the dignity of labor and all that kind of thing, but no man can say Red Grange ever brought him his soup and beef a la mode.

There was no doubt in my mind that I would be able to pay my dad within a few years after leaving college, and, later on, I borrowed about a thousand dollars on my own responsibility with the same confidence, although I had not any way of knowing then that within three months after quitting school I would have commercialized the greatest ballyhoo any player ever received to the extent of $100,000 cash.

Sister Never Saw Him Play.

My feeling for my dad was unusually sensitive. There had been no woman in our household for years. I have a sister, Mildred, but after my mother died, my dad thought she would be better off growing up in a household with some feminine influence, so she went to live with a sister of my mother in Williamsport, Pa., and I never saw her again until I had finished college and turned pro.

My sister never has seen me play football, and in fact we were so young when we parted and have been apart so long that we scarcely know each other. She is married now and living in Binghamton, N. Y.

My dad ran the house in Wheaton and in this curious domestic arrangement all of us came to be constitutional bachelors. My brother, Garland, has reneged, taking the vows of holy matrimony, but then he never really was an iceman.

As a kid of 8 or 9 I wanted to be a football player and used to study the pictures of the varsity men in the papers and try to look the part of a football man myself. Once I cut off the legs of my little khaki overalls, stuffed some cotton wadding around the knees, and quilted it with needle and thread, trying to make a pair of football pants.

I got into a game that day and came up out of one scrimmage with a terrific pain in my back that grew so bad that by the time I got home I was faint and pale. My dad asked my trouble and when I told him I had been playing football he yanked me over his knee and whaled me with the flat of his hand. The second or third smack seemed to budge a misplaced vertebra, for something snapped and the pain quit at once. If all of this sounds like a pharaphrase of the Cradle of the Deep, I only can say that it is my story and I stick to it.

But when I got into high school at Wheaton and began to play on the school team under a coach dad became more tolerant. As town marshal he used to police the high school football grounds, which lay on the floor of an old gravel pit. In these games I always was being cut about the eyebrows and I reckon that in high school and college I have had enough stitching done just above the eyes to tailor a suit of clothes. But dad was a rooter now and he was giving me 25 cents for every touchdown I made. In the fall of 1922, against Downers Grove High School, I earned $1.50 this way and against Batavia his bill amounted to $2. I was a pro that early and I must admit that the money incentive was almost as strong as high school loyalty in this inspirational game about then. It was by no means insignificant at Illinois, either, for by this time dad was sending me $5 or $10 for every touchdown I made.

About Blind Dates.

Of course, a man can't run an ambitious social campaign on the amount of backing I had at Urbana. After all, a fellow has to buy a girl a sundae or a bunch of grapes now and then. But I felt no sense of social denial or longing and the only time I had a date with a girl in my first two years, I did so under orders. We were having a house dance at our fraternity and every man in the house was supposed to drag a girl. I said I couldn't dance and knew no girls but one of the brothers said his girl had a chum who was out on a limb for the evening, and they made me bring her.

I forget the name of this unfortunate soul and she may not remember mine but I never shall forg : the stifling boredom and embarrassment of that awful night and I am sure she always will remember the time the red-headed sophomore did about eight miles of broken field dancing on her insteps. Blind dates should be forbidden.

I had no romantic interest in these social jams. There was this bachelor influence in me and, any way, my career on the ice wagon had begun when I was just a freshman in high school. A man named L. C. Thompson owned the ice route in Wheaton and one day he put up a prize of $1 each to any kid who could hoist a 100-pound block to his shoulders. Several of us did it and the next Saturday he asked me to help out on one of his wagons for $5 a day. A week after this one of his men quit and he gave me a regular job, this being in the summer vacation, at $15 a week. I was up to $27 a week by the time I went to the university and before I finished my career on the tailstep of the truck, I was the wagon boss with two helpers and my pay was $50 a week.

As I have intimated, the ice man's views of domestic life are the least appetizing and glamorous. He sees the sink full of dishes with breakfast egg on them and he runs foul of the feminine temper in disillusioning squalls. He always is being yelled at in shrill, angry voices for tracking mud into the kitchen or wrenching a chunk off the cold roast in the ice chest. He sees the female of the species in loose, untidy wrappings, with runover sandals or even bare feet and no housewife ever puts on lipstick for the ice man.

Moreover, he generally gets around in the morning when the squabbles of the breakfast table are still ranking and, on the whole, his observations have a tendency to warn, rather than seduce him. If I were a millionaire father with a son who was showing premature intentions to wed, I should send him up the alleys of a fairly genteel suburb on an ice truck to see for himself.

On the other hand, I will have to confess that the scales which dangle at the stern of the ice truck are a mere symbol of the trade and no more to be taken literally than the dummy watch which hangs outside the watchmaker's shop always pointing fixedly to 20 minutes after eight. The ice man learns to guess the weight of a chunk and to cut a chunk to the weight desired, give or take two pounds. Having done this, he hangs the tongs and the ice on the hook of the scale merely as a professional flourish because the face of the scale is so rusted that it can't be read anyway.

But cynical as I was toward the sex, I had few serious disputes with the women of my route. I was Red the Ice Man to them and they were customers to me, and barring two or three episodes, their railing became familiar routine. An ice man must and will track mud on kitchen floors and it is a custom of the country to give him the devil for it.

One robust lady did keep her husband home from work one morning to give me a licking. She had the voice of a screech owl at best but in her high moments she sounded like a cat and a bulldog tied in a bag. On this occasion she complained, as usual, about the mud from my shoes and I just said, "Mud? How can you tell which is my mud?"

Her unfortunate husband met me down the alley while she looked on from the back porch, and never in my life have I seen such a piteous appeal in the eyes of a man as there was in his while he called me names and threatened to bust me on the nose.

I took it all and promised to do better and he turned to his wife and yelled, "He says he won't do it again, Sweetie Pie."

But half an hour later he met me down the block and shook hands.

"Thanks, brother," he said to me. "You are a sportsman."

GRANGE ATTRACTED TO ILLINOIS U. BY DAWSON, THE GOLFER

"When I was ready to pick my college, two parties of ivory hunters called at the Grange estate in Wheaton, which consisted of a small flat above a store, where my dad, my younger brother, Garland, and I had been keeping bachelor quarters for years. • • • One spoke for Michigan, the other for Ohio State. • • •

"Well, George Dawson, who has since become rather famous as an amateur golfer, had lived next door to me in Wheaton and had gone to Illinois one year ahead of me. I might say he was the one who recruited me for Illinois, after all. RED GRANGE.

GRANGE'S ONLY SISTER NEVER SAW HIM IN A GAME

• • • "I have a sister, Mildred, but after my mother died, my dad thought she would be better off growing up in a household with some feminine influence, so she went to live with a sister of my mother in Williamsport, Pa., and I never saw her again until I had finished college and turned pro.

"My sister never has seen me play football, and in fact, we parted and have been apart so long that we scarcely know each other. She is married now and living in Binghamton, N. Y."—Red Grange.

BARKER PICKS TEAM TO PLAY IN ARENA GAME

Winton E. Barker, president of the St. Louis Professional Soccer League, last night announced the personnel of the "St. Louis All Stars," who will oppose a team of British-born booters at The Arena, Dec. 17, in the first indoor soccer game ever played in St. Louis. The players are drawn from the league clubs, each of the four teams being represented by three men. Barker added that either Ribby Murphy or Oscar Mossman would referee the novel contest, which will be for the benefit of the hospital activities fund of the Jackson Johnson Jr., Post of the American Legion.

Every player in the league volunteered his services, Barker explained, and, as the British-born kickers are donating their services and Col. Ben G. Brinkman, president of the National Exhibition Company, which owns and operates The Arena, is giving the use of the show place, every cent taken in will go to the charity cause, it was pointed out by Jerome F. Dugkan, chairman of the Post's Arrangements Committee. Admission will be 50 cents, with box seats, $1. Only the boxes will be reserved.

To determine what uniforms the local team will wear, the names of the managers of the four pro teams were placed in a hat and Barker picked the name of Billy Clark, mentor of the Madisons. Consequently the "All Stars" will do battle in Madison uniform.

The team:
G.—La Barge, Madisons.
L. B.—Hand, Madisons.
R. B.—Erbe, Millers.
L. H. B.—Benoist, Tablers.
R. H. B.—Lehman, Hellrungs.
C. H. B.—Burke, Madisons.
O. L.—Mulroy, Millers.
I. L.—Hart, Hellrungs.
C.—Moore, Tablers.
O. R.—McHenry, Tablers.
I. R.—Ballam, Millers.
Extra—Ahrens, Hellrungs.

The men were selected with a view to getting the best players for their respective positions, so the locals are expected to present a formidable lineup. The personnel of the British team will not be announced until officials of the pro league pass on the visiting booters to make sure none is on the disqualified list.

The game will not only mark the beginning of indoor soccer in St. Louis, but will be the first time soccer ever has been played indoors with 11-man teams and, adding novelty to novelty, Duggan last night said he was planning on a rugby game as a preliminary feature. Should he succeed in his plan, it would be the first time rugby ever has been played indoors at night.

FOOTBALL TEAM COMPLETES 34 OF 50 PASSES IN 7 GAMES

By the Associated Press.

TRENTON, N. J., Dec. 7.—The undefeated football team of Rider College claims the forward passing championship of the country.

In seven games played during the past season, the Trenton collegians attempted 50 aerials and completed 34, nine of them resulting in touchdowns. None was intercepted.

Girls' Basketball League to Open Wednesday Night

All of four teams of the Greater St. Louis Girls' Basketball Association will be sent through their final practices today for the opening of the 1929-30 season at the Armory, Wednesday night, when the Headlights play Crystal City and the Bachelors meet the Schenbergs.

The Headlights will drill at the Armory, where the Schenbergs also do their practicing. The Bachelors will go through their final prepping at Battery A and Crystal City's athletes will hold their last workout on the Crystal City High School court.

With the arrival of Harry Riddick last week, the Headlight club was overhauled and rebuilt to such an extent that it was removed from the rank of an unknown quantity to a title threat.

Evelyn Sueme, a guard, and Evelyn Neagle, a forward, who were members of the Headlights last year, rejoined the team during the past week and there is a possibility the two Boeckmann sisters, "Dee" and "Gen.", who were also stars with the green and white-clad squad last winter, will come out for basketball in time to be eligible for play in a week or two.

In addition, Catherine Maguire, who starred at guard, but who will be forced to miss the first three games, will come here from Cincinnati, where she has been residing, to rejoin her teammates. Thus the quint that last year set a fast and furious pace before injuries wrecked it, may be back, practically intact, with the exception of Dot Brown, who "jumped" to the Peetz club, a non-league team.

Crystal City has been strengthened by the addition of Lora Connardy and Marie Rogers. The Schenbergs have signed three real stars in Hilda Lange, a forward; Mildred Graham, a guard, and Vatia Evans, a center. The Bachelors were weakened by the loss of Mary Dueker, who joined the Peetz team, although the signing of Evelyn and Louise Aussicker, forwards; Anita Gansman, center, and Cora Gilliland, a guard, may help to offset this loss.

JOHNSTON CITY AND GILLESPIE TO MEET IN SOCCER CUP TIE

JOHNSTON CITY, Ill., Dec. 7.—The Johnston City soccer team, holders of the Illinois amateur championship, have their title at stake when they meet Gillespie here tomorrow afternoon in the first round of the national amateur cup tie.

Johnston City holds a victory over Gillespie this year. The winner of this game will meet the winner of the Royalton-Chester game.

Martha Schuyler To Wed H. B. Hall In Late February

Engagement Is Made Known at Attractive Luncheon Given Yesterday

THE engagement of Miss Martha Schuyler, daughter of Mrs. Ralph L. Thompson, 4311 McPherson avenue, and Henry Bethune Hall, son of Mrs. Marshall Hall, 5362 Waterman avenue, was announced yesterday at an attractive luncheon given by Miss Louise Rexford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ley Peterson Rexford, and Miss Julia Hafner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Hafner, at the Hafner home, 24 Windermere place. The wedding will be an event of late February.

The guests included Mrs. Thompson, Miss Dorothy Ladd, Miss Anita Bowling, Miss Elizabeth Harris, Miss Elizabeth Gray, Miss Christine Gempp, Miss Grace Sweeney, Miss Virginia McVoy, Miss Laura Hancock, Mrs. Richard D'Oyley-Hughes, Mrs. Lindell Gordon, Jr. and Mrs. William A. Borders.

The announcement was made on removable pedestals concealed in place cards of roses, and the table was adorned to correspond.

Miss Schuyler is a graduate of Mary Institute and Smith College, class of 1928. She was her major study in college, and she continued her studies with Leo Miller after her graduation. Miss Schuyler is a granddaughter of the late William Schuyler, St. Louis educator and composer who for many years was principal of Central High School and later of McKinley High. Her paternal grandfather was Montgomery Schuyler, Jr., of Christ Church Cathedral for 40 years. Her maternal grandmother is Mrs. Henry Scammell, 5782 Waterman avenue.

Mr. Hall is a graduate of Yale, class of 1927, and is a member of the University, Bellerive Country Clubs. He is a brother of Snyder Hall, who has won a number of honors in air races.

Miss Christine Jones Makes Her Debut at Log Cabin Club Party

DECORATIONS for the debut party of Miss Christine Jones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Norman Jones, 4628 Pershing avenue, Friday night at the Log Cabin, were cleverly adapted to the club's peculiarly attached type of architecture to make each room a picture in itself, charming, complete without relation to any general scheme of arrangement.

The big rambling clubhouse, built especially for a country manor, was warm with intimate homeiness and old fashioned hospitality.

A different idea was used in decorating each room. In the reception hall gold and smilax was festooned over the wall and ceiling and great clusters of giant white chrysanthemums in tall gilt baskets filled the corners and adorned the colonial mantel case.

The living room was transformed into a scene from the frozen North woods. Large evergreens, ceiling height, grew in a huge circular bower in moss-covered earth through the glow from Northern lights shining in the background. The pungent odor of balsam and cedar pervaded the air. The effect of winter was further enhanced by more than 500 white chrysanthemums simulating snow balls. Frosted smilax covered the walls, ceiling and remaining walls. The only touch of color was afforded by bright red holly, poinsettias cherries and green foliage growing from the tree trunks.

The receiving line, Mr. and Mrs. Jones, their daughter, and her guest, Miss Stern of Chicago, received their 200 guests in this snowy bower.

Miss Jones was gowned in old rose satin and tulle, and carried talisman roses. Miss with pink satin, and Miss Stern wore turquoise blue gown and carried raptures similarly tied. Mrs. Jones wore gold metallic cloth.

The tables for the dinner, which followed dancing, were laid on the inclosed porch, the card room and the smaller dining room, with one of the latter, which was occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Jones and a group of friends, smilax colored a royal blue. Over the walls and outlined the windows. Above the mantel were low bowls of pink roses and chrysanthemums. In a second smaller room the table was decorated with an elaborate arrangement of Pernet roses and candles.

Miss Jones presided over the dinner and their escorts at tables laid for the porch, the walls and ceiling were entirely concealed by masses of smilax in its natural green. The tables were embellished with oblong gold baskets of yellow chrysanthemums and red candles which emerged tall green and yellow candles. More of the tapers were arranged in candelabra.

Miss Christine Jones Makes Her Debut at Log Cabin Club Party

DECORATIONS for the debut party of Miss Christine Jones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Norman Jones, 4638 Pershing avenue, Friday night at the Log Cabin, were cleverly adapted to the club's peculiar detached type of architecture to make each room a picture in itself, charming, complete, without relation to any general scheme or arrangement.

The big rambling clubhouse, built originally for a country manor, was warm with intimate homeiness and old fashioned hospitality.

A different idea was used in decorating each room. In the reception hall gold dipped smilax was festooned over the walls and ceiling and great clusters of giant yellow chrysanthemums in tall gilt baskets filled the corners and adorned the colonial staircase.

The living room was transformed into a scene from the frozen North woods. Frosted evergreens, ceiling height, grew in a semicircular bower in moss-covered earth, with the glow from Northern lights shining in the background. The pungent odor of burning cedar pervaded the air. The effect of winter was further enhanced by more than 500 white chrysanthemums simulating snowballs. Frosted smilax covered the beamed ceiling and remaining walls. The only note of color was afforded by bright red Jerusalem cherries and green foliage growing about the tree trunks.

The tables for the dinner, which preceded dancing, were laid on the inclosed porch, the card room and the smaller dining rooms. In one of the latter, which was occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Jones and a group of their friends, smilax colored a royal blue covered the walls and outlined the window bay. On the mantel were low bowls of pink roses and chrysanthemums. In a second small room the table was decorated with an attractive arrangement of Pernet roses and calendulas.

Two Engagements Of Social Interest Are Made Known

Miss Erna Rice and Cousin, Miss Sarah Jane May, to Become Brides.

TWO engagements of social importance, were announced simultaneously yesterday.

In informal notes written to friends, Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Rice of Oak Knoll, Clayton road and Big Bend boulevard, made known the betrothal of their daughter, Miss Erna Rice, and James A. Singer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Singer, 49 Kingsbury place.

At the same time announcement was made by Mr. and Mrs. Morton May of Brentmoor Park of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Sarah Jane May, and Millard Waldheim, son of Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Waldheim, 5925 Lindell boulevard.

Mrs. Rice and Mrs. May are sisters. The parents of the young women will give a reception for them and their fiances the evening of Dec. 23 at the Westwood Country Club, to which friends of both families will be invited.

Miss Rice attended Mary Institue and John Burroughs School, and will be graduated in June from Bryn Mawr College. Mr. Singer is an alumnus of Harvard University, and will receive his degree in June from the Law School of Washington University.

Miss May prepared for college at the Chevy Chase School, Chevy Chase, Md., and now attends Skidmore College in Saratoga Springs, N. Y. Mr. Waldheim is a graduate of Yale.

Visitor From Paris

JUDGE AND MRS. VIRGIL RULE, 52 Westminster place, have as their guest their niece, Miss Martha Steinwender, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herman A. Steinwender of Paris, France, who arrived Thursday night. Mr. and Mrs. Steinwender and their family are former St. Louisans, and Miss Steinwender will be entertained informally.

The visitor has been the guest of friends in New York since landing and after her stay here will go to Okmulgee, Ok., where she will spend the Christmas holidays with her sister, Mrs. John I. Carey.

Rexford-Wilson Wedding

INVITATIONS have been received from Mr. and Mrs. Ley Peterson Rexford, 47 Westminster place, for the marriage of their daughter, Miss Louise Augustine Rexford, and Eugene Smith Wilson Jr. of New York to take place Saturday, Dec. 28 at 8 o'clock in the evening at the Central Presbyterian Church.

Attendants for Two Important Weddings

MISS ELEANOR CHURCH, daughter of Mrs. Rolla Wells, 25 Westmoreland place, has chosen the young women who will attend her at her wedding Jan. 15 to Lee Johnson, son of Mrs. Oscar Johnson, 38 Portland place. Miss Louise Church will be her sister's maid of honor, and the bridesmaids are to be Miss Mary Merwin Shepley, Miss Anne West, Miss Almira Steedman, Miss Lily Busch Magnus, Miss Jane Tyler Messick, Miss Ellen Walsh Bates and Miss Mary Hunter Marsden of New York. Mr. Johnson's list of groomsmen is not complete.

The ceremony will be performed at 6:30 o'clock in the evening at the Wells home, by Father Sylvester Tucker of the St. Louis Cathedral and will be followed by a large reception. Mr. Johnson and his bride will sail from New York on the Ile de France for Paris, later going to Cairo to board the Columbus for a world tour. They will return to St. Louis to make their home.

Miss Magnus and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Magnus, will give a dinner for Miss Church and her fiance Tuesday evening at the Magnus home, 4 Hortense place. Last night Mr. and Mrs. Sterling Edmunds, 33 Vandeventer place, entertained for them at the St. Louis Country Club.

Arrangements have been completed for the wedding of Miss Dorothy Ladd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Ladd, 4439 Westminster place, and Woodson K. Woods Jr., son of Woodson K. Woods of Brentmoor.

The ceremony will take place at 4:30 o'clock the evening of Jan. 11 at the Second Baptist Church. The Rev. Dr. M. Ashby Jones will officiate, assisted by the Rev. Dr. David M. Skilling of Webster Groves. A reception will follow at the Ladd home. Mrs. Gordon Jaques will attend her sister as matron of honor and the bridesmaids will be Mrs. Charles A. Niekamp, formerly Miss Martha Strickler; Miss Ardath Noah, Miss Elizabeth Gray, Miss Margaret Condie and Miss Laura Hancock.

James Woods will be his brother's best man, and the groomsmen will be E. Baird McDonald Jr., Banks McDonald, Alexander John Alexander, Spring Station, Ky., cousin of the bridegroom; Charles A. Niekamp and Allen McMath. Gordon Jaques Jr. will be ring bearer.

Mr. Woods and his bride will go to Honolulu, via San Francisco on their wedding trip, and will make their home upon their return with Mr. Woods Sr.

A number of parties for Miss Ladd and her fiance will be given after the Christmas holidays.

Travel Notes Of St. Louisans

MISS JOSEPHINE SCULLIN, daughter of Mrs. Josephine Salorgne Scullin, 4639 Maryland avenue, will depart Dec. 26, for Cincinnati, O., where she will be the guest of Miss Elaine Flach and will attend the debut ball of Miss Flach Dec. 27. Ellen Koken Names Her Bridal Party

MISS ELLEN KOKEN, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter F. Koken, 264 Jefferson road, whose marriage to Carl Fox Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Fox, 324 South Elm avenue, will take place Saturday, Dec. 28, has chosen for her maid of honor her sister, Miss Jane Koken. The bridesmaids will be Miss Sophie Fox, a sister of the prospective groom; Miss Julia Gehm and Miss Ann Koken, younger sister. Cottrell Fox will serve his brother as best man and the groomsmen will be Parke Kooser, David Tompkins, Donald McClure, Ernest Newman and John Koken, a brother of the prospective bride.

The ceremony will take place at the Koken home with the Rev. George R. Dodson of the Church of the Unity officiating. A reception will follow, after which Mr. Fox and his bride will depart for their new home at Jackson, Miss., where Mr. Fox has been for two years.

Several parties have been given for Miss Koken, among them being a tea last Wednesday with Miss Ruth Frampton as hostess. Wednesday afternoon Miss Koken will give a trousseau tea, and Wednesday, Dec. 18, Miss Juliet Kooser, Miss Julia Gehm and Miss Elizabeth Danforth will be hostesses at a luncheon at the Westborough Country Club.

The wedding of Miss Roma Schaefer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Schaefer of 30 Yale avenue, University City, and Hays Bingenheimer, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Bingenheimer of 5070 Cates avenue took place Friday evening at the home of the bride's parents. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Kenneth R. Sausaman of Eden Methodist Episcopal Church.

The bride was attended by Miss Ruth Beckman as maid of honor. Miss Hazel Bingenheimer, twin sister of the bridegroom and Miss Florence Stoermer were bridesmaids. Dale Voelker was best man and Woodrow Bingenheimer and Russell Nea were ushers.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of white satin made on princess lines with an uneven hem line touching the floor at the back. The only trimming was a bertha of lace. Her veil of tulle was ornamented with lace to match and was fastened to the lace cap with orange blossoms. She carried a sheaf of white roses. The bride's attendants also wore gowns fashioned on princess lines made in three shades of rose and carried sheaf bouquets of roses to match their frocks. The bride's mother wore a gown of pale blue crepe satin and the bridegroom's mother was in ecru chiffon. Both wore shoulder bouquets of roses.

After the ceremony a reception took place at the Forest Park Hotel where the parents of the bride also received congratulations on their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Bingenheimer will leave for a wedding trip through the South, spending the greater part of their time at Palm Beach and Miami.

The bride is a graduate of Washington University and a member of Alpha Xi Delta and Phi Beta Kappa.

Mr. and Mrs. P. E. Burton, 204 East Swon avenue, were host and hostess at a bridge party last evening at their home.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip O. Viall, 220 Bristol place, will be host and hostess at tea this afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock. Among those who will assist are Mrs. Edward H. Barstow, Mrs. G. B. Gannett, Mrs. C. S. Lake Jr., Mrs. Arthur Proetz, Mrs. James Fred Schlafly, all of St. Louis; Mrs. Stratford Lee Morton, Mrs. Lovell Bay and Mrs. George Neuhoff Jr. of Webster Groves. Roses and chrysanthemums will be used in decorating the tea tables and rooms. This is the first of a series of teas to be given this season by Mrs. Viall, and nearly all of the guests today will be from St. Louis.

Mrs. C. E. Ervin, 255 Blackmer place, will arrive home today from Sheffield, Ala., where she was called by the illness of her mother, Mrs. A. J. Iyie. Mrs. Ivie, who has often been the guest of her daughter, has many friends in Webster Groves. She is convalescing.

The Rev. Dwight Bradley of the First Congregational Church will conclude his ministry in Webster Groves on Jan. 1, when he will go to Newton Center, Mass., to assume the pastorate of the church once led by Cotton Mather.

Mrs. Charles M. Avery, 236 Hawthorne avenue, was the hostess for her sewing club Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. A. D. Greenlee, 459 Bellview avenue, entertained Group E of the First Congregational Church Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Warren, 236 North Elm avenue were the host and hostess at a contract bridge dinner last evening at their home. The guests numbering 18 were seated at a long table in the center of which was a low bowl of rosebuds, snapdragon, chrysanthemums and gypsophelium in pastel shades. Tall candles of periwinkle blue were placed in silver candlesticks, and throughout the lower floor the only lights used were candles. Mr. and Mrs. Warren have been forced to cancel several of the parties planned for last month on account of the sudden illness of their aunt, Mrs. John Lawton of Columbia, Mo., who has been their guest. Mrs. Lawton is now convalescing at St. Luke's Hospital.

College Night Supper Party Reservations

MRS. WALTER J. MUELLER, 6245 San Bonita avenue, has announced the following reservations for the after-theater supper party at Hotel Chase tomorrow night following the College Club scholarship benefit performance of "Bird in Hand" at the Shubert Rialto:

Mrs. Harry Collins, chairman of the Scholarship Benefit Committee, and Mr. Collins have reserved a table and will have as their guests Mr. and Mrs. Trifon Von Schrenk.

At Mrs. Walter J. Mueller's table will be Mr. Mueller, Mr. and Mrs. Chester Kotsrean, Mr. and Mrs. George Hetlage, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Franey.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernst Wetteroth will entertain at another table with Mr. and Mrs. William Polster, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Roepke, Dr. and Mrs. Walter Kirchner, and Mr. and Mrs. Lambert E. Walther.

Another party will be that of Mrs. John H. Schultz Jr., who will have the following guests at her table: Mr. and Mrs. Marion Bracken, Mr. and Mrs. Henderson Emanuel, Mrs. L. G. C. Miller, Mrs. Arthur Miller, Dr. William Hoelscher, and Mr. Bausch.

Miss Ida Lee Pollack will entertain and have as her guests Miss Violet Messerle, Miss Bebe Behymer, Robert Owens and Robert McClintock.

Other table reservations for large and small parties have been made by Mrs. William Wittrig, Miss Charlotte Gerhard, Miss Florence Runge, Miss Helen Bechtell, Mrs. Robert L. Latzer, Mrs. Earl Nelson, Mrs. William T. Nardin, Mrs. Edward F. Beckman, and Miss Marjorie Graham.

Additional reservations for tables are being made with Miss Hildegarde Frerichs, 4557 West Pine boulevard, today and tomorrow morning. Tickets for the play are being sold at Ampico Hall, 1005 Olive street, tomorow from 11 to 2 o'clock by members of the Benefit Committee.

ing the dinner. The table decorations were chrysanthemums in shades of yellow and bronze, and yellow tapers in silver candlesticks.

Mrs. Elmer Darling and her small daughter, Joan, will depart this evening for their home in Auburn, Me., after spending the past two months with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. C. Hall, 243 Bristol place. Mr. Darling, who accompanied them to St. Louis, departed for the East a fortnight ago.

Mrs. Walter F. Koken, 364 Jefferson road, will be the hostess to a number of her friends at a trousseau tea Tuesday afternoon and the following afternoon the friends of her daughter, Miss Ellen Koken, have been invited as guests. The marriage of Miss Koken and Carl Fox Jr. will take place Saturday, Dec. 28. Mrs. W. A. Huckstep, 337 Mason avenue, will be the hostess at a meeting of the W. C. T. U. Wednesday afternoon. A special Christmas program has been arranged.

Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Starke of St. Joseph, Mich., and their son, Malcolm Starke, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Hall, 219 Sylvester avenue, last week.

Mrs. C. O. Smith, 720 Fairview avenue, was the hostess at luncheon Wednesday afternoon for the representatives of several organizations. The luncheon was sponsored by the Peace Council of Webster Groves.

Miss Julia Gehm, 325 Plant avenue, has had as her guest for a fortnight Miss Katherine Sinclair of Steubenville, O.

The marriage of Miss Edna Mortensen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Mortensen, 315 Atalanta avenue, to Martin J. Toft of Lilac and Ruth avenues, took place Thursday evening, Nov. 28, at Bethany Lutheran Church, with the Rev. N. Bentsen officiating. The bride had as her attendants her sisters, Miss Hannah and Miss Evelyn Mortensen. Bonnie Yeager was the flower girl. Neal Toft was best man for his brother and Robert Mortensen was the groomsman. A reception at the home of the bride's parents followed the ceremony, after which Mr. and Mrs. Toft departed for a honeymoon trip in the East. They will be at home at 504 Lisette avenue, on their return to Webster Groves.

The Lockwood Parent-Teacher Association has changed the date of its next meeting from Dec. 11 to Dec. 20. A program will be presented by the pupils of the upper grades. The Avery P. T. A. will hold its regular meeting Tuesday evening in the gymnasium. An address will be given by D. S. Leland of John Burroughs School, who will tell of his visit with the Boy Scouts abroad last summer.

Sorority Circle Bazar.

Sorority Circle will hold its Christmas bazar at the home of Mrs. L. E. Bersche, 460 Edgewood drive, Clayton, tomorrow from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m. In addition to the bazar luncheon will be served. The proceeds will be added to the fund for this year's budget.

Never Before in Vandervoort's History Have We Been Able to Offer a Complete Living-Room Ensemble of This Quality at $100.00

Three-Piece Suite

Upholstered in Jacquard Velour or Tapestry

Sturdy hardwood frames. Backs and seats of full web construction. All moss filling and hand-tied springs. Outside back and arms covered with same fabric.

Payable on the Deferred Payment Plan

We designed the entire ensemble and bought the fabrics to meet a large demand for a quality suite at a low price. Our own exacting specifications have been followed to the letter. Whoever secures one of these ensembles, while a limited quantity lasts, will profit indeed.

Until you've seen these ensembles . . . . until you've lounged in the club chair, armchair or divan, you can't thoroughly appreciate what a luxurious gift any one of them, or the whole set, would make.

Street Fair Background for New York Party

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.

An old-fashioned street fair, set in the background of a Park avenue hotel, was the method chosen by Mr. and Mrs. Robert T. Stone for the amusement of the young married set Tuesday night. Their guests, costumed as Egyptian dancers, snake-charmers and country folk, arrived at dinner time to be ushered into the ball room, decked with poinsettias, palms and holiday greens.

After dinner served from small tables the guests danced to the strains of a jazz orchestra and joined in the street fair amusements until midnight when they were entertained by specialty dancers and saxophone players.

The December ball, given at the Ritz-Carlton Thursday night in the aid of the Grosvenor neighborhood House gave the "debs" an opportunity to bask in the social limelight once more. Miss Gladys Rockefeller, Miss Anne Vanderhoef and Miss Leta Clews were among the season's butterflies who served on the debutante committee for the affair.

At supper time came the cabaret entertainment when Miss June Blossom, another debutante, and Ward Fox gave an exhibition of ballroom dancing, showing the new, slow side step that marks his season's fox trot.

Mrs. Clifford Brokaw Jr. and Mrs. Frank P. Shepard were among those who assisted in arranging the affair.

The wedding of Miss Anne Crawford and John Boyd Ballantine were married in the Central Presbyterian Church. The church was decorated in Christmas greens, while the gowns of the bridal attendants were fashioned of white and red satin. The capes of their flowing white satin frocks were lined with red. Crimson turbans and bows on their slippers completed the color scheme. They carried tailisman roses.

The brides' gown was of ivory satin, designed with a long court train and a wide flounce of rose point lace, her tulle veil was held in place by orange blossoms and she carried a shower bouquet of gardenias and lies of the valley.

The debutantes busied themselves with plans for the opening of the new Junior League headquarters, which takes place tomorrow. During the afternoon officers of the league will hold a reception.

A glass-inclosed swimming pool, a theater school, a baby shelter with sunlit wards to carry on the league's charity work, and even a dog room for the care of neglected canines have been included in the new headquarters.

Cold weather has brought the indoor polo season. The arena of Squadron A headquarters on Madison avenue resounds these days to the click of mallets and the clatter of horses' hoofs and Saturday evening finds the galleries packed. The riding club is also taking an interest in indoor polo and many of the smart folk may be seen cantering around its tan bark. Thap shooting ahs attracted other members of society who have country homes on Long Island. The women hold their shoots on Thursday afternoons, the men on Saturdays. Mrs. Hunt T. Dickinson is chairman of arrangements for the women's shoots.

Capital Separates Music From Society

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.

MRS. HOOVER, first lady of the land, and some ladies of the Cabinet circle, dissassociated music from real society events as affected by official mourning and when on Wednesday morning the first of the series of Townsend morning musicales was given, they attended.

To keep any official significance from being attached to her presence, Mrs. Hoover left the White House box vacant and occupied a seat in the rear of other guests. However, her presence could not pass unnoticed for the White House limousine with its huge coat of arms stood before the hotel where the musicale was given. A large number of persons congregated in the street to see her drive away after the program. She wore a black fur coat and a small black hat with a rim shading her eyes.

Mrs. Stephen B. Elkins of West Virginia and Washington, who is in mourning for the recent death of a son, also attended and officials and diplomats in general felt free to attend despite official mourning for Secretary Good, which will end Dec. 18.

Senator Lawrence C. Phipps of Colorado, Senator Millard E. Tydings of Maryland, Senator Arthur Capper of Kansas and Senator David I. Walsh of Massachusetts are on the Reception Committee for the Bachelors' Cotillion, an extremely fashionable organization which holds dances several times a season.

Brigadier-General William E. Horton is chairman of the Floor Committee and last season Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, the sister and hostess of Vice President Curtis, headed the receiving line and will again do so at the later cotillions. For the cotillion Monday, Mme. Prochnik, wife of the Minister of Australia, will stand first.

There will be dancing at all the more important debut parties. Miss Junia Culbertson, daughter of the United States Ambassador to Chile, will fairly dance into Washington society. The Chilean Ambassador and Senora Davila, both of whom are fond of the art, will give an afternoon reception with dancing in honor of Miss Culbertson Dec. 19, and she will be presented to society by the Ambassador and Mrs. Culbertson at a large ball on Christmas eve.

This will be one of the most brilliant dancing events of the entire winter. Cabinet members, diplomats of all rank, and society folk will greet the debutante. Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, president of the National Geographic Society, and Mrs. Grosvenor, who have a debutante daughter, Miss Carol Grosvenor, will entertain Miss Culbertson and a large group of other young folk at dinner before the ball.

Senator Park Trammell of Florida gave a rather unusual party in the Senate private dining room a few days ago when his guests were not high officials or diplomats or his colleagues in the Senate, but a crowd of little children from the Gospel Mission Home.

Where Christmas Shopping doesn't strain your pocketbook

Our main store, Olive at Eleventh, will be open Saturday afternoons until Christmas. Branch stores will remain open evenings until 9 o'clock.

AT 11th and Olive is a corner where many wise shoppers are selecting practical Christmas gifts... gifts people will use and appreciate. These gifts are selected leisurely, without the usual holiday rush. And they'll be paid for leisurely in small monthly payments. There is no straining of the Christmas budget when you select your gifts at the Gas Company. You can take all year to pay.

Countless hours of pleasure are yours with a Templetone radio

Tastes differ in radio entertainment. Some like jazz...some like classical music...others want instructive and educational information...but all agree on one thing: they want a clear, natural life-like tone. Templetone radio brings you just that. Whether tuned real low and soft or amplified to fill a large hall, Templetone's performance is as rich and mellow as if the artist were in the same room with you. Why not enjoy the kind of radio entertainment Templetone brings? You can buy a Templetone on small monthly payments and you'll get a liberal allowance for your old radio. Free home demonstrations.

Make Christmas complete with a fireplace heater

For centuries the cheery glow of an open fire has been part of Christmas tradition. Our modern age has improved on the old coal and wood fire and has adopted the gas fireplace heater. These beautifully designed Radiantfires are clean, free from dust, smoke and ashes and they give out a healthful heat which science has found contains the invigorating ultra-violet and infra-red rays of the sun. For as little as $1.80 down you can equip your home with a Radiantfire and take 12 months to pay the balance.

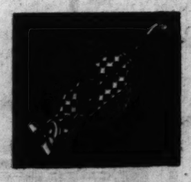
Attractive lamps are welcome gifts

Every home likes plenty of lamps. Floor lamps and table lamps, bridge lamps, boudoir lamps and lamps whose mission is merely to be decorative. New stocks of beautiful lamps await you at all four Laclede stores. Slender metal stands, ornamented bases, parchment shades that are vivid splashes of color. Splendid Christmas gifts that combine beauty, utility and style with economy. Can be purchased for 95¢ down, 10 months to pay the balance.

Premier makes every day a holiday



The practical woman is always pleased with a gift that lightens housework. That's why Premier Vacuum cleaners are such popular Christmas gifts. They save hours of time and energy. Most people buy a large Premier and the remarkable Spic-Span, for with this handy little cleaner no attachments are necessary. The cost is less than you'll pay for most other cleaners, even though you'll need extra attachments. So you see there's a reason for the popularity of the Premier family. During December Premiers can be purchased for only $2.50 down.

An Electrolux Gas Refrigerator is a lifetime gift. For years and years it will provide perfect automatic refrigeration economically, without requiring any attention or repair. There is nothing to get out of order for there is no moving machinery. It costs little to operate for it uses only a tiny gas flame and a trickle of water. It can be purchased on small monthly payments. Install your gas refrigerator now and pay nothing for 90 days. $35 is allowed for your old ice box when traded in on a 7 cu. ft. Electrolux.

A glittering array of shining electrical gifts

Beautiful, useful and inexpensive electrical appliances make very acceptable Christmas gifts. Waffle irons, toasters, percolators, popcorn poppers and other useful appliances that most everyone wants but doesn't buy because "someone might give me that for Christmas." These electrical gifts can be purchased on small monthly payments.

Broadcasts For School Children to Begin Feb. 4

Two Afternoon Programs a Week to Go on Air Over Columbia Chain — Radio Manufacturer Will Share Cost of Educational Test Series.

SERIES of educational broadcasts, designed for reception of schoolrooms in this country, is planned to begin Feb. 4, next, and will be sponsored by the Columbia system and the Grigsby-Grunow Co. of Chicago.

Two afternoon half-hour programs will be broadcast over Columbia chain stations each week until the first week in June. The programs will be for classes from the fifth grade through junior high school, and will cover a number of subjects in several types of presentation, so that the most satisfactory method of using broadcasting for children may be studied.

The decision to broadcast this series followed several months of radio education research by both the sponsoring companies. W. S. Paley, president of the Columbia system, some months ago was appointed by the Secretary of the Interior to serve on the Advisory Committee on Education by Radio, as a member of the fact-finding subcommittee. Ray S. Erlandson, a former secretary of the National Education Association, who is educational director for the Grigsby-Grunow Co., has been conducting a similar study. Research, it was discovered, was difficult because practically no work had been done on a national scale in educational broadcasting to the schoolroom reception. It was then determined to present a "curriculum of the air," upon which to base further tests and study.

Because of the experimental nature of the series, it will be divided into two distinct parts. A half hour each week will be devoted to dramatizations for children, based on American historic personages, the dramas presenting the most significant events in which they had parts.

Among the events tentatively decided upon for inclusion in the history series are the discovery of America, the landing of the Pilgrims, signing of the Declaration of Independence, Daniel Boone and Western expansion, Fulton and the first steamboat, Lewis and Clark, the discovery of gold in California, Sam Houston, Theodore Roosevelt and The Hague peace conference.

The second weekly series will be divided into several parts to test the adaptability of radio to teaching various subjects. American literature, American music, political science or civics, health and hygiene, and nature study are the subjects which have been selected for broadcasts.

Stokowski and Philadelphia Orchestra Will Play Over KSD This Afternoon

Final Concert in Special Philco Series Will Begin at 4:30 P. M.—Chicago Orchestra to Render Stravinsky's "Fire Bird" Suite.

TODAY will bring the final concert by Leopold Stokowski and the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra in the special Philco series over KSD. It will begin at 4:30 this afternoon and continue a full hour, and will bring a music by three of the greatest of French composers, including the brilliant Hungarian March of Berlioz, the Cesar Franck Symphony in D minor, and the "Festivities" nocturne of Debussy.

Franck's Symphony, now ranked with the greatest works of the kind, was long neglected, its score gathering dust on the writer's shelves while symphonies which today are forgotten were being applauded throughout Europe. A shabby, somewhat drab figure, Cesar Franck spent his week days from morning until night teaching and his Sundays in the organ loft of Sainte Clothilde.

Stokowski's temporary farewell to radio marks the end of one of the outstanding series on the air this year. It was brought to a coast-to-coast hookup of stations only after months of work to persuade the internationally famous conductor that radio transmission and receiving sets had reached the stage where great symphony orchestras could broadcast and be done justice to. Stokowski's conversion to radio has been complete.

There should be the more interest in the concert by the Chicago Symphony Orchestra at 2 o'clock this afternoon over KSD because its conductor, Dr. Frederick Stock, has programmed the "Fire Bird" suite of Stravinsky. The commotion caused by Stokowski's announcement that his orchestra would broadcast Stravinsky's "Sacrifice of Spring," and the vehement expression of distaste and appreciation by radio listeners following the Philidalphia Orchestra's November air concert, will be recalled. In fact, the musical conservatives and modernists among listeners are still debating Stokowski's radio innovation. The "Fire Bird" suite has been broadcast at least once before. It was remarked by radio writers that the work was distinctly interesting.

In Stravinsky's "L'Oiseau de Feu," a story of Russian folk-lore is depicted, colored by the supernatural influence of characters well known in Slavic legends. It tells of a young Russian, Ivan Tsarevich, who, wandering in the night, discovers the Fire Bird plucking golden apples from a silver tree, and, after a chase, captures her. Heeding her pleading, he releases her after she has given him a glowing feather. As dawn comes, Ivan wanders into the park of an ancient castle from which 13 maidens appear. He conceals himself and watches them as they pluck apples from the silver tree.

When he reveals his presence, he is given one of the apples and the maidens withdraw into the castle, where they are held as slaves by Katschei, who, like Medusa, has the power to turn those who behold him into stone. Ivan opens the gate of the castle to follow the maidens, and is confronted by Katschei and a horde of his monsters.

Ivan is saved by the grateful Fire Bird. He discovers the egg which holds the secret of the wizard's life. He dashes it to the ground, the wizard dies, the castle crumbles into nothingness, and the maidens are liberated, one of whom Ivan claims for his wife.

The movements to be played today are the introduction, "The Fire Bird and Her Dance," the "Dance of the Princesses," "The Infernal Dance of the Katschei" and the "Berceuse," which flows without interruption into the finale.

The "Petite Suite" of Debussy, written for two pianos as was the custom of its composer, was orchestrated by Henri Brusser. It is in four movements, "En Bateu," "Cortege," "Manuet" and "Ballet."

The overture to "Ruy Blas" was written as a musical prologue to Victor Hugo's play, and the Seventh Symphony was composed during one of the brightest periods of Beethoven's life.

The Chicago Orchestra also is to play the "Ruy Blas" overture of Mendelssohn, two movements from Beethoven's Seventh Symphony, and the "Petite Suite" of Debussy.

William Mengelberg, conductor of the Philharmonic Symphony Society of New York, one of the world's great orchestras, will lead the orchestra in the Atwater Kent concert at 8:15 p. m. Kathryn Meisle, contralto of the Chicago opera, and Toscha Seidel, the Russian violinist, will be the soloists on this program.

KSD's broadcasting schedule for today follows:

"Spanish Dreams," with Julian Oliver, tenor, as soloist, at 12:30 p. m.:

Te Quiero (I Love You)	Serrano
	Julian Oliver
Valencia	Padilla

Nocturne "Festivities"	Debussy

ADURANT "Heroes of the World" broadcast, at 6 p. m. The story of Charles XII, King of Sweden, is scheduled to be dramatized.

The Warrior King of Sweden was one of the most brilliant military leaders of all time. In 1700 the rule of Charles, then a high-spirited youth of 18, ignorant of treachery and war, was suddenly threatened by three powerful enemies. His action in the crisis that changed him from youth to manhood and made him a great military leader will be portrayed in the radio drama.

Capitol Theater Family at 6:30 p. m.

The four Frohne Sisters, harmony singers, will be featured. Others on this program include Louise Bave, coloratura soprano; Westell Gordon, lyric tenor; Hannah Klein, pianist; Waldo Mayo, violinist; Dorothea Beckloff, crooner, and the Capitol Orchestra under the direction of Yasha Bunchuk.

Kathryn Meisle and Toscha Seidel, Violinist, in Atwater Kent Concert at 8:15—Warrior King Chief Character in Durant Drama.

Times Square Blues, from "Times Square"	—Black
I'm Only Making Believe	Ensemble.

David Lawrence's talk on "Our Government" at 8 p. m.

Atwater Kent concert at 8:15 p. m. Kathryn Meisle, contralto of the Chicago Civic Opera Co., is to be heard with Willem Mengelberg, internationally known director of the Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra, and Toscha Seidel, violinist.

Miss Meisle is not only a confirmed radio broadcaster, with an exclusive contract to broadcast only for Atwater Kent radio concerts, but she is likewise a radio "fan." In her home she has two receivers and when on tour and singing in opera, carries with her an especially constructed portable receiver.

Willem Mengelberg, director of the Philharmonic Orchestra of New York—the oldest symphony orchestra in America and one of the oldest musical organizations in the world with a continuous history—is the third of the famous conductors to be presented in the Atwater Kent hour series.

Toscha Seidel is one of the great young violinist pupils of Leopold Auer. A critic has said that Seidel makes the violin sparkle and glitter as well as sing the poetry of music. He made his debut as a concert violinist when but 16 years of age and his first appearance in America when he was 19.

ACME.

JACQUES THIBAUD, the French violinist, and LEONORA CORTEZ, pianist, who are to play in the Baldwin concert over KWK at 6:30 this evening.

Percy Grainger Will Play Piano on KSD

Percy Grainger, famous pianist and composer, will play some of his own music and a Tschaikowsky composition in the Mobilell concert over KSD at 7 o'clock Wednesday night.

Grainger was born in Melbourne, Australia. He studied in Germany with Busoni.

From 1900 to 1915 he lived in London and it was during his life in England that he collected the folk tunes which have figured so effectively in his arrangements and compositions. He has lived in this country 14 years.

Many Sports Broadcasts Next Year Are Promised

Radio Manufacturers' Association Gives Assurances to Listeners That All Events of Nation-Wide Interest Will Be Put on Air by Chains and Local Stations.

BASEBALL, boxing and football broadcasts will be a principal feature in 1930 radio entertainment, despite the opposition of many promoters and ball team owners, according to B. G. Erskine, chairman of the Committee on Broadcasting of the Radio Manufacturers' Association.

"Sports broadcasts have proven so popular, that broadcasting interests, the national chain and local stations, are making plans for even more extensive broadcasts," says a statement issued from the offices of the R. M. A.

"Every important national sporting event with a nation-wide appeal will be broadcast, according to information received by Erskine, says the statement, which was issued following conferences between officers of the networks, the National Association of Broadcasters, the R. M. A. and the radio jobbers' and dealers' associations.

"Through the arrangements made by the national radio chains and the co-operation of local broadcast stations," says Erskine, "we are assured that every national sporting event will go on the air and be available to the radio public. This includes the prospective heavyweight world's champion boxing contest early this winter.

"The chain companies, having already concluded a great program of sport events from the football gridirons, will go ahead with extensive future programs of sports broadcasting.

"Local stations in many cities are also working closely with radio interests to handle sport events of limited territorial interest.

"There is every assurance that the radio public will be provided amply with entertainment from the fields of sports.

"There is no reason for concern on the part of the radio public or in the radio industry lest sports events will not continue to be a major feature of broadcast entertainment, as arrangements already made by broadcasting interests insure splendid athletic entertainment programs.

"Although some sports promoters are disposed to limit or prevent broadcasting of sporting events, our studies indicate that this is a local problem and confined to some local sports promoters. Others are glad to have sporting features broadcast. So far as athletic events of a national character, such as baseball, world series, championship boxing contests, and all important football and other games, even some of limited local or regional interest, are concerned, there will be wide and excellent broadcasting. The national chains, especially, and many local stations have made and will continue to make athletic events prominent broadcast features."

Here and There On the Air

By J. L.

VIRGINIA GARDINER, who deserted the concert stage to become radio's newest dramatic find, describes herself as "versatile, although not proficient, in many arts."

Miss Gardiner was born in Philadelphia. She first manifested interest in singing while a child.

Later her parents moved to Toledo. It was there while still at a tender age, although past the "curls and pink bow stage," that she made her first public appearance. And public appearances became more numerous as time rolled on and soon she was forced to make up her mind whether she would sing or become a dramatic actress.

A free scholarship from Mme. Sembrich of the Metropolitan answered the question after the girl had studied for two years at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia. Two years of study under the personal supervision of the Metropolitan personality and numerous concerts followed.

Then someone mentioned radio and Miss Gardiner came to the National Broadcasting Co. for an audition.

She told those who were to hear her that she could "sing and act." She "acted" first and further auditions were postponed while hurried lessons in microphone technique were delivered.

Since that day she has been heard in the following NBC programs: Triadors, Mystery House, Empire Builders and Radio Guild.

Sir Harry Lauder's bill for singing last Sunday night entitled listeners to more songs than could be crowded into the 15-minute Enna Jettick broadcast over the Blue chain. That was why he sang also in Collier's Hour.

Pat Barnes has started a series of children's concerts over WGN at 5:45 Sunday afternoons.

HARRIET LEE, who has been singing with the Coco Couriers on the Columbia chain and is reported to have been engaged for the Paramount-Publix broadcasts.

Marie Kurenko, the "Russian Nightingale," who sang in last Sunday's Atwater Kent hour over KSD, is the wife of Feodor Gostzoff, a baritone. As the Atwater Kent concert ended, Gostzoff went on the air in a concert over WFAA, Dallas, Tex.

Al Jolson has signed contracts for a concert tour of the world. He is to make his first concert appearance Jan. 15, at El Paso, Tex. He will do 10 concerts, then spend a vacation at Palm Beach, and sail for Europe. He is to sing in every large city on the Continent as well as in China, Japan, India, Australia and South America. He will take along a string trio and a noted song writer as piano accompanist.

John McCormack, the Irish tenor, is said to have gotten half a million dollars for his debut in moving pictures. He last sang on the air on Thanksgiving night, his voice being broadcast from Los Angeles over a chain including KSD.

Chauncey Parsons, tenor of the Yeast Foamers programs, has such a wide vocal range that when he sings songs pitched relatively low, such as Roses of Picardy," he is often mistaken for a baritone. But when he goes up after the "high ones," there are few listeners to NBC programs who deny him the title of "tenor."

Mrs. Gail Eldredge, who was director of Farm Hour Programs over KMOX for the past year and was known to listeners as "Gay Lee," has resigned as a member of the staff. She is the wife of Clarence Eldredge, general manager of "The Missouri Ruralist." KMOX Farm Hour programs are now from the Columbia system from 12 to 1:00 p. m. each day, except Sunday.

A playlet entitled "Things Are Not What They Seem," will be presented by the Toy Theater Players over KMOX Saturday, Dec. 14, at 4:45 p. m.

HELLO, FOLKS!

Santa's Speaking

"NOW HERE'S A RADIO SO GOOD IT NEEDS NO AERIAL"

Select Your Radio by Test You Can Make for Yourself

Go to any SILVER RADIO dealer, ask him to make the "Ice-Pick Test," the "Vanishing-Aerial Test," the "Hairpin Test," and the "Coin Test."

Once you've made or witnessed these amazing tests, you'll know positively why SILVER RADIO is the one radio that stands out from all others. You'll realize why many California SILVER owners get Australia, Japan and New Zealand—why world-famous opera stars select SILVER for its tonal beauty for their own homes.

Just plug it in—like a floor lamp—and SILVER RADIO is installed! SILVER RADIO is so good it doesn't need a large interference-collecting aerial as do other radios. Yet with no external aerial at all, SILVER RADIO is guaranteed to get more programs than nine out of ten other radios will get with big outdoor aerials!

A Radio for the Finest Home

SILVER RADIO is available in an ample variety of cabinets. The Concert Grand (illustrated)—peerless in the beauty of its diamond-matched walnut panels flanking a center panel of figured bird's-eye maple—is priced, without tubes, at $173. Other models $160 and $195.

Clear, humless reception, extreme distance-range and selectivity result from the exclusive combination of screen-grid power detection (4 screen-grid tubes in all), band-selector tuning, and the famous Overtone Switch, minimizing static interference. Requiring no aerial connection for local or distance reception, SILVER RADIO is unique in its convenience.

Keep Receiver on Level.

A receiving set should be absolutely level to function accurately. For this reason, be sure that the place on the floor occupied by the set is level. Even the best of floors sometimes are uneven.

Whenever possible, American broadcasting stations must give their call letters every 15 minutes.

Tricks of Studio Engineer

Control Operator Makes All Renditions in Studio Smooth—Quirks of Stars.

If all the words uttered by famous radio stars about how they attain their colorful radio effects could be strung together, they would make an extremely long monologue—even with the personal pronouns left out. But now let the studio engineer speak.

The studio engineer is the control operator; he sits behind the soundproof glass window, with eyes fixed on a tell-tale electric needle and fingers clutching the knobs that control the electric currents representing the assorted sounds within.

Gerald Sellar is studio engineer for many of the biggest features on the air. Standing between the audience and the artists in the studio, what they sing and play must first pass through his critical hands in every Palmolive Hour, General Motors program, Eveready Hour, Halsey, Stuart program, RCA Saturday demonstration, Sylvester and Coward Comfort Music features—not to mention a few others.

One Secret of Technique.

Sellar knows thoroughly the professional habits of the performers and in many cases they owe their perfect microphone technique to him.

"Who is the most perfect radio singer? Believe me, it's Paul Oliver," Sellar said. "So expert is he in controlling his voice before the microphone that once our knobs are set at the beginning of a song they do not have to be touched until he is through.

"There are many noted soloists today who have survived only because we learned their little tricks, and could smooth an occasional ragged note with a twist of our control knobs. Experienced recording artists are the best, for in making records they had to learn a technique very similar to that needed for the radio studio. Such stars as Gene Austin and Frank Crumit, Pulla Sanderson and Olive Kline give excellent radio performances.

"George Gershwin is a radio pianist of no mean ability. He gets his effects by a clever use of the pedals. He makes his notes crisp and clear, without the blurry jumble often caught by the quick-eared mike when the artist's own ears detect no flaw.

Orchestras a Special Problem.

"Instruments are another problem. We depend mostly on the director to watch our signals from the booth, and quickly suppress any instrument which shows a tendency to become too prominent. Gus Haenschen, Frank Black, Walter Damrosch are among the experts in studio acoustics in addition to their musical ability, thus enabling them to maintain an admirable balance in any orchestra they direct.

"Strangely enough, the singing violins are the hardest instrumental group on the air to control. Due to the four mutes across the bridges of the violins, an extreme resonance is likely to occur, and it becomes almost impossible to keep the electric current they generate down to reasonable limits."

Jenkins Television Station Is Improved

With a new transmission schedule for radiomovie programs now being broadcast on 2800 k.c. (107 meters) instead of on 2150 k.c. as formerly, the Jenkins television station, WIXCR, at Jersey City, N. J., is being improved. A new transmitter has been put in operation which will enable sight broadcasters to obtain 100 per cent modulation of the carrier wave over the 20 k.c. side band width.

WIXCR is on the air week days from 5 to 6 p. m. and from 7 to 9 o'clock at night.

Senator Capper Loses Station Fight

U. S. Senator Arthur Capper has lost another move in his fight for a better channel and full time for his station, WIBW, at Topeka, Kan.

The Radio Commission recently shifted this station to 580 kilocycles and ordered it to share time with KSAC. Now it has denied his application for 5000 watts power on 580 k.c., the channel of KPO, San Francisco.

George Gershwin Featured Over KMOX Tonight

jestic Hour, "with the understanding that 'An American in Paris' would be included, and that George would conduct it. This will make another 'first' for Majestic—'An American in Paris' played for the first time over a coast-to-coast network, with its composer conducting. However, aside from that novelty, I'm sure the whole continent will enjoy 'An American in Paris,' not only because it is entertaining from a musical standpoint, but because so many Americans having visited Paris during and since the War have seen the very things George writes about in this composition.

"We wanted to make Gershwin night a superb performance, so we arranged to increase the Arnold Johnson Orchestra to 40 men. In addition, we have engaged Helen Nugent and Ben Alley to sing popular Gershwin songs such as 'Swonderful.' There will be Gershwin orchestral numbers with Arnold Johnson conducting, songs by Muriel LaFrance, coloratura soprano, more by Redferne Hollinshead, Majestic tenor, and George has asked me to sing a number, too."

Tinkering With Set Unwise

The less tinkering the average set owner does with his receiver the better off he is likely to be. The new receivers are so nearly made, so well protected, and so efficiently tuned, that in the case of poor reception it is likely that causes other than those to be found in the set are to blame. Unless one is an expert, it is better to keep hands off and let a capable [illegible] shooter operate.

RADIO ELECTRIC COMPANY

Only with a radio set of unquestioned quality can a manufacturer afford to publish...

Facts as startling as these

IT is now possible to measure with scientific accuracy the comparative merits of any radio receiver.

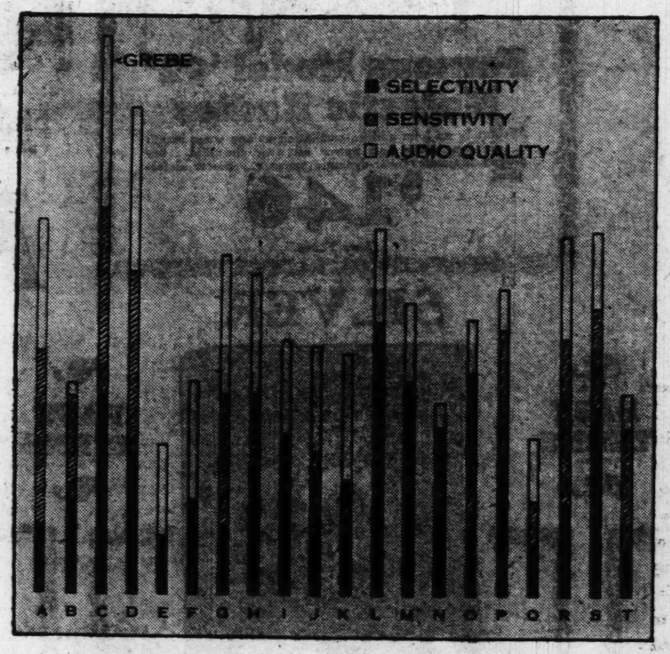
If you like the thrill of picking up weak and distant stations, the relative ability of the different receivers to do this can be easily determined. If you are located near powerful broadcasting stations and are troubled with overlapping reception or are unable to listen to distant stations in the early evening, the ability of any set to sharply separate one station from another can be easily found.

Or if you are a lover of fine music, if fidelity of reproduction is most important to you, the ability of a given set to reproduce music just as it is transmitted can be just as accurately measured.

Pictured in the accompanying chart are the results of recent scientific tests of 20 of the best known radio receivers ranging in price from over $300 to approximately $100.

Notice the uniformly high quality of the New Grebe in every important characteristic of a good radio receiver. It takes more than tools to build fine things. A fine radio receiver is a precision instrument. Only skilled craftsmanship and a pride in the job can produce a perfect product.

Grebe is proud to submit to the public a radio receiver which withstands so well this acid test of measured performance.



Explanation of Chart

20 of the most popular receiving sets are compared. All are current models of the popular tuned radio frequency type ranging in price from over $300 to approximately $100 in the order shown. All but three employ the new screen grid tubes. The relative height of the bars indicate the relative merits of each set.

Overall rating is the sum of the ability of each set:—first to separate powerful stations on neighboring channels without "overlapping," from end to end of dial (the set's selectivity shown by black portion of column)—next, the set's ability to bring in feeble distance stations clearly (its sensitivity: shaded portion of columns)—and finally, the set's audio quality (the fidelity of its audio amplifying system).

*Briefly, 100% selectivity is given a set able to show absolute 10 K. C. channel separation from end to end of the dial even though the interfering signal is twice as powerful as the wanted signal (40 K. C. band, measured with 100 times input at resonance at 1400 K. C.). Sensitivity is considered 100% in a receiver requiring one microvolt per meter average input (measured at 600, 1000 and 1400 K. C.). 100% audio quality rating is given that set amplifying equally all frequencies over the useful frequency range (measured at 60, 500, and 5000 cycles).

Under this exacting test the Grebe Receiver as shown in the chart rates 93% for selectivity, 88% for sensitivity and 82% for audio quality, a total average overall rating of 87 6/10%. The next nearest performance delivered by a set measured 74%, the next 58 7/10% and so on down the scale.

*(Full details, together with quick conversion chart, will be forwarded to any individual interested technically.)

Contest Winners

GENEVIEVE ROWE of Wooster, O., and CARLYLE W. BENNETT, tenor, of Chicago, who won the Mid-West elimination in the national Atwater Kent radio audition.

He was born in St. Joseph, Mo., where he started to cultivate his voice six years ago. He sang as No. 10 among the men in the Chicago audition, his selection being "Ah, Moon of My Delight." Bennett went to Chicago to learn the banking business. He is a member of the Central Trust Co. male chorus and a soloist in Christian Science churches.

A jury, composed of Dr. Daniel Protheros, director of the Central Church choir in Chicago; Royal Hughes of Columbus, O.; and Charles Dawe of Cleveland decided in favor of Miss Rowe.

Miss Rowe and Bennett will go to New York for the finals, which will be broadcast over a chain headed by WEAF next Sunday night.

Agnes L. Skillin, coloratura soprano, music supervisor of Springfield, Maine, and Charles E. Carlile, tenor, of Pawtucket, R. I., will represent the Northeastern States in the finals.

Calvin Hendricks, the blind barttone of Los Angeles, Cal., and Floy Hamlin, lyric soprano, of the same city, were first-place winners in the Far West elimination.

Josephine Antoine, coloratura soprano, of Boulder, Colo., and John Jameson, tenor, of Denver, were winners in the Southwest audition held at Dallas.

The Southern States will be represented by Frances Tortorich, soprano, of New Orleans, and Edward A. Kane, tenor, of Atlanta, Ga.

Sunday Programs Are Added by WLW

WLW, has added an hour and 45 minutes of music to fill the break from 11:15 until 1 p. m. Sundays.

The First Day Recitalists will play and sing from 11:15 until noon under the direction of Virginio Marucci.

Alexander Kirilloff, conductor of the Russian Balalaika orchestra, will direct the Nomads from noon to 12:30 in a concert of gypsy and Russian music.

The Pilgrims, a mixed sextet directed by Dana S. Merriman, will be heard from 12:30 until the Roxy Symphony concert begins at 1 o'clock.

A single bare wire is best for aerial and lead-in, provided good insulation is used at the supports.

Band Concert Over WLW Tuesday Night

Lydia Dozier, coloratura soprano of the Cincinnati Zoo Opera, will be the soloist with the Armco band over WLW, Tuesday, at 9 p. m.

Miss Dozier has been soloist over WLW in many of the station's most important programs.

Frank Simon, conductor of the band, has chosen the following program for the Dec. 10 concert:

England to Build Powerful Station

Two separate 40,000-watt transmitters will be built in a new station that the British Broadcasting Corporation is to erect in Northern England. The station should be operating in about a year.

Its twin transmitters will be similar to those in the Daventry station.

GM DAY-FAN RADIO

GENERAL MOTORS RADIO CORPORATION
NATIONAL PRESENTATION WEEK OF THE DAY-FAN RADIO

All this week, the General Motors Radio Corporation is sponsoring a national presentation of the Day-Fan Radio. This nationwide event has been arranged to give buyers the opportunity of becoming more familiar with this newest General Motors product.

When General Motors determined to enter the radio industry, Day-Fan Radio was selected for several definite reasons. It bore an honored name. It stood high in the estimation of its thousands of owners. And it embodied those features of modern design that are so essential to complete radio satisfaction.

When you hear the Day-Fan you will be delighted by its natural tone qualities—its selectivity and range—its capacity to provide ample volume without distortion. So we urge you to take advantage of the opportunity offered by Day-Fan National Presentation Week. We want you to learn that there is a Standard of Quality in radio which stands for the complete satisfaction associated with any product of General Motors.

The de luxe cabinet illustrated is in burl walnut, richly carved, with swinging doors—50⅛" high, 32" wide, and 19⅛" deep. The complete line of Day-Fan A. C. Radios ranges in price from $129.50 to $210 (less tubes).

Through the facilities of the General Motors Acceptance Corporation, you may now purchase your Day-Fan Radio on easy, economical terms: a small down payment; balance in twelve monthly instalments.

Christmas Tree for Poor Children Sponsored by KMOX

As has been its custom, KMOX will have a Christmas tree for the poor children of St. Louis. KMOX has averaged more than 20,000 presents a year in the form of toys and money sent by listeners.

The tree is on the ground floor of the Hotel Mayfair, Eighth and St. Charles streets. Presents received will be placed under the tree and held until just before Christmas, when they will be distributed to 50 charitable organizations of the city by the Junior Chamber of Commerce. These organizations will hold Christmas parties and give the presents to the children.

Once Sang in "Muny" Opera

SOME years ago at the University of Kansas, at Lawrence, Kan., Beatrice Belkin worried over her economic lessons, and decided that, considering everything, she really owed it to the world to become a prima donna. She had a nice soprano voice; every one liked her voice, and every one felt quite certain that all she had to do was to go to New York and exhibit it and she would have the world and a pack of contracts at her feet.

Beatrice Belkin.

Today Beatrice Belkin is one of the better known prima donnas of radio. She sings regularly over the networks of the National Broadcasting Co. As so many other radio singers have done, she gained her first chance in front of the microphone as a member of Roxy's Gang. But today, in a haven of comparative security, Miss Belkin works 14 hours a day and likes it. She likes it mainly because she feels that she is doing nothing when she remembers the labor of getting where she is now.

Learned 8 Roles in Week.

Several years ago, while she was still an unknown singer, she was invited to take the prima donna roles in several of the productions of the Philadelphia La Scala Opera Co. She went to Philadelphia as thoroughly thrilled as any young opera singer with her first contract in her pocket could possibly be.

"Well," said the director after hearing her voice, "your voice measures up quite to my expectations. You will have three roles ready by next week."

Three prima donna operatic roles to be ready within a week! One who has never fought and struggled and wept in learning the trills and bars of an Italian opera of course can not realize what that meant. Three roles in a week; three epic poems to be committed to memory and thousands of bars of music to be memorized with them.

That week Miss Belkin spent from 18 to 20 hours a day over these scores. Then came "Rigoletto." She went on the stage, sang her part, took all her cues, and never once did she disrupt the program. But when she had finished she felt that her voice hadn't been everything it could have been. She expected to be sent home. But no such thing. The director was pleased and said so. The next night she sang another opera and the following night a third. And those 10 days, according to Miss Belkin, those frantic, laborious 10 days are just 10 average days from the life of a prima donna.

Sang in Muny Opera.

The Philadelphia engagement was Miss Belkin's first of any importance. Later she sang in "Falstaff" and several other German operas before the biannual convention of the Federation of Music Clubs in Chicago. Still later she sang in several productions of the St. Louis Municipal Opera Co.

Then she became a member of Roxy's Gang and her stock as an operatic soprano began to boom. It wasn't many months before she was one of the most popular members of the group. She went on tour with Roxy and had long series of concert engagements of her own. Now she appears on three programs a week before the National Broadcasting Co.'s microphones.

Miss Belkin's early life was colorful. She is the daughter of a former professor of horticulture in various governmental Indian schools. She was born in New York City. When she was two years old her father took a position at the Carlisle Indian Institute at Carlisle, Pa. Later he was transferred to the Haskell Indian Institute near Lawrence. Thus the explanation of Miss Belkin being a graduate of the University of Kansas. Her father is now in business at Lawrence.

Army Post Opens Broadcasting Studio

By the Associated Press.

ST. PAUL, Minn.—An army broadcasting studio has been opened at Fort Snelling, Minn., under direction of post officers and radio engineers of KSTP.

The Third Infantry band, organized in 1784, played the first program.

"Broadcasts by the band are planned over KSTP at 3 p. m. on alternate Sundays.

Fort Snelling is the first post in the country to undertake broadcasting on an extensive scale.

Columbia Chain Plans Schools Broadcast Series

ities on the subjects to be presented have been invited to offer suggestions and to co-operate in the series. During conferences in Washington on Nov. 20, Dr. William John Cooper, United States Commissioner of Education, endorsed the plans for a test series and said results would be watched by school superintendents and educators throughout the country. Judge Ira E. Robinson, chairman of the Federal Radio Commission, predicted that it would create great interest in educational circles.

Other educators who have been consulted regarding the series are Dr. Jesse H. Newlon, director of Lincoln School, Columbia University, and J. W. Crabtree, of the National Educational Association.

Miss Alice Keith, formerly in charge of school contracts for the Damrosch Schools Concerts, is to direct the programming and production work. The scripts for the historical dramas will be prepared by Henry Fiske Carlton and William Ford Manley, radio playwrights, responsible for "Great Moments in History," "Fires of Men," "Soconyland Sketches," "Mr. and Mrs.," and other dramatic broadcasts.

Booklets to serve as text-books for the radio course are being prepared, and will be distributed to all schools in the country so that teachers may prepare the pupils.

When a defective tube is suspected, it is a good plan to get a new one and try it in the various sockets, so that by the process of elimination a bad tube may be discovered.

Value of Screen-Grid Tube.

The advantages of a screen-grid tube are more amplification and longer range. Owing to the greater amplification, fewer screen-grid tubes are needed than was the case with the old three-element tube and fewer parts are needed.

Where to Tune in the Stations

TUNING in stations depends greatly on location, the time of day and atmospheric conditions. From KFI on 640 Kc, down to WOAI on 1190, the changes at night are almost all occupied by single stations, but other stations use many of these during the daytime and up to 7 to 8 p. m. or so, too, a number of channels above and below this cleared wave band are shared day and night by from two to seven and eight stations, so that location of the listener largely determines what station he hears in most cases.

The St. Louis listener is likely to pick up stations as follows: (Corrections should be sent to Radio Editor, St. Louis Post-Dispatch).

650—KSD or KFUO, St. Louis.
640—WIBO, Chicago or KLZ, Denver, Colo.
630—WNAX, Yankton, S. D.
620—KIRW, Topeka, Kan.

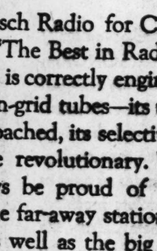
BOSCH RADIO SCREEN-GRID

THE BEST CHOICE ON CHRISTMAS

The Bosch Radio Combination Receiver and Speaker Console embodies Screen-Grid quality in an instrument of unusual beauty. Perfectly matched walnut and veneers with hand-rubbed rich carving. It has electrodynamic speaker. Less tubes, $245.50

Give a Bosch Radio for Christmas and you give "The Best in Radio." It is the radio that is correctly engineered to the new screen-grid tubes—its tonal quality is unapproached, its selectivity and sensitivity are revolutionary. Your family will always be proud of their Bosch Radio—the far-away stations, the small stations as well as the big ones are always at your finger-tip command. Hear the new Bosch—see the new cabinets with concealed electrodynamic speaker. It makes an ideal Christmas gift.



New Bosch Radio De Luxe Console is truly the last word in radio. It uses seven tubes three of which are the new Screen-Grid type, two are the large new audio amplifiers arranged in push-pull. Cabinet has tall sliding doors concealing dial panel and electrodynamic speaker. Antique in Old English finish. Price less tubes..... $260.00

TUNING in stations depends greatly on location, the time of day and atmospheric conditions. From KFI on 640 Kc, down to WOAI on 1190, the changes at night are almost all occupied by single stations, but other stations use many of these during the daytime and up to 7 to 8 p. m. or so, too, a number of channels above and below this cleared wave band are shared day and night by from two to seven and eight stations, so that location of the listener largely determines what station he hears in most cases.

The St. Louis listener is likely to pick up stations as follows: (Corrections should be sent to Radio Editor, St. Louis Post-Dispatch).

650—KSD or KFUO, St. Louis.

Value of Screen-Grid Tube.

The advantages of a screen-grid tube are more amplification and longer range. Owing to the greater amplification, fewer screen-grid tubes are needed than was the case with the old three-element tube and fewer parts are needed.

Will Recall Triumphs of Past

JOE HOWARD, who wrote comic operas and musical comedies that were popular several decades ago. He is to sing songs from his "The Isle of Bong Bong" in an Acousticon broadcast at 5:30 this afternoon over the Columbia chain.

Many Station Call Letters Have Tragic Association With Sea

The call letters of many radio stations in the United States were formerly used by ships at sea. The Pittsburg Press recalls that the call letters of WGR, the Buffalo, N. Y., station that broadcasts over the same channel as KSD and WKRC, were once the radio identification of a Pacific Coast passenger steamer by the name of "Governor." This vessel sank following a collision with the freighter "West Hartland" in April of 1921. Eight lives were lost.

WSB, Atlanta, Ga., belonged first to the S. S. Francis H. Leggett. After that vessel sank off the Oregon coast Sept. 18, 1914, with the loss of 67 lives, the call was reassigned to the Firewood, a vessel burned off Peru, Dec. 18, 1919.

KLZ, of Denver, Colo., belonged in 1920 to the Speedwell, which was caught in a tropical hurricane on Sept. 29 of the same year, in the Gulf of Mexico. Nine of the 25 persons aboard were lost. KRE, of Berkeley, Cal., belonged to the Florence H., which was wrecked by an explosion on April 17, 1918, in Quiberon Bay, taking a toll of 45 lives.

KOB, of State College, N. M., belonged to the Princess, stranded on Rockaway Shoals, Long Island, N. Y., and finally broken in two with a loss of $500,000. All lives were saved.

WHN of New York City is another call with a past. It was at one time associated with the ill-fated steamer Hanalei and later assigned to the steamer Santa Isabel which was sold to Chile. The call letters changed with the sale.

WWJ of Detroit was formerly used by the steamer Peru, sold to France. KIS at Oakland, Cal., was used by the Kermanshah, transferred to Hungary.

KNX, Los Angeles, was once the call of the Susana, sold to Italy.

The Federal Radio Commission, recognizing the important part played by amateurs in the United States in experimental work, has set aside for them the frequencies between 14,100 and 14,300 kilocycles for international radio-telephonic communication experiments.

ATWATER KENT RADIO

Enjoy it before Christmas as well as after!

THE chances are you have already decided to get an Atwater Kent Screen-Grid Set for Christmas.

So why not get it now?

In this way you'll avoid the rush and enjoy the extra evenings of entertainment, right now when the midwinter programs are at their best.

Remember that the best Christmas music comes before Christmas!

Go to a dealer's right away. Select your furniture cabinet and have a home demonstration, if you like. Forget all about price until you have satisfied yourself that for tone and range and selectivity and volume and beauty you could not make a better investment.

You are bound to say, as hundreds of thousands of owners now say, "This is exactly what I wanted. I never saw or heard a better radio. Atwater Kent certainly knows how to do it."

Then what a thrill when you discover that this most modern and satisfying of radios can be had for as little as $109!

Your radio dollars go much farther than ever before when you invest them in an Atwater Kent. Save the extra money for other beautiful Christmas gifts!

The great Atwater Kent factory has just doubled its production, so that not one of the tens of thousands of families who want this wonderful radio for Christmas will be disappointed.

The dealer will arrange convenient terms, so that you can pay as you enjoy. Enjoy Christmas radio now. Make your whole family happy with an Atwater Kent today!

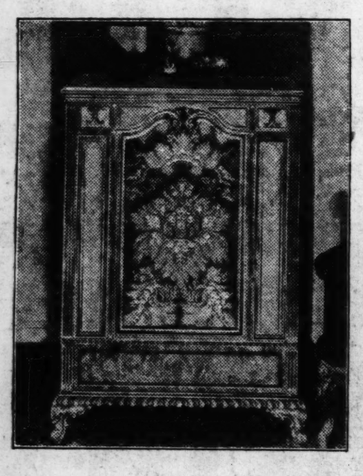
Enjoy the great things in KOLSTER

Kolster's amazing device for remote control

..."a press of the button—and he started the radio 2 rooms away!"

"I tell you it was absolutely uncanny! We were sitting on the sun porch and the Kolster Radio was in the library—2 rooms away! 'Shall we have some music?' I suggested. 'Surely,' answered Mr. Jackson. But instead of walking 'way into the library—he turned to an interesting device on the table beside him—and pressed a button! 'What program do you want?' 'Let's hear the Kolster Hour,' replied my wife. Jackson pressed another button—and the miracle happened! In a flash, the haunting melody of a Beethoven Sonata came through the air! Why, it was the most amazing thing I've ever seen!"



K-45 RICHLY trained walnut cabinet—unique and exquisite in appearance. Remote control. Electrical tuning. Nine tubes and two rectifiers. Screen-grid R. F. tubes. Equipoised dynamic reproducer. Three stages of audio... second and third stages push-pull, using type 327 tubes and type 350. Price, less tubes $500

Remote Control Developed by Kolster

Everyone who has seen—and used—Remote Control calls it the greatest improvement in modern radio! For the first time in history, you can start a radio from a remote point in the house—choose any one of your favorite stations—and make the volume louder or softer as you please! All the magic of the twentieth century comes to life at your finger tips! Tonight—see this remarkable device! Your dealer will gladly demonstrate the Kolster K-45!

The new Kolster has arrived! And people who know what's what in radio are calling it the set they knew was coming some day!... Inspect the screen-grid tubes—tested and proved for thrilling richness of tone, for amazing selectivity that reaches in the magic air and captures just the station you want!... Inspect the dynamic reproducer—extra large to do full justice to the increased power of Kolster screen-grid radio!... Inspect the new, speedy way of tuning in—the cabinets unsurpassed for beauty and design... You will be delighted—thrilled! And you will be gratified to know that wherever you go, you will hear critic after critic say, "Kolster is a fine set!"

K-43 Handsome cabinet with doors of figured butt walnut and two-tone panels. 8 tubes including rectifier tube. Selector tuner. Equipoised dynamic reproducer. Screen-grid tubes. Push-pull amplifications with 2 type 345 tubes. Price, less tubes..... $175

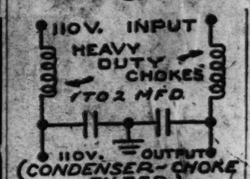
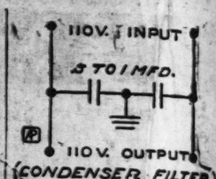
Curbing Man-Made Static



(CONDENSER-CHOKE FILTER)



(CONDENSER FILTER)

"Man-made" static, considerably different from that generated in the air, gets its name from the clicks, the crashes and other disturbances produced by motors, warming pads, electric toaboxes, light sockets, automatic telephones, doorbells and 50 and one other electric labor-saving devices.

Probably the greatest offender is the motor, which takes many guises in household appliances. It is used to drive vacuum cleaners, washing machines, iceboxe, oil heaters and whatnot. Most of the trouble comes from sparking brushes, whose blue discharge registers over the receiver as a continuous series of humlike clicks.

Any electric device that sparks wherever a contact is made, such as the turning on and off of a light, causes noises in an AC set.

Naturally, with the AC receiver connected directly to the house lighting circuit, disturbances will register more easily than a battery set. Not only are clicks and crashes that develop within the house translated into sound, but similar interference will come from outside sources. Even automobiles with faulty ignition systems will register as they pass the house.

Two types of interference eliminators for use between sets and light sockets have been tried. One consists of two heavy duty condensers, with the center point grounded, to be connected across the line furnishing power to the receiver.

Another contains choke coils in addition to the condensers, to give greater filtering action. Its purpose is to block interference from motors and the like. It is placed in the set power line or connected to the apparatus causing the trouble.

Such devices are designed to cover approximately 90 per cent of the disturbances. However, the filtering action is not complete, although tests in the average household show them to be of value in muffling and reducing noises.

WBZ Will Erect Short Wave Station

Within a few weeks a short wave transmitter will be broadcasting the regular programs of WBZ-WBZA the Westinghouse stations at Springfield, Mass. and Boston, that operate under a synchronization control.

It will use the call letters WIXAZ, and will operate on 31 meters (9750 kilocycles) with 20,000 watts.

Werrenrath Will Supervise Vocal Music for Chain

Noted Baritone Joins Damrosch in Important Position With NBC.

Werrenrath

Reinald Werrenrath, the baritone, has been appointed vocal supervisor for the National Broadcasting Co. He will direct special choral groups in radio presentations and will attempt to do for vocal music on the air what Walter Damrosch has done for instrumental ensembles.

Arrangements between the NBC and Werrenrath provide that he broadcast only through the company's networks and that his advice and counsel be available for NBC company's programs as a whole. Werrenrath's radio activities will not interfere, however, with his concert singing.

Werrenrath's appointment is an expression of the policy to obtain the most talented and competent advisers and supervisors for its programs, George Engles, the NBC vice president in charge of the programs, said.

Seek Other Noted Musicians.

"With Walter Damrosch as musical counsel for the National Broadcasting Co. and supervising symphonic and other instrumental presentations, and with Reinald Werrenrath supervising the vocal ensembles and soloists, we believe we are giving listeners the benefit of some of the best musical minds in the nation," Engles continued.

"However, we do not intend to stop at this point. We are negotiating with several other nationally known persons and expect to obtain their services for the direction and development of our many programs."

Engles declared that when present plans were carried out, the NBC would have the most competent and experienced staff of advisers and supervisors in the history of music and entertainment.

Werrenrath was born in Brooklyn, N. Y. He studied singing under his father, George Werrenrath, and other noted teachers.

He made his operatic debut at the Metropolitan Opera House as "Sylvio in Pagliacci," on Feb. 19, 1919. He has been a successful concert and oratorio singer since 1907. He has sung throughout the United States and in Europe.

Mistake at Japanese Station Penalized

The mistake of announcers at JOAK, Japan's principal broadcasting station, in stating recently that an Imperial Prince had been born instead of a Princess brought swift punishment from the station directors.

The managing director and head of the station's news department were severely reprimanded. The head of the broadcasting department saw his salary reduced. The announcer was warned. The directors acted with the approval of the Japanese Ministry of Communications.

Contralto to Broadcast Tuesday

Stokowski Expected to Conduct Radio Concerts Next Year

Leopold Stokowski and the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra are likely to broadcast another series of concerts after the conductor has returned from the vacation in Europe next summer, probably in the fall.

"I hope to broadcast frequently," Stokowski is quoted as saying in a discussion of his plans. "Some day I hope to broadcast a program of the best music created in America in our time." He said that in his Philco series he had endeavored to illustrate past and present compositions of three great national schools—first the Teutonic, with Bach, Mozart and Wagner numbers; second, the Slavic, with compositions by Moussorgsky, Stravinsky and Rimsky-Korsakov, and the Latin or Gallic, with compositions by Debussy, Franck and Berlioz.

A newspaper, said Stokowski, costs the tramp and the millionaire the same price, and, assuming the willingness to read, each may take from its pages the information of the day. There is a parallel today in the realm of music, as radio has taken fine music out of the class of a rich man's plaything and made it the property of everyone. The harvest that the United States, as a nation, will reap from this wholesale musical enlightenment, Stokowski added, will be gaining a position of premier importance in music.

Frost Heads Holding Company in Another Radio Merger.

Maj. Herbert H. Frost, three times president of the Radio Manufacturers' Association and recently vice president of the Kolster Corporation, has become president of the Utah Radio Products of Chicago, which is to be the holding company for a merger of the Carter Radio Co. of Chicago, the Utah Co., and the H. H. Eby Co., Inc., of Philadelphia. Other companies are to be added, Frost says. All concerns in the merger are to continue to operate as separate units.

Board Expects Henderson Will Continue on Air

Status of KWKH Not Likely to Be Affected by Receivership for His Company.

Information from Washington and Louisiana is that W. K. ("Hello, World") Henderson will continue to broadcast over his station, KWKH, at Shreveport, for all that his W. K. Henderson Iron Works & Supply Co. recently was put into a receivership.

The Federal Radio Commission has received a petition for transfer of the license of KWKH from Henderson to the "Hello World Broadcasting Co." From that, it is taken for granted at Washington that operation of KWKH will not be affected by the receivership, incidentally, Henderson and E. A. Frost, a millionaire lumberman, have been appointed as receivers for the iron works.

Henderson, who frequently has assailed the Radio Commission, is referred to by members of the Commission as "the vaudevillian of radio." His latest "row" has been with the chain stores, his broadcast assaults on them having caused protests to the radio board, which replied that it had neither power nor disposition to censor Henderson's broadcasting.

The impression among other broadcasters and the public is that the Radio Commissioners heartily dislike Henderson and would welcome an excuse to put him off the air. On the contrary, the belief here is that Henderson never has been in any danger from the Commission. He probably has caused the Commission more amusement than all the other broadcasters combined. Its members do not regard his type of broadcasting as particularly valuable to the public, but hold that if listeners desire such programs, they are entitled to hear them. Individual members of the Commission expressed regret when informed of the receivership.

At a hearing in Washington on the application of KVOO, Oklahoma, for the channel used by KWKH, Henderson summitted 160,000 affidavits from listeners stating that they desired KWKH continued on the air. The Commission considered that this was ample justification for continuing KWKH on the cleared channel that it shares with WWL, New Orleans.

Henderson also has asked for permission to acquire KWEA, another station at Shreveport, for the Hello World company.

Switching of trains by radio has been successfully carried out in Hamm, Germany. Receiving sets in the locomotive cabs keep the engineers in touch with the yardmaster at all times.

Canadian Station Joins NBC Network

CKGW, Toronto, Can., has been added to the National Broadcasting Co.'s network.

CKGW operates on 434.8 meters (690 kilocycles). It uses 5000 watts. Gooderham & Worts, Ltd., of Toronto own and operate the station.

The Voice of Firestone program on Monday nights is one of those to be carried by CKGW.

NBC Interests Take Over Two Big Music Firms

Merger by Chain Company Includes Carl Fischer and Leo Feist, Publishers.

Organization of a music publishing company effecting a merger of two nationally known institutions with a great broadcasting system is announced with filing of incorporation papers of the Radio Music Co. This is a combination of Carl Fischer, Inc., and Leo Feist, Inc., with the National Broadcasting Co.

M. H. Aylesworth, president of the National Broadcasting Co., is to be chairman of the board of the Radio Music Co. Others on the board include Paul D. Cravath, lawyer; John Golden, producer; David Sarnoff, executive vice president of the Radio Corporation of America; S. L. Rothafel (Roxy), managing director of the Roxy Theater; E. E. Shumaker, president of the Radio Victor Corporation; Hiram S. Brown, president of the Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation; Leo Feist, president of Leo Feist, Inc.; E. C. Mills, former chairman of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, and recent executive of the Music Publishers' Protective Association; H. P. Davis, chairman of the board of directors, National Broadcasting Co., Inc.; B. F. Bitner, vice president and general manager of Leo Feist, Inc., and Walter S. Fischer, president of Carl Fischer, Inc.

Policy to Be Unusual.

E. C. Mills will be president of the new company. B. F. Bitner and Walter S. Fischer will be vice presidents. The Fischer firm is a leader in publishing classical, standard and educational music. The Feist organization is a leader in publication of popular music.

Aligned with the new music organization will be foremost American composers, it is announced, including not only the writers of popular music, but also musicians who are creating what will be considered the classical compositions of the future.

"The policy of the Radio Music Co. will be dedicated to the improvement of music in general, the advancement of American culture and the promotion of education of young people in the art of music," Aylesworth said.

The operating policy of the new organization will be almost revolutionary, Mills, the new president, said.

"While in the final analysis the Radio Music Co. will be a commercial music publishing venture, nevertheless the scope of its activities will be so broad as to have the real objective not primarily in profits, but in making an active and intelligent use of the tremendous facilities that the NBC System places at its disposal for enhancing and improving the whole trend of American music."

The new firm will have an influence in putting jazz in the background of the American musical picture, Mills declared.

Will Try to Soft Pedal Jazz.

"We have had perhaps too much jazz," Mills said, "and as there is no denying the influence of music upon the trend of the people's inclinations, it seems about time for someone to assume leadership in a movement away from the cacophony of most music of the day.

"Popular music, so-called, has had, and always will have, its proper place. The folk songs of a people are its popular music. Out of the war came jazz. It expresses a musical motif born of fear, excitement and hurry. Contrary to the traditions of Stephen Foster, who wrote what are probably the greatest sons our nation has produced, the writers of today in the popular field seem to be determined to crowd into a composition all that there is of nervous excitement and hysteria of the moment.

To a great extent the life of a nation reflects its music, no less than the music itself is a reflection of the temper of the people. Is it not time for a return to sanity? I think we should go back to melody and let it serve instead of noise to give us the inspiration which we expect from music. In the popular field, therefore, the Radio Music Co. will have the definite objective of a finer product."

He Directs the Slumber Hour

LUDWIG LAURIER

CONDUCTOR of WJZ's broadcasts of soothing music at 10 o'clock Central Standard time every weekday night.

It's 'Hands off' This Program

FOUR years ago a radio announcer had an idea. The idea was so simple that no one took him seriously. He persisted in his efforts to convince the program makers that his idea was worth a trial, and after two years the program was put on the air.

It attracted little attention at first, but gradually began to talk about it. A few dozen letters arrived at NBC headquarters during the first week of its existence. Then the letters began to arrive in hundreds.

The program is WJZ's Slumber Hour at 10 p. m. St. Louis time, weekday nights, which now is in its third year on the air. Occasionally KWK has broadcast a half hour of this feature. KSD is unable to carry it because it is a Blue chain program.

The original idea, and it has not been changed, was that melodious classical and semi-classical selections, played by a small string ensemble, would be a fitting program with which to end the broadcasting day.

Soothing Fine Music Played.

"While a lively foxtrot will always attract plenty of listeners," the announcer said, "it isn't exactly the music best suited to repose. In the library of classical music, however, there are many melodies that actually quiet the nerves and clear the brain of restless thoughts. Strings lend themselves admirably to soothing melodies, and the combination of restful melodies and crooning strings seems an ideal one at the end of the day.

The musical supervisor of WJZ wrote a melody that has since become well known as the signature for the Slumber Hour. It is "Slumber On."

During the first months the Slumber Hour was on the air it was assigned to different conductors from time to time. Cesare Sodero, maestra of the National Grand Opera Company; Hugo Mariani and Harold Sanford were among the men who conducted the hour.

Then came Ludwig Laurier, and made the program his own. The program as it is heard today represents Laurier's musical ideals. He not only conducts the ensemble, but selects the program, often working for hours to obtain selections conducive to the procession of moods he desires. Not only does he incorporate some of the best known selections from the classics into his programs, but he is constantly searching for little known though exquisite melodies of great composers.

Laurier, himself a violinist, has

WHO and WOC Merger Depends On Stock Sales

Options Taken—Erection After 3 Years of 50,000-Watt Joint Transmitter Proposed.

A merger of radio station WHO, Des Moines, and WOC, Davenport, Ia., and operation as "synchronized" stations, owned and operated by the Central Broadcasting Co., is proposed under a plan announced by officials of the two stations.

Both stations would be on the air full time, instead of half time each as at present, and both would operate on the cleared channel assigned to Iowa. As the details of the program work out, however, both stations would be broadcasting the same program at any one moment.

The Iowa corporation which proposes to carry out these plans has taken options on WHO and WOC and the work of organizing is in the hands of a committee. The committee consists of Lloyd C. Thomas of Pittsburg, Pa.; G. E. Brammer, a Des Moines attorney, and A. R. Thompson, vice president of the Valley National Bank, Des Moines.

Statements given out by Gerard Nollen for the Bankers' Life Co., owner of WTTO, and B. J. Palmer, owner of WOC, said the plan would be completed Jan. 1. Although they declined to divulge the financial setup of the new organization, they admitted that success of the plan depended upon the sale of stock in the proposed Central Broadcasting Co., proceeds from which would be used to take up the options.

Further details of the plan provide that while studios and trans-

Slumber Hour Broadcast as Listeners Desire

devoted almost his entire life to music. He was born in Speyer am Rhine, in the Palatinate, and came to the United States when 12 years old.

He started to learn the drug business in Buffalo, N. Y., to follow in the footsteps of his father, a druggist at Niagara Falls, but the call of music was too strong. He soon was playing the violin in the Buffalo Symphony Orchestra, and later returned to Germany to continue his study of the violin. He played first violin in the Berlin Philharmonic when he was 21 years old. Two years with this organization, a year in Switzerland teaching music, and he returned to the United States. He played first violin in the orchestra of the Metropolitan Opera House in New York for 16 years. While Arturo Toscanini conducted that orchestra Laurier was manager of the musical organization.

Laurier takes great pains with his program. Some nights he features the works of French composers. On another night his selections all will be by the Russian "moderns." Frequently he gives "all-request" programs, and on other occasions he builds his programs to conform with the sentiment of certain holidays or seasons.

Not to Be Tampered With.

The Slumber melodies have been heard around the world. Letters attesting this have been received from listeners as far away as Australia, England and Germany frequently report picking up the program, though it is almost daylight in Europe when the music is played in the United States.

There is an established tradition at studio headquarters that the slumber music belongs to the listeners and is not to be tampered with. Many a national advertiser has had certain plans wrecked when he found out that money could not link his name with the slumber hour. Several program sponsors are reported to have offered amounts far in excess of the regular rates charged for broadcasting in order to sponsor the program.

Once the program makers attempted to inject some novelty into the slumber hour. A woman reader was assigned to the program, and one night listeners heard some choice bits of elocution in between the musical selections. While no fault was found with the woman's ability, the listeners protested by thousands against this interference with the established mood of the program. The telephone board in the studios was tied up an hour after the program ended with protests, and thousands of letters and telegrams which said in so many words, "Hands off the slumber hour" were received. It has been "hands off" ever since.

Laurier cannot recall how many selections have been played in his program. He estimates that more than 2000 different pieces of music have been played, and that many have been heard dozens of times.

Gabrilowitsch Will Lead Orchestra on KSD Tomorrow Night

OSSIP GABRILOWITSCH, conductor-pianist, and his Detroit Symphony Orchestra are to play in the General Motors concert over KSD at 8:30 tomorrow night. He will be at the piano in the Schumann concerto in A-minor.

Gabrilowitsch.

In addition, the orchestral program will bring the Roumanian Rhapsody, No. 1, of Enesco, greatest of the Roumanian composers of today; the Valse Triste of Sibelius; the "Rosamunde" overture of Schubert and Liszt's symphonic poem, "Les Preludes."

Gabrilowitsch was born in Petrograd, Russia. He gave his first recital in New York 29 years ago. At one time he was more famous as the man who married Mark Twain's daughter than as the fine pianist he undeniably was. It was in 1918 that he became conductor of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra. Incidentally, he studied music at the Petrograd Conservatory where he came in contact with Rubinstein.

mitters of both stations be kept operative for three years, the new company will eventually erect a 50,000-watt transmitter at some point between Des Moines and Davenport. When that transmitter was erected, programs from both the studios could be sent out with the increased power WHO and WOC are now operating with, 5000 watts each.

The "synchronized" plan proposed is in effect a chain of two stations. Suppose the WHO studios were broadcasting a program. As this program was going out over the WHO transmitter it would be sent over a private telephone wire to the studios and transmitter of WOC at Davenport and broadcast from there. Thus both stations would be broadcasting the same program at the same time. The same plan would be followed were WOC broadcasting.

A statement issued by Nollen said that should the plan become operative, Thomas would manage the business of the corporation. It added that he expected to make his home in Des Moines, Thomas for several years has been the director of all studio and program activities for the four Westinghouse stations, and has made his home in Pittsburg.

The consolidation and plans to erect a 50,000-watt transmitter would hardly be likely to be opposed in Washington. Radio Commissioner Saltzmann, in whose district the two stations are located, and the Commission's engineers have repeatedly urged the owners of WHO and WOC to get together and erect a high powered station half way between Des Moines and Davenport.

To Increase Life of Dry Battery.

Dry "B" batteries have a definite life. While they are dry on the outside, they are moist on the inside. The life of dry batteries ends quickly, as the chemical solutions on the inside dry up and corrode the cells or containers. When a "B" battery commences to run down or lose its voltage, it indicates that the containers are commencing to corrode or the chemical filling to dry up. A considerable increase in life may be obtained from dry batteries by an occasional light charge from a suitable source, which will rejuvenate them to a certain extent. This may be done by connecting a 15 or 25-watt lamp in series with one side of the 110 volt direct current line. The positive of the charging line should connect to the positive of the battery and negative of the charging line to the negative of the battery.

Joan of Arc Drama on Air Again Tuesday

Rosaline Greene Will Play the Maid in Eveready Hour Over KSD.

The Joan of Arc that won high praise from listeners some months ago will be broadcast again in the Eveready hour next Tuesday evening over KSD. They will be virtually the same.

The story of the peasant girl whose unshakable faith and courage finally brought about the liberation of France from a foreign conqueror is one of the great ones of history. Against a somber background of turmoil and bloody wars, persecution and death, the figure of the Maid of Orleans stands white and shining down the centuries.

The drama of Joan's life begins in the green fields where she tends her flocks and one day hears the divine voices that command her to strike for the liberation of her country. France is laid waste and her King hardly more than a vagabond scurrying before the pursuit of the enemy when Joan changes her shephed's crook for the sword.

In gleaming armor and mounted high on a white horse, her pale face was an inspiration to the bedraggled and discouraged French. Reforming their broken battle lines behind the shining little figure of the maid, they tore into the astonished English with fanatical frenzy. Battle after battle saw the pennants of victory tied to the French lances.

The day when the victorious maid fell into the hands of the enemy was one of the blackest in history. Tried by frightened, bitter judges, her fate was sealed before she could present a defense. Mocked and taunted by her enemies, she refused all offers of compromise and went to the stake with a song of victory on her lips, her death as well as her life a glowing inspiration to mankind.

In the Eveready hour production of the drama of Joan of Arc the part of the maid will be played by Rosaline Greene. A notable supporting company will assist in the presentation.

Incidental music of Debussy and Cesar Franck will be played throughout the program by the orchestra under Nathaniel Shilkret.

Airplanes on an English line are being equipped with permanent radio aerials, stretched between wings and tail.

POWEL CROSLEY JUNIOR'S

BUSINESS PRINCIPLES

"I have always been a great believer in the successful principles which Henry Ford has proved in the motor car business. He has always adhered to the idea that in building the lowest priced automobile he would be able to sell the greatest number of people. Of course, he has built value into his car, but he has always given the utmost in value at the lowest possible price. That's why he has been able to sell more automobiles than any other manufacturer in the world."

"This same principle, I firmly believe, applies directly to radio. The biggest public demand will always be for a high quality set at the lowest possible price. By recognizing this principle at the outset, and concentrating all production and merchandising plans to meet it, the Crosley Radio Corporation has won its strong position of leadership in this keenly competitive field." Keynote of Auto Shows This Year Will Be Beauty

Public, Believing Speed and Power Is Present, Are Interested in Appearance.

Beauty will be the keynote of the national automobile shows this winter. It no longer seems a question of convincing the public that cars possess speed and power. Designers have, therefore, turned their attention to grace of lines and tasteful coloring.

Cars will still be low hung. In lowering the body, better proportions have been obtained in the matter of relation between wheels, hood, radiator and fenders. One characteristic of 1930 will be the excellent appearance of the cars, the entire chassis and body appearing to be a unit rather than a series of units stuck together. This is exemplified to some extent in the trunks carried at the rear, the trunk having rounded corners to harmonize with the rounded corners of the body and fenders.

As for lines, the style creators have been successful in giving the silhouette of the car a dynamic appearance with a flow of lines in splendid rhythm. The vogue of stream-lining in order to make for greater speed has, of course, enhanced appearance.

Perhaps one of the greatest factors of increased beauty is the universal adoption of chromium plating. A few seasons ago, when cars appeared with dark enameled radiator shells, enameled lamps, bumpers and other accessories in dark coatings, they were pronounced rich and dignified in appearance.

But tastes change in car design, just as modes change from season to season for the fashionable woman. The advantages of chromium are many; its quality of remaining bright indefinitely and toning up the car's appearance with its bright luster has met with popular approval.

As for the interiors—it will be truly surprising to the show visitor to notice the excellent quality of material in even the lower-priced offerings. The wide use of rayon in upholstery and decoration, slip covers, etc., has made possible some most attractive fabrics which are claimed to be highly durable. The good-wearing qualities of broadcloth, corduroy and whipcord, make instant appeal, especially to feminine users.

More attention is being given to minute details, such as beautiful workmanship in the chasing and engraving of door handles, instrument board settings, flower-vase holders, et cetera. Many of these are taken from the designs of the ancients, both as to shape and decoration. One may walk through the antiquities of the Metropolitan Museum of Art and numerous other art museums and find scores of designs of ancient artisans which now are incorporated in parts and accessories that are turned out by the millions. Certain headlamps are almost identical in shape with ancient pottery; door handles, lock designs, hub caps, etc., have their prototypes in the minute metal trinkets and stone sculptures of ancient Egypt and Babylonia. At the same time they have been worked into modern motifs in a manner which is pleasing to the eye and practical from the utility standpoint as well.

160,000 Miles of Highway to Be Kept Free of Snow

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—Preliminary reports indicate that more than 160,000 miles of main traveled highways in the 36 states in the snow belt will be kept open and free from snow during the present winter, according to the American Automobile Association.

Approximately $6,500,000 will be expended by states for this extensive program, but it will mean a saving of millions of dollars and return great economic benefits.

"The importance of keeping the highways open during the winter months cannot be overestimated," says the national motoring body. "Although the problem of snow removal is being gradually put on a standardized basis, much remains to be done. Highway builders, however, have learned the value of uninterrupted transportation."

The A. A. A. estimates that every $100 spent in snow removal yields $1000 in more efficient transportation and business continuity. On this basis, the states, counties and municipalities keeping their roads and streets open for travel will reap an economic benefit in excess of $65,000,000.

"When it is considered that 75 per cent of the nation's population, or 90,000,000 people, are dependent largely upon the open road," says the A. A. A., "the value of snow removal to commerce alone is tremendous. It is now estimated that inadequate snow removal causes a loss to the nation's business in a single winter of $600,000,000."

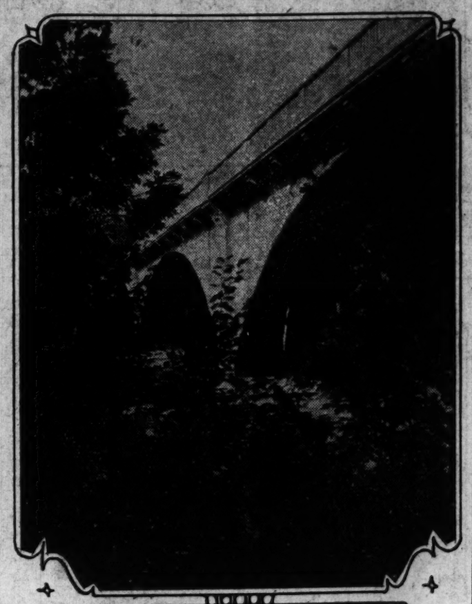
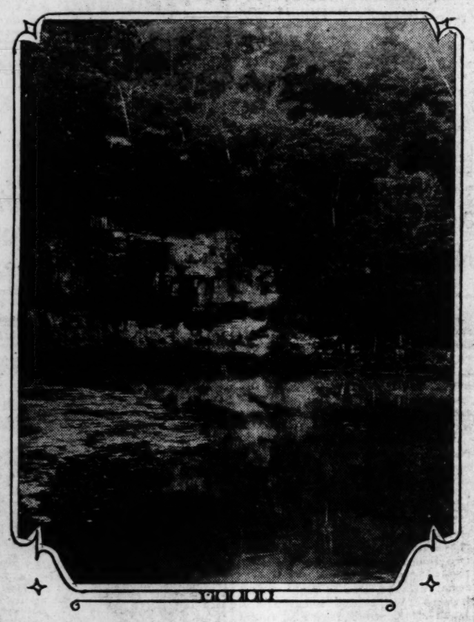
Shannon County, One of Last Ozark Strongholds, Made Accessible to Motorists

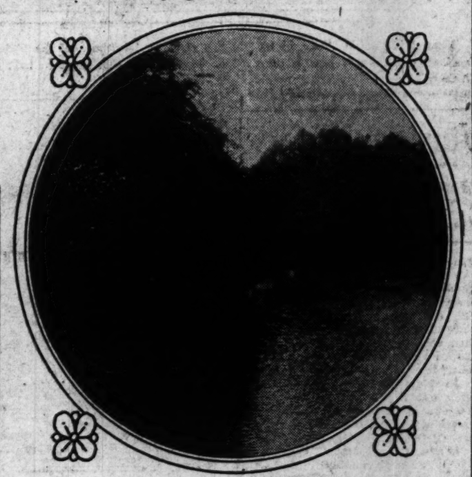
An enchanting view of Spring Valley Creek, in Round Spring State Park, near Missouri Highway No. 19.



The well-known concrete arch bridge carrying Missouri No. 19 over the Current River at Round Spring State Park.



Alley Spring, in the State Park of that name. The spring gurgles forth from the bottom of this deep, blue pool.



A view of Jack's Fork River from a bridge over Missouri Highway No. 19, just north of Eminence.

By RICHARD G. BAUMHOFF.

SHANNON COUNTY, one of the last strongholds of wild grandeur unspoiled by man in the Ozark Mountains of Missouri, has been made accessible by motor. It is possible to drive the 185 miles from St. Louis to Eminence, the county seat in the center of Shannon, in five to six hours, taking the pavement to Cuba and State Highway No. 19, a combination of good gravel or smooth all-weather roads, on to Eminence and farther south.

There are two major unfinished sections between Cuba and Eminence, but they will be eliminated soon. One is a section of graded earth just north of Salem, which will be graveled by Christmas. The other is the difficult ford of Spring Valley Creek and the nerve-wracking precipitous hill to the south of it, at Round Spring State Park. A contract for a bridge and a new piece of road there will be let probably in January, for completion by May.

At present it is quite easy to drive the dirt at Salem when it is not too wet, and to ford Spring Valley Creek when rains have not made it too deep. As for the hill, any good driver can negotiate it, though not without an exclamation over its pitch.

Shannon County offers scenery which is rivaled in Missouri only by the famous White River country, but its charms have been comparatively unknown because this sparsely populated district has been so hard to reach. Now the State Highway Department has accomplished sufficient work to open this as a new wonderland for St. Louisans and the rest of the world. It is not an exaggeration to say that the Ozarks in Shannon County compare in scenic splendor with the Alleghenies, the Adirondacks and other wooded Eastern ranges. The altitude, to be sure, is not as high as in the East, but height is a relative matter when it comes to viewing a serrated horizon.

From the hilltops and ridges of Shannon, in places, the eye can travel for mile after mile, through the everlasting haze and to beckoning skylines far away. The terrain is a mass of blended browns just now, streaked with the black of bare trees, dotted with the emerald green of pines and cedars, and flushed here and there with the last reds of autumn.

The State highways run up hill and down dale, now soaring on top of the world, now winding through peaceful valleys. The countryside is the very embodiment of the Ozark region, where a true lover of the hills and woods can feel an unaccountable, haunting allurement. Away from the State roads, the county is penetrated by few rural lanes. It is hilly everywhere, but the most striking heights, at least of those that are easy to reach, are in the section north of Eminence.

State highway No. 19, which is the handiest route to reach from St. Louis, bisects the country from north to south. U. S. Highway No. 60 runs from east to west across the southern end. No. 19 is reached by taking the paved U. S. No. 66 (Manchester road) to Cuba. It is possible to follow No. 61 (Lemay Ferry road) and No. 21 to No. 60, thence go west to Shannon County.

Some of the finest views may be had from No. 19, without leaving the car. The enthusiast, however, will want to get out and hike as much as time will permit, and to explore the backwoods roads when the weather is dry. If he can, he will get a horse and follow the trails in the saddle.

The Current River rushes in its deep, picturesque valley across Shannon from northwest to southeast, and the Jack's Fork, coming from the west, joins it near Eminence. These primitive streams, full of game fish, attract many anglers in season. The deep forests offer many chances for hunters.

Round Spring State Park, on the south bank of the Current River and hard by No. 19, is worth going far to see. The spring gushes from the bottom of a deep bowl of rock; its surface is placid and the water is a rare, dark blue in color. From the pool the water, averaging 5,000,000 gallons daily, flows unseen through a natural bridge or, rather, tunnel in the rock and finds its way to the river through a glen in the park.

Alley Spring State Park is reached by fair country roads west from Eminence or north from No 60. Alley Spring, with a still surface and brilliant color like that of Round Spring, flows 55,000,000 gallons daily into Jack's Fork. It rises beneath a rocky cliff and is flanked by a picturesque old dam and mill. Both parks have facilities for camping and fishing.

One of the sights of Shannon, away from the beaten path, is the "sinks of Sinkin Creek. There the stream roars through a huge tunnel of rock. Adventurous boatmen sometimes shoot through this awesome place.

It would be a mistake to infer that all the beauty on No. 19 is confined to Shannon County. Crawford and Dent counties on the north and Oregon County have fine scenery—hills and woods. In northern Dent County there is Indian Trail State Park, containing more than 12,000 acres of wild land, heavily timbered and with a refuge stocked with deer and wild turkey. In all of the counties there are fine panoramas to be seen from the highway and from the back country.

From the St. Louis limits on Manchester avenue to the junction of No. 19 in Cuba it is 79.8 miles. No. 19 stretches southward to the Arkansas line for 150 miles. Its condition, plans for its improvement and something of its sights are best told in order by the following log prepared by this chronicler on recent drives:

00.0—Leave No. 66 at Cuba. The State will build an underpass here at the Frisco Railway next year to eliminate a grade crossing and a double turn. Fine gravel follows, crossing the Meramec River on a picturesque arch bridge to

08.0—Steelville, seat of Crawford County. Fine gravel continues to 12.0—Then the road consists of fairly broad grading, with natural gravel in the soil to make an all-weather surface. There is one exception, a mile of fine gravel in the vicinity of a new, modern bridge over Crooked Creek, a mile and a half north of the Dent County line. Many motorists will recall that this creek used to have a treacherous and troublesome ford. The grading, done by State maintenance forces, has resulted in a new route, eliminating former winding, narrow road. There is no intention to gravel the graded section next year, as it is not essential.

18.4—Cherryville, a hamlet.

26.3—End of the broad grading described above. Narrow, winding gravel road in excellent condition starts.

27.8—Sligo, near the entrance to Indian Trail Park.

29.8—End of the narrow road; start of fine, broad gravel, which runs across a mountain section and over a new bridge on the Meramec River, whose longest branch starts in southern Dent County.

32.8—End of fine gravel; start of the gap of graded earth, which is very difficult to traverse when muddy. The grading, part of which is in better shape because it is old, and which will be covered with gravel this year, extends to

41.9—After which there is an old gravel road to 42.8—Salem. There is fine, broad gravel southward to 61.0—Shannon County line. Beyond there is broad grading of natural gravel road (no immediate futher improvement planned yet) to

71.0—Fine gravel starts, crossing Sinkin' Creek on an arch bridge, and running to

73.0—Current River. A magnificent concrete bridge of three arches is in use here. Round Spring Park is to the south. Old gravel leads to

73.5—Ford of Spring Valley Creek, and start of the notorious steep hill. There are two routes over this hill, the steepest being for southbound traffic and the newer and better, but narrow and lofty course being for northbound vehicles. The one-way section ends at

74.5—The finest views begin. So does narrow road, having either natural or old gravel, and extending to

80.5—Fine broad gravel, which follows a high ridge, then gradually and gracefully descends to the valley, in a setting of great vistas. This ends at

84.5—Old bridge across Jack's Fork, which the State plans to replace some time. Narrow gravel leads to 85.5—Eminence. An interesting county seat with reasonably good accommodations, and facilities to equip sportsmen. A short stretch of fine gravel extends southward, then a narrow, old gravel road, winding much of the way through a valley and fording a creek several times. Except for periods after heavy rains, there is said to be no difficulty at these fords.

96.5—Winona, a small town on No. 60. No. 19 is routed over the former highway, which is partly fine, broad gravel and partly old gravel, west to

106.5—Birc.. Tree. No. 19 turns south here on narrow, old gravel, winding through the woods, with some stretches of graded earth which are hard to travel when muddy, to

135.5—Alton, the small capital of Oregon County. South from Alton grading, which may be covered with gravel this year, extends to

138.5—Then narrow, fair, old gravel extends to 150.5—Thayer, a railroad town, the junction with U. S. Highway No. 63, just north of Mammoth Spring, Ark.

Convertible Body Types Popular at New York Salon

One of the outstanding features noted at the twenty-fifth national automobile salon, held in New York last week, was the growth in popularity of the convertible type of body construction. The roadster has given away almost entirely to the convertible coupe, if the salon is an indication, and most of the sedans exhibited were of the convertible type.

Ingenuous arrangement of windows, pillars and tops makes it possible to convert these cars into phaetons, sedans or limousines.

The body line at the back has been lowered so that when the top is folded it lies flat, giving an unbroken line straight back from the radiator. Some tops are completely hidden.

A number of phaetons were shown and it was with this type, as well as with the convertibles, that brilliant colors were used effectively.

Highway of Gold.

One of the strangest and most expensive highways in the world is a five-mile stretch in the southern part of Colorado. It contains $15,000,000 worth of virgin gold, $3000 worth for every mile. The precious metal found its humble resting place by reason of the fact that the crushed rock for the cement mix was shipped from the ore dumps of the Cripple Creek gold field. The gold in this material assayed $1.50 to the ton and 2000 tons were used for each mile of the wonderful highway.

Fuel Taxed in Peru.

Motorists in Peru pay a gasoline tax of 4 cents on the gallon.

Automobile Club Will Open Three Branch Offices

Branch offices of the Automobile Club of Missouri will be opened this week in North and South St. Louis and at Clayton, according to Matt F. Morse, secretary and general manager.

The branches will be located as follows: North St. Louis, 3642 Natural Bridge avenue; South St. Louis, 4053 South Grand boulevard, and Clayton, Forsythe boulevard and Meramec avenue.

Each will be in the charge of a branch manager and the following have been appointed: North, Ray G. Mills; South, G. G. Schlapprizzi, and Clayton, Ray T. Byler.

Membership in the club is approaching the 20,000 mark, Morse said, and it is expected that the branches will bring the operation of the club closer to a large proportion of its St. Louis membership. A member can obtain service at any of the branches regardless of his own address and in like manner members of affiliated A. A. A. clubs may obtain service at any of the branches.

Children Protected.

The safety patrols, sponsored by American Automobile Association clubs, safeguard the lives of tens of thousands of children in more than 500 cities of the United States by guidance across traffic laden streets on the way to and from school. Medals are awarded to the young heroes for "distinguished service in protecting the lives of children."

A Nice, Long Road.

Plans are being considered for a modern, hard-surface highway to extend from Fairbanks, Alaska, to Peru.

Automobile Production Growing in Detroit Area

Men Return to Work as 1930 Cars Begin to Roll Off Lines at Factories—Other Manufacturers Decline to Comment on Wage Increase at One Plant—"Eights" Will be More Popular.

By FRED KINGSBURY.

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 7.—More activity has been shown at the various automobile manufacturing plants in the Detroit district this week. Men are gradually returning to employment which means that production is gaining at most points. Practically all of the manufacturers have completed plans for producing their new models and, in a number of cases, these models are being turned out on the regular production lines.

More new cars will be introduced late this month and early in January than during any previous year at this time. Heretofore, a great many new cars were introduced in the late summer and early fall. This year, however, the effort to bring out new lines seems to have become more concentrated around the first of the year.

Although the largest producer of motor cars announced wage increases for all employes during the week, none of the other manufacturers have made any comment on this move. Wages for automobile workers for years have compared very favorably with those in other lines of manufacturing business.

Early every year large numbers of men from Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and also West Virginia, come to Detroit when they hear that workers are required in the various plants.

As a rule, an automobile worker has steady employment with the exception of possibly two or three weeks during the fall months when inventory is being taken.

During the past week, large numbers of automobile distributers and dealers from all over the country have been in Detroit to "get a line" on new models and any new policies that may be adopted by the manufacturers during the coming year. Practically all of these dealers are looking forward to a good year's business. They do not believe that the recent slump in the stock market will have any lasting effect on business, and especially the automotive industry.

Nothing radical in the way of construction will be seen in the new 1930 automobile models. Everything that has been adopted for the new cars has been brought about after a long period of development.

Inquiry brings forth the fact that no Detroit automobile manufacturer will introduce a front drive car. There will be only three of this type on the American market during the first six months of 1930.

Detroit manufacturers are giving a great amount of study to eight-cylinder automobiles and they are going ahead with this development. More eights will be seen during the next three months than ever before in the history of the industry.

It is likely that more automobile manufacturers may adopt the 4-speed transmission, although manufacturers are very reticent on this question. Principal among the improvements will be those made in bodies. Of course, performance will be much better all along the line, and bright colors will predominate.

Wire wheels will retain their popularity and a great many of the cars will continue to be equipped with the disc and wood types.

Considerable study is being given by Detroit automobile manufacturers to stainless steel and it is expected that, before many years, this will be adopted generally by the industry.

Club for Old Drivers.

W. R. Woodmansee of San Diego, Cal., is suggesting the formation of an association of veteran automobile drivers and owners. To become eligible for membership a person must have owned and driven automobiles for at least a quarter of a century. He has been an enthusiastic motorist for more than 27 years, during which time he has owned 19 cars.

Drafting Men to Build Roads.

Under the new law, everybody in Turkey between the ages of 18 and 60, except embassy and consular officials, invalids, students, soldiers and fathers of five living children will be drafted for road service. The men must break stones and shovel dirt each year for 10 consecutive days or pay an exemption tax of $4.

Growth in Favor Of Convertibles Has Been Rapid

Custom Body Builder Says This Type May Appear on Cheaper Cars.

So steadily is the two-purpose convertible automobile gaining favor in this country that the time may come when this closed and open type of car is likely to be produced in the low-priced field, just as the low-priced sedan of today has been evolved for the leanest purses, declared L. Clayton Hill, vice president and general manager of Dietrich, Inc., custom body builders, in an address before the Detroit section of the Society of Automotive Engineers recently.

Hill said the demand for the convertible type has come with the tremendous development of outdoor sports, the craze for the healthful ultra-violet rays from the unfiltered sun and the growing knowledge that exposure to the out-of-doors spells health. Weather, too, he declared, is a strong ally of the American convertible body, since many sections of the country enjoy long periods of open riding weather.

But weather conditions and the craze for the out-of-doors are only two of many factors responsible for the fast growing demand. From an engineering standpoint, he asserted, the greatest impetus came with the perfecting of devices that overcame the faults common to earlier convertible bodies. These devices, he said, have eliminated squeaks, rattles and leaks and have made the folding of the tops an easy matter and as snug and warm as the standard sedan body.

Furthermore, Hill pointed out, motorists realize that the beauties of millions of square miles of American scenery cannot be glimpsed by peeking out of sedan windows that cut vision to narrow limits.

Mass production alone will place the perfected convertible car within the low-priced field, he said. And this is entirely possible, he said, in view of the many ingenious devices that have been invented to overcome previous faults and weaknesses.

Western Auto Co. Moves Into New Enlarged Plant

Floodlights Illuminate Interior; Building Is of Spanish Architecture.

Brilliantly lighted with two series of floodlights, remodeled and enlarged, the building of the Western Automobile Co., Pierce-Arrow distributer, to which an extensive addition has been made, will be in full use within a few days, it is announced by Sam Breadon, president.

The main new car salesroom has been redecorated and enlarged, all offices having been moved to a mezzanine floor, between the salesroom and the main floor service department. Across the front of the ceiling 48 floodlights give illumination in addition to the other lights.

A full length window of Spanish design has been built diagonally across the corner of the showroom, fronting both on Washington boulevard and Euclid avenue. The principle entrance is now on Washington. A feature of this is the enclosed vestibule which shuts out drafts.

To the rear of the main display room is an auxiliary showroom, where cars with varying color combinations may be viewed.

Some used cars are on display on the main floor, others on the third. Emergency service is provided on the first floor. Porcelain tile grease racks have been installed.

Between floors, roomy ramps lead, with rough concrete bases preventing slipping and skidding.

On the second floor of the addition are located the shops. Removable work benches facilitate repairs. A feature of the third floor, where storage space is available, is the skylight arrangement which extends the full width.

The exterior of the building is in Spanish style architecture and this motif has been carried to the interior. A combination of green and deep tan on the outside is set off by an interior color scheme of buff walls, lighter ceilings and walnut woodwork.

The Western Automobile Co. is the oldest automobile distributer in St. Louis and the oldest Pierce-Arrow distributer in the United States, having been in business for the last 27 years.

Company Formed Here to Distribute Three Truck Lines

Miller Relay Truck Co. Will Handle Relay, Garford and Service.

Formation of the Miller Ready Relay Truck Co. to act as St. Louis distributer of the complete line of Relay, Garford and Service trucks was announced and a formal opening of the company's sales and service building at 2122 Chouteau avenue held, Friday evening. More than 200 truck owners were present at the opening.

F. A. MILLER

Fred A. Miller is president of the local company and L. T. Miller secretary-treasurer. Both are well-known in automobile circles.

A program at the opening was featured by showing of a motion picture entitled "New Profits in Transportation," and an address by L. A. Graham, vice president and sales manager of the Relay Motors Corporation of Lima, O., manufacturers of the three lines of vehicles. Graham, an authority on transportation matters, discussed "The Second Cost of Transportation."

Relay trucks have aroused interest because of their revolutionary method of transmitting power to the rear wheels. Some of the claims made for this truck are that it will double the life of the rear tires, give 10 per cent more fuel mileage, cushion road shocks and decrease depreciation.

C. A. Aldrich, formerly distributer in St. Louis of another line of trucks, will act as general manager of the new company.

Term Horsepower Was Applied by Watt Literally

Ever since the automobile came into use enthusiastic owners have boasted about their motors; they have spoken in glowing terms of horsepower and other attributes, according to Ray Wice, sales manager of the Oliver Cadillac Co., local Cadillac-LaSalle distributer.

"It is safe to say that few who use the term horsepower so freely are acquainted with its definition and have even less knowledge of its origin," Wice said. "For their information, Cadillac gives the story.

"The horsepower unit was formulated about 1780, soon after use of the steam engine became practical. These early engines were designed for use in the mines, mills, breweries and distilleries of England. In every instance, they replaced horses as a source of power.

"It became necessary for James Watt, in order to acquaint the new users of his engines with their power capacity, to develop some striking and easily understood illustration of the work they could perform. Since the engines had replaced horses and since fairly definite ideas concerning the amount of work a horse was able to do existed, he chose the term horsepower.

Despite adverse criticism, Watt's definition and term survived and today when we use the term horsepower, we are reckoning on the same basis used by Watt. Therefore, an automobile negine, such as the Cadillac V-type eight, with a 95-horsepower rating, actually develops enough power to raise 3,135,000 pounds one foot.

There are upwards of 51,600 commercial garages in the United States, representing a total investment of $2,000,000,000.

Finance Cost Lowered From 8 To 15 Per Cent

Ford Subsidiary Announces Move in Line With Company's General Policies.

The cost of financing the purchase of Ford automobiles has been reduced from eight to 15 per cent, it is announced by E. W. Nugent, local branch manager of the Universal Credit Co., with offices in the Boatmen's Bank Building, which handles Ford purchase financing here.

The reduction is in line with the Ford policy of contributing toward the continuation of good business throughout the country, Nugent said.

Organized in February, 1928, the Universal company did a business aggregating $15,000,000. During 1929 it is estimated the business will total $225,000,000, showing its growth. Twenty-five branches are now in operation.

"A sound installment plan of buying is now one of the necessary elements of our modern business system," Nugent declared, commenting on the cost reduction.

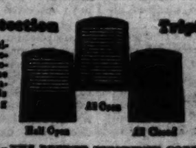
Moto-Gard
The Triple Service Shutter

You can't forget to operate your Moto-Gard. Its control is on the dash—under your eye and hand. A light turn of the thumb screw operates it. The indicator tells you at all times the exact degree of opening of the louvres.

Extra Protection
Moto-Gard's scientific construction provides the extra protection needed in the bottom of your radiator where water cools first and freezing starts.



Triple Service
In average winter weather open the top louvres and close the lower. Half open in cold weather. Either all open or all closed do the same when parking.

Motoring Vernacular

British Drivers "Corner" an Intersection, "Horning" as They Do So—When Clutch "Judders" It Should Be Fixed—Tires Are "Tyres," Gas Is "Petrol."

DOES your clutch "judder?" Were you "hiffed" while driving home? Is your "strangler" working? Do you like your new "saloon?"

These questions, while they might sound strange to an American, are part of the accepted English motoring vernacular. Over in the British Isles, "judder" means "slip," "hiff" is a synonym for an automobile "crash," "strangler" is the same as the "choke" and "saloon" does not bring up a picture of swinging doors and sawdust floors, but of a sedan.

In America, cars are two-passenger, five-passenger, etc. In England, "five-seater," and the like.

On this side of the Atlantic, machines are described as being beautiful, graceful, snappy. When an Englishman wants to say a kind word about an automobile, he says "elegant."

A Yankee drives into a filling station and orders five gallons of gasoline. Over there it is "petrol." In the United States a tire might need to be changed. It is spelled "tyre" in Great Britain.

The windshield of an American car which is shipped across the ocean becomes a "windscreen" when it arrives. And the device that cleans it is known as a "windscreen cleaner," instead of a windshield wiper.

The hood ceases to be the hood the minute the car lands at Southampton. It is translated into "bonnet." The hood over there is the top of an open car and the top of a closed car is the roof.

An American backs up; an Englishman reverses. One shifts, the other changes gears. Where an American climbs hills "in high," the Britisher does it "on top." Each finally gets there, although the one may find the grade steep, while the other may encounter a stiff "gradient." The top of the hill is just that to an American motorist. To an Englishman, it is the "summit."

In New York, an automobilist may get in the wrong "lane" of traffic. In London, a Bobby might caution him against getting in the wrong "track."

When the former reaches a street intersection leading to his home, he turns. His British brother "corners." Over here we blow the horn while in England it is a matter of "horning."

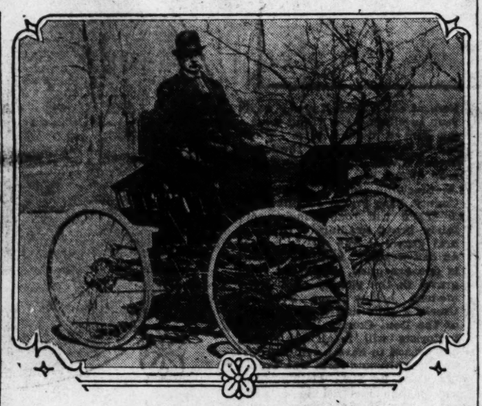
The artisan in Detroit who sprayed the finish on the car that went to England may have thought he "lacquered" it, but so far as the ultimate buyer abroad is concerned, the car was "cellulosed." Over here they are spark plugs. Across the water they are "sparking" plugs.

The clutch "grabs" in the United States and "snatches" in England.

Light to an American means headlight, tail light, dash light or stop light. To the English motorist it is a window or door glass. When lamps glare in England they are said to "dazzle."

As to mechanical parts, the transmission of the United States is the gear box of England, the spring bolts are spring pins and the bushing is just plain bush, while a tie rod becomes a track rod.

There is one term on which both are agreed. Oil is oil in both countries.



Hints for Winter Drivers

CONTRARY to prevailing notions it is better to drive up a slight grade when the engine is cold than to go downgrade.

Some drivers test for traction by applying the brakes and noting if the car tends to skid. It is safer to make the test by accelerating. If the rear wheels spin when you step on the gas suddenly traction is at low ebb.

When stopping in high "high" with a four-speed transmission, press out the clutch a little sooner or the brakes may stall the engine.

When an engine starts to knock, even though it carries anti-knock gas in the tank, it is important to retard the spark a little in accelerating and on the upgrade.

At this season never pour the contents of a filling station's water can into the radiator unless you are sure it's water. The cans sometimes are used for anti-freeze.

It's unfortunate when the driver who knows his engine should not be driven fast when cold makes the mistake of damaging it by backing up too speedily.

As a rule, in colder weather the car can be stopped without pressing so hard on the brake pedal. This is because the brake drums of the widely used internal expanding system contracts with cold.

Even if the car is equipped with an automatic winter front it is well to cover the radiator to retain the heat when parking for any length of time. The shutters do not close immediately.

Because the water level should be a little lower when anti-freeze is carried in the radiator be sure to caution attendants against filling up the car with water when storing the machine in public garages on a cold weather trip.

A vacuum operated windshield wiper will run fastest when the driver lifts his foot from the accelerator while the car is moving at a good rate of speed.

In cold weather oil pressure often lags so far behind engine speed that it is like running with the oil pump broken to accelerate steadily for any period of time.

Now that engines carry higher compression and pistons which maintain constant clearance even when cold it isn't necessarily a sign of battery weakness if the lights dim a little during the cranking process.

Gears are apt to vibrate more in cold weather, especially when first starting out. It will help to quiet them to press lightly with two fingers of the right hand on the shift lever about one third down from the knob.

When caught in an ice storm with the windshield so coated that visibility is virtually nil why not try melting off the ice with the cigar lighter.

When I am caught behind a car that stops suddenly I always sound my horn while applying the brakes. In several instances this has encouraged the driver ahead to move forward a little.

It is important to bear in mind that the overheated engine with alcohol in the coiling system is not as hot as one that overheats with glycerine or with a combination of glycerine and alcohol.

So far as the mechanism of the car is concerned it is best to go around corners on the car's own momentum without accelerating or braking. The drive line, including the differential gears, is thus relieved of strain and simply acts like a "floating" member.

If the streets are slippery and there are no passengers aboard the car may not accelerate as rapidly as under more normal conditions. This is more pronounced the more powerful the engine. Acceleration is sacrificed through wheel slippage.

When the car has been standing all week in cold weather it is especially important to warm up the engine carefully since oil will be completely drained off the cylinder walls.

Car Stealing Time.

Approximately 116,000 motor vehicles, valued at $31,360,000, were stolen in the United States last year. October and November are the greatest car-stealing months, according to the records.

Gasoline Tax in First Six Months Was $175,140,140

Not counting refunds made, the total amount of the gasoline tax collected by 47 of the states and the District of Columbia in the first six months of 1929 amounted to $175,140,140, according to the Bureau of Public Roads. In New York the tax became effective May 1, and the Illinois law did not become effective until Aug. 1. A totaly of 5,693,873,663 gallons was taxed in the 47 states and the District of Columbia. The average tax per gallon was 3.07 cents.

In 1928, gasoline tax paid in the first six months of the year in 45 states, the District of Columbia, and in Illinois for one month of the period, was $140,625,398. The tax in Illinois was collected for January and discontinued in February. Massachusetts and New York had no gasoline tax in 1928. The total number of gallons taxed in the first six months of 1928 was 4,652,892,856, and the average tax paid was 3.02 cents per gallons. All the states now collect a gasoline tax.

Auto Dealer Trades Cars for Radios, Monkeys and Whatnot

DOWN in the vicinity of Knoxville, Tenn., people don't need money to buy automobiles. All they need is anything of value and "Tradin' Claude" Reeder will exchange one of his motor cars for it.

"Tradin' Claude" is the nickname for Col. Claude S. Reeder, president of the Cherokee Motor Co. of Knoxville. For the last eight years he has been trading his cars for crops and clothing, mules and monkeys, coal and diamonds, cemetery lots, abandoned houses, cattle, horses, farm machinery, radios, pianos and whatnot.

And, as a result, "Tradin' Claude" believes he has solved what is known as the used car problem in his own unusual way.

"In the last eight years since we have been trading," says the amiable Colonel, "we have sold 8000 automobiles this way. And we have been able to keep our second-hand cars down to practically nothing."

Yet the stock of knick-knacks and treatures that he has accumulated in payment for these automobiles has also been sold out almost to the last item. In turn, Col. Reeder says he has come out on the profitable end.

"The idea of trading for anything," explained "Tradin' Claude," "started by the fact that we had a houseful of second-hand cars that were not moving. We ran a full page ad, addressing it to the farmers around Knoxville and asking them to bring in their mules or old machinery and anything of value they had to trade for a car.

"The day set for the trade looked like a carnival. It was in the fall and, of course, the farmers did not want to carry their stock over the winter and feed them. At that time I owned a farm close to town where we could take the traded stock and hold it for a good market."

The market came and Col. Reeder's first trading deal "went over big."

In order to be sure he isn't being cheated in a stock deal, he has engaged the expert services of J. L. Cox, who knows the stock-trading game from A to Z. Cox does the appraising, Reeder completes the sale.

The first carnival of trade led to so many others of different varieties, that today "Tradin' Claude" Reeder can't think of an item which has not been traded for one of his cars.

A man came to him with a large diamond, and went out with a used automobile and $260 to boot! Recently he took over a cemetery lot in trade and about $550 worth of coal.

One of his unique trading activities is that in which he deals in crop futures, for the price of a new or used car. An expert tobacco appraiser surveyed the growing crops of farmers in the district and on this man's appraisals Reeder took over future deliveries of tobacco for his automobiles, paying the farmers the difference in money. The crop, when harvested, was delivered to a tobacco warehouse, where Reeder has already arranged its sale.

"We traded a second-hand hearse for a carload of sweet potatoes," he recalls. "We found a market for the potatoes before the carload arrived, in a construction camp. A carnival was in town and the owners heard of our advertisement. We traded a car for a bear and two monkeys, which in turn we sold to another carnival company.

"We traded with a piano house for six pianos, and we found a ready market for these. We traded some of our cars for 100 suits of men's clothing and sold them through a fire sale in another store.

"We traded a used car for 10 radios and ran an ad that cleaned these up. We traded a car for two houses that were going to be torn down and we sold the material off the ground right where it was. We traded a car and a truck for Oriental rugs and found a ready market for these."

Through his wide acquaintance in this locality, Col Reeder has been able to keep in touch with the markets for everything which has come into his hands. When he couldn't make a quick sale of a traded material, he would take a credit memorandum for it and sell this.

"We are making trades daily for vacant lots and other real estate. We have traded for all kinds of building material, lumber, roofing, cement, marble, glass and sold them to contractors.

"Our reputation as traders has spread over East Tennessee and we have calls daily for different commodities. A shipper had a standing order with us for mules to be delivered to a large plantation owner. We got these from a contractor for some cars and we sent them right over to the shipper, making a profit both ways."

Col. Reeder's original motive was to keep down his used-car stock. He has done this, but he has also established a new kind of business—a combination automobile-live-stock-produce and what-have-you exchange.

Traveling Schools

Two Studebaker busses, which will serve as traveling service schools, and which are fitted with up-to-date types of service tools and machinery, have been placed in service by the Studebaker Corporation. The busses are designed to establish closer contact between factory and dealer in service matters. They will aid in establishing an even higher standard of service for owners throughout the country.

The busses are fitted with specially constructed bodies containing work benches and a wide variety of interesting tools and equipment which permit dealers to offer a specialized type of service.

Dry Out Linings.

Older cars have exposed brakes and occasionally they need to be "dried out." Driving with the hand throttle for about 100 yards with the brakes held lightly on is one of the most effective methods of drying the linings. It can be overdone, however, especially by applying the brakes with too great force.

ives 10 Simple Rules Governing Safety in Driving ead of Automobile Company Says Liquor Won't Mix With Gasoline.

The conscientious observance of simple rules for safe driving epared by one of the nation's emost traffic authorities would terially reduce the number of ffic and highway accidents in United States, and at the same e result in a decidedly more icient use of motor cars, acrding to A. R. Erskine, president the Studebaker Corporation.

"The many complications and w safety requirements imposed modern traffic conditions are ly covered in these 10 commandents for motorists," said Erskine. hey were compiled at the reest of safety workers by Dr. iller McClintock, director of the rskine Bureau for Street Traffic esearch which Studebaker endows Harvard University.

"The rules are based on traffic udies in city and suburban areas ith an estimated total population excess of 10,000,000 people. The pointers which it is believed moorists should always bear in mind hether driving in the city or in e open country are:

1. Keep your car in sound condition.
2. Keep your car under control; it is dangerous if you cannot stop in the assured clear distance ahead.
3. Keep your eye on the road; one second's inattention may mean an accident.
4. Never fight for the right of way; the only real utility of right of way rules is at inquests or damage suits.
5. Go along with the procession; you have no more right to "drag" traffic than you have to jeopardize yourself and others by unnecessary "cutting in."
6. Be as courteous on the road as you are in your own home; give other drivers and especially pedestrians a fair chance.
7. Know your local traffic rules and obey them exactly; they are the motorist's safety code and book of etiquette combined.
8. Take pride in your driving skill; if normal people are nervous to ride with you, something is wrong with your driving.
9. Don't mix liquor, worry, or anger with gasoline.
10. Study local maps and experiment for shorter and less congested routes; you may be surprised at the time you will save.

Finance Cost Lowered From 8 To 15 Per Cent

Ford Subsidiary Announces Move in Line With Company's General Policies.

The cost of financing the purchase of Ford automobiles has been reduced from eight to 15 per cent, it is announced by E. W. Nugent, local branch manager of the Universal Credit Co., with offices in the Boatmen's Bank Building, which handles Ford purchase financing here.

The reduction is in line with the Ford policy of contributing toward the continuation of good business throughout the country, Nugent said.

Organized in February, 1928, the Universal company did a business aggregating $15,000,000. During 1929 it is estimated the business will total $225,000,000, showing its growth. Twenty-five branches are now in operation.

"A sound installment plan of buying is now one of the necessary elements of our modern business system," Nugent declared, commenting on the cost reduction.

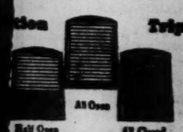
h Indicator Controls
Moto-Gard
The Triple Service Shutter
You can't forget to operate your Moto-Gard. Its control is on the dash—under your eye and hand. A light turn of the thumb screw operates it. The indicator tells you at all times the exact degree of opening of the leaves.
Triple Service



In average winter weather open the top leaves and close the lower. Mild weather all leaves. Bitter cold—close them all and do the same when parking.

Gives 10 Simple Rules Governing Safety in Driving

Head of Automobile Company Says Liquor Won't Mix With Gasoline.

The conscientious observance of ten simple rules for safe driving prepared by one of the nation's foremost traffic authorities would materially reduce the number of traffic and highway accidents in the United States, and at the same time result in a decidedly more efficient use of motor cars, according to A. R. Erskine, president of the Studebaker Corporation.

"The many complications and new safety requirements imposed by modern traffic conditions are fully covered in these 10 commandments for motorists," said Erskine. They were compiled at the request of safety workers by Dr. Miller McClintock, director of the Erskine Bureau for Street Traffic Research which Studebaker endows at Harvard University.

"The rules are based on traffic studies in city and suburban areas with an estimated total population in excess of 10,000,000 people. The 10 pointers which it is believed motorists should always bear in mind whether driving in the city or in the open country are:

1. Keep your car in sound condition.
2. Keep your car under control; it is dangerous if you cannot stop in the assured clear distance ahead.
3. Keep your eye on the road; one second's inattention may mean an accident.
4. Never fight for the right of way; the only real utility of right of way rules is at inquests or damage suits.
5. Go along with the procession; you have no more right to "drag" traffic than you have to jeopardize yourself and others by unnecessary "cutting in."
6. Be as courteous on the road as you are in your own home; give other drivers and especially pedestrians a fair chance.
7. Know your local traffic rules and obey them exactly; they are the motorist's safety code and book of etiquette combined.
8. Take pride in your driving skill; if normal people are nervous to ride with you, something is wrong with your driving.
9. Don't mix liquor, worry, or anger with gasoline.
10. Study local maps and experiment for shorter and less congested routes; you may be surprised at the time you will save.

Dealer Appointment Announced Here

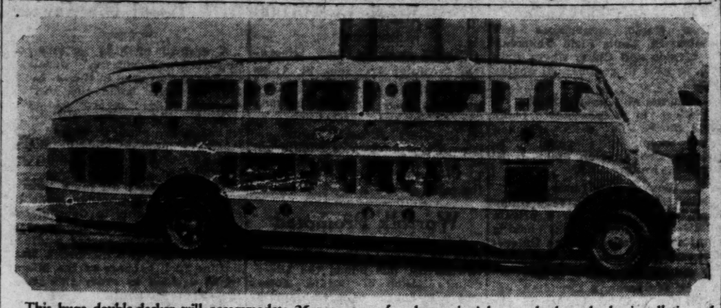
Night Coach on St. Louis-Kansas City Run



This huge double-decker will accommodate 26 passengers for day and night travel, through the installation of ingenious sleeping arrangements.

Motor Bus With Sleeping Facilities Is Exhibited Here

Pickwick Nite Coach Has Room for 26 Passengers, Chef, Porter and Driver.

One of the latest models of motor busses, the Pickwick Nite Coach, was placed on display in St. Louis Friday and yesterday, under the auspices of the Pickwick-Greyhound Lines, Inc. Nite coaches will begin operating between St. Louis and Kansas City, Mo., on regular schedules, within the next 30 days, according to Frank C. Woodrow, terminal superintendent of Pickwick here.

Seats are convertible into double deck berths for night travel. Each bus accommodates 26 passengers, with additional seating accommodations for the driver, porter and steward.

In each compartment, seating two persons, are dressing space, hot and cold running water, mirror, thermos jugs with ice water and other comforts. A buffet kitchen enables meals to be served en route.

The coach was taken to City Hall and city officials were taken for a tour of the city, Friday.

Les Morrison Sets Speed Record From New York to Miami

A new speed record between New York City and Miami, Fla., has been established by a Marmon-built Roosevelt sedan, driven by Les Morrison, according to word just received at the Marmon factory, Indianapolis, Ind.

The new record is 29 hours and 21 minutes elapsed time, beating the best previous record, established by "Cannon Ball" Baker in January, 1929, by one hour and 49 minutes. A total of 1477 miles was covered.

The test, which was timed by Postal Telegraph, started at 1 a. m. from near the entrance of the Holland Tunnel, New York, and ended at 6:21 a. m. the next day.

After leaving New York, Morrison's route led him through Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington and Richmond, Va. He arrived at the last named city eight hours and 25 minutes after the start and immediately proceeded to Raleigh, N. C., then to Columbia, S. C.; Augusta, Ga.; Waycross, Ga., and Jacksonville, where he checked in at 11:55 o'clock on the night of the same day he started.

The route then led through Daytona and Palm Beach to Miami. The only mishap on the trip was a single flat tire 20 miles after the departure from Columbia, S. C. Morrison's only sustenance during the entire journey was coffee. He drank four cups during stops for gasoline and oil.

Vertical Tube Design Used on Radiators

An unusual type of radiator construction that is said to be effective in cold weather is utilized in the Cartridge radiators, which are distributed here by Jett & Mautz, Inc., 3228 Olive street. The water in these radiators, instead of running through vertical tubes, run horizontally.

If a leak develops in the Cartridge type, repairs are said to be simple. The damaged tubes are removed and new ones inserted and soldered. Some of the highest priced cars, including the Rolls-Royce, use radiators of this design, according to William Mautz.

Cartridge radiators are used here on People's Motorbus Co. vehicles, by the Fire Department and on Parks and Universal airplanes, Mautz stated.

Tire Company Plans Retail Expansion

Within the next few months, service stations and tire stores in which the B. F. Goodrich company has financial interest will assume the identification of Goodrich Silvertown, Inc. Each unit will be one of a number of stores in this newly-organized retail division of the B. F. Goodrich Co., according to E. E. Gordon, branch manager.

With less than 150 stores, Goodrich Silvertown, Inc., units are comparatively few when considering the many thousands of tire dealers over the country, Gordon said, but they are located in various parts of the country which makes it possible for the retail organization to study the dealer problems to originate plans for better service and more economical retailing to motorists generally.

Torque Tubes, Maybe.

Even torque tubes are not above wear. If they have worn it is quite possible they are causing that noise noticed underneath the car when coasting.

Electrical Buffers

Electrically-driven sheepswool buffers are now being used to give a new degree of lustre and depth to the body finish on Dodge Brothers' cars. A new process that really amounts to burnishing the already highly hand-polished surface of the bodies and hoods, this operation results in an advance stage of brilliancy unknown and impossible with the old method of hand rubbing and polishing.

CHRYSLER'S BIGGEST VALUE

NEW CHRYSLER "66" COUPE, $985

TODAY'S Chrysler "66"—lowest-priced six ever to bear the Chrysler name—is in every way the biggest value ever offered by Chrysler.

It gives you Chrysler beauty, Chrysler luxury—and Chrysler performance! Here is high-compression power from any gasoline. Here is a superb engine with 7-bearing crankshaft and Iso-therm Invar Strut pistons; with impulse neutralizer and with positive fuel pump, instead of a vacuum tank. Rubber engine mountings are another advantage.

Here is the safety of weatherproof internal-expanding four-wheel hydraulic brakes. Here are remarkable riding qualities secured through a perfectly-balanced chassis and extra-long springs—and a new type of rubber-core spring shackle, noiseless as well as resilient, and never in need of lubrication. Just ask the nearest Chrysler dealer for a demonstration. He will gladly place a Chrysler "66" in your hands for any test or series of tests you desire to make.

Lubricating Oil Unfit for Use at 2 Temperatures

Hupmobile Meets Problem by Device Known as Baffleplate.

Practically every housewife has had the experience of heating sewing machine oil or a similar lubricant so that it is fit for use. Although her experiences have probably not included the heating of the sewing machine oil to such a high point that it loses its lubricating qualities, automotive engineers say that this regularly happens in the modern high-powered automobile.

The results of a series of investigations show that there are two periods at which automobile engine oil is unfit for proper motor lubrication. First is when the oil is so cold that it congeals. This has long been recognized among automobile engineers. Second is that temperature at which oil becomes so thin that it no longer provides a smooth lubricating film for bearing surfaces. These exhaustive tests have accurately determined the point at which this latter condition occurs.

Engines of great horsepower—and modern automotive design is leaning in the direction of greater power—generate much greater heat than did their predecessors. This is particularly true of the high-speed, large-bore engines.

Obviously, increased engine speed, greater cylinder area, hotter firing and other modern engine developments, combined with increased friction, mean more internal engine heat.

In all engine parts this heat is reduced in proportion to the quality of lubrication provided. Engineers claim that it is not only necessary to buy good oil, but also to maintain the quality of the oil in operation. If the oil thins beyond a certain point because of engine heat its lubricating capacity is greatly reduced. As the temperature mounts, the loss in lubricating efficiency becomes greater and greater.

What really happens, engineers say, is that the lubricating oil firm may be finally lost because of the thinning out of the oil from heat. In addition, carbonization may occur at high temperatures. The "danger zone" in oil deterioration begins at approximately 210 degrees Fahrenheit.

Knowing this point, the problem of automotive engineers has been to maintain the temperature of the engine oil below 210 degrees.

In the model "C" Hupmobile eight this has been accomplished in a unique development known as an oil baffleplate.

These two plates are an integral part of the crankcase. The upper end of each catches the drain of hot oil as it comes from the cylinders and pistons. Instead of the hot oil being dropped directly into the steaming oil in the engine pump, it is deflected to the outer and cooler edges of the crankcase. In this manner the temperature of oil in the crakcase is maintained at a temperature averaging from 20 to 30 degrees cooler than would be possible without some means of oil cooling.

Company engineers report that this method not only adds to the life and efficiency of the lubricant, but also adds to the life and efficiency of the engine.

Latest Edition of Curtiss Robin in Production

This new 190-horsepower, four-place cabin monoplane is upholstered in broadcloth and painted in two tones of blue on the body, with canary yellow wings. In the photograph are shown George E. Congdon Jr. and Robert C. LaMar, city sales executives of the Curtiss-Wright Flying Service here.

At St. Louis Airfields

THE work of moving the manufacturing facilities for Parks airplanes to Detroit was started Thursday. Machinery, jigs and other equipment will be shipped and 15 planes in stock will be ferried to Detroit.

The movement disclosed that the Detroit Aircraft Corporation has definitely decided to take the manufacture of Parks planes from the St. Louis district. A dozen key men of the Parks organization have been transferred to Detroit and the proposal to make Parks planes at the Ryan plant at Lambert-St. Louis Field has been definitely dropped, it is understood. The factory building at Parks Airport is to become the sales headquarters for the Detroit Aircraft Corporation in this district.

Flyers Defy Storms.

Snow and cold weather, which delayed ground transportation, failed to halt the air services during the last 10 days.

Universal, Safeway, Interstate Airlines, and T. A. T., operated close to schedule during the recent severe weather, a number of flights being made through snow storms. The mail pilots especially pushed through some particularly bad flying weather. Where delays occurred they resulted from difficulty in transporting the mail from the postoffice to the flying field.

Five Get Pilots' Licenses.

Five St. Louisans qualified for pilots' licenses last week after completing instruction at the Universal Flying School. They are Harry Watts, William Kraft, Hobart Cook, George Bishop and B. T. Conwell.

Von Hoffmann Takes Agencies.

The Von Hoffmann Aircraft Co. has been appointed local representative for Berry Bros., makers of Berryloid, standard airplane finish. The Von Hoffmann Co. is also considering the handling of Texaco products at Lambert-St. Louis Field.

Radio Freak.

What is thought to be a record in aerial two-way radio communication was accomplished last week when the pilot of a T. A. T. plane flying near Alva, Ok., was heard by the T. A. T. operator at Kingman, Ariz., 980 miles away. The set used in the plane is a two-way voice transmitter developed by the T. A. T. organization.

Arend Survey Airports.

A. D. Arend, president of Airport Consultants, Inc., Philadelphia, is expected here tomorrow to inspect Lambert-St. Louis Field. Arend is making a survey of the country's airports.

Orders for 100 Planes.

The Nicholas-Beazley Airplane Co. at Marshall, Mo., reports 100 orders on hand for Barling NB-3 monoplanes. William A. Lamkey has been appointed permanent factory inspector for the Department of Commerce at the Nicholas-Beazley plant.

"Flag Stops" for Planes.

Three "flag stops" have been established along the T. A. T. route between St. Louis and Columbus, O. The stops, at which planes land only when there are passengers to be taken on or let off, are: Vandalia, O., and St. Elmo and Terre Haute, Ind. Tests disclose that each halt adds about five minutes to the schedule.

Capt. Wimer Instructor.

Capt. William B. Wimer of the Thirty-fifth Division Air Service has been appointed an instructor in the Curtiss-Wright Flying School here. Capt. Wimer will assist Maj. C. Ray Wassall, former commander of the air unit, who is chief instructor in the new school. He has been flying since 1917 and has been a member of the air unit since its organization in 1923.

Ground classes of the Curtiss-Wright school have been held at the Syndicate Trust Building for several months. Flying instruction probably will start at Curtiss-Steinberg Airport, south of East St. Louis next month.

Four Planes to Be Sold.

Four new Cessna monoplanes are in storage at the Curtiss-Robertson factory at Lambert Field. The planes are owned by Curtiss-Wright Flying Service of New York and are to be sold.

Dempsey in Air Service.

Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight champion, has been signed as physical director for Universal pilots. Dempsey is the second professional athlete to be engaged by the Universal Corporation, Dr. John Lavan, former major league shortstop, recently having joined the Universal organization as examining surgeon.

Mankey Goes to Detroit.

A. W. Mankey, chief engineer for the Ryan Aircraft Corporation, has been appointed chief production engineer for the Detroit Aircraft Corporation, with headquarters at Detroit.

Students on Flight.

Students Jordan, Diesing and Schelendorf of the Von Hoffmann Flying School made cross-country flights to Indianapolis, Ind., and return last week. Graduates of the Von Hoffmann school during the week included Nelson Gay Jr., James Watson and Eugene Schwab who were licensed as limited commercial pilots. Watson, whose home is at Highland, Ill., purchased a three-place Eaglerock biplane. Schwab secured a position as pilot at Louisville, Ky.

Sales Representative.

R. F. Hayes of New York has been appointed sales representative here for the Airport Equipment Sales Department of Curtiss Airports Corporation. His headquarters will be at Curtiss-Steinberg Airport on the East Side.

Basketball Dec. 18.

The basketball team of the Universal Flying School will fly to Mexico, Mo., Dec. 18 to meet the Missouri Military Academy team.

Chaffee Transferred.

"Shorty" Chaffee, member of the refueling crew of the Robin endurance flight, has been transferred from the Curtiss-Robertson factory to Curtiss-Wright Flying Service and will be chief line mechanic at the new Curtiss-Steinberg Airport. Chaffee also will start taking flying instruction under Maj. C. Ray Wassall as soon as the new airport is opened.

Flies to Sick Baby.

Mrs. Aileen Nimmo, visiting in St. Louis, used the Universal System as far as Toledo, O., Thursday to reach the bedside of her baby, reported dying at their home at Roseville, near Detroit, Mich.

Sam Lambert Visits St. Louis.

Sam Lambert, who spends most of his time directing the Lambert Aircraft Engine Co., Moline, Ill., returned to St. Louis last week after a long absence. Sam is still the most enthusiastic monocoupe pilot in the country.

Lieut. Koeppel's New Rating.

Lieut. Eric Koeppel of the Thirty-fifth Division Air Service has received his rating as junior airplane pilot.

Airmen Seek Thrill.

A number of executives, pilots and other employes of the various aviation concerns at Lambert-St. Louis Field, seeking a thrill after a routine day of flying and other aeronautical pursuits, attended the opening performance of the 101 Wild West Show Thursday night as the guests of the management of The Arena.

Gets Limited License.

Henry C. Huber, 3444 William place, a graduate of Parks Air College, was licensed as a limited commercial pilot, following examination by Department of Commerce Inspector Wiggs last Tuesday.

Planes for Latin America.

Two Robin monoplanes left Lambert-St. Louis Field Thursday for Mexico and Cuba, where they will be used in commercial operation.

Visitors at Lambert Field.

Visitors to Lambert-St. Louis Field during the week included James Templeton, Chicago; G. E. Haynes, Los Angeles, and R. E. Gregory, Kansas City.

Woman Gets License.

Miss Edna Rudolph, 2315 Union boulevard, qualified for a private pilot's license last week, having completed a course at the Universal Flying School.

Canadian in Flying School.

Jack Stockston, a Canadian, enrolled for a flying course at the Von Hoffmann School last Monday. His home is at Carlyl, Saskatchewan.

Brazilian Studies Aviation.

Joseph Pinto Almeida of Rio de Janeiro enrolled in the Universal Flying School last week. Almeida, the son of a Brazilian capitalist, came to St. Louis especially to study aviation.

Robertsons Return.

Maj. William B. Robertson, president of the Curtiss-Robertson Airplane Manufacturing Co., and his brother, Frank H., head of the Robertson Airplane Service Co., returned home Thursday from a business trip to New York.

Local Distributer Increases Capital Stock to $35,000

Capital stock of the Auburn-Graves Motor Co., Inc., St. Louis distributer of Auburn and Cord cars, has been increased to $35,000, fully paid, it is announced by C. E. "Buzz" Graves, president. Graves also announces addition of L. I. Muckerman, president of L. I. Muckerman Co., to the directorate.

Worfolk Promoted

Carlton E. Worfolk, for more than 20 years in Detroit automotive circles, has joined the advertising division of Durant Motors and is in charge of sales ammunition service. Until recently Worfolk was an account executive with George Harrison Phelps, Inc., advertising agency, where he headed sales promotion activities for Dodge Brothers.

Shutter Sales Grow

Sales of Moto-Gard shutters for automobiles have increased in the St. Louis district 25 per cent over 1928, according to J. W. Hudgens of the Koochook Co., Inc., distributer. A feature of the shutter is that the lower half may be kept closed in cold weather, while the upper half is opened.

Endurance Fliers Order Gasoline From Local Distributer

A carload of 8143 gallons of Shamrock Naturaline gasoline, similar to that used in the St. Louis Robin, which holds the world's endurance flight record, has been shipped to Miami, Fla., for use in an endurance plane there by Frank B. Oswald, president of the Shamrock Oil & Gas Co., St. Louis distributer.

The plane took off more than a week ago, using another make of gasoline, according to Oswald, but was compelled to land. In view of the noteworthy record attained by the Robin with Shamrock Naturaline fuel, backers of the Miami flight decided to order this gasoline from St. Louis.

Oswald flew to Miami where he spent a week, aiding in arrangements for refueling the plane, which is expected to take off within a few days, in an effort to beat the Robin's mark.

"Boots" Dempsey, well known St. Louis pilot, will be in charge of the refueling crew at Miami. A new method of automatic oiling is expected to aid the Miamians in their flight. This method is said practically to eliminate the necessity of a pilot climbing out on the cat-walk to grease rocker arms.

OUT ACHIEVEMENT ROUNDUP UNDER WAY

Successive Feature to Be Started Before the Next Is Announced.

Individual achievement in test passing advancement in rank, and collection of merit badges has been chosen as the second phase of the four-part achievement roundup being conducted by the St. Louis Boy Scout Council during December, January and February, according to an announcement by William Puffer, educational director of the council. Details of the first phase of the roundup, which drive for new Boy Scouts throughout the council area, were given last week, in accordance with a plan to get each successive part of the roundup under way before announcing what the next will be. Under the test-passing phase just inaugurated, each troop will assign itself quotas in the number of tests of each rank who will pass tests, advance a rank, or win merit badges between now and the 1930 Scout Circus Feb. 28. To qualify for this phase, a troop must furnish headquarters with a list of the number of scouts of each rank on Dec. 15, and the number of each rank that will advance during the roundup period. Every troop reaching its objective will receive a drummer at the circus, and will also be scored toward the gold drummer which will be given to troops successfully reaching their goals in all four phases of the roundup.

To assist the scoutmasters in helping their scouts pass tests, classes for instruction in both second- and first-class requirements will be held in each of the four districts during the rest of this month, January and February. The classes in the South District will be conducted at the Fanning School, in the North at the Farragut School, in the West at the Clark School, and in the Suburban at the Webster Groves High School.

Although the first, or membership phase of the roundup was started only last week, two troops in the South District, Troops 247 and 250, have already gone over their quotas, according to Field Executive M. D. Shippey of that district. Troop 247 meets at the Bushnell School under Scoutmaster Weir, while Troop 250 meets at the Shepard School under Scoutmaster Clemons. In all 47 South District troops have reported on their quotas they have selected.

A meeting and dinner for all scoutmasters of the district will be held at the Winnebago Presbyterian Church next Wednesday evening, at 6:30 o'clock to discuss the roundup. Details of the second part of the roundup will be explained, and reports given on the progress of the membership drive. The dinner, which is complimentary, will be served by the mothers of Troop 76, which meets at the church.

Thirty scoutmasters of the North District attended a similar meeting and dinner at the Roosevelt Hotel last Wednesday evening. Talks were made by Puffer, Chairman E. H. Schultz of the district, and by Col. H. D. McBride, Scout Commissioner for St. Louis.

Troop Notes

West District.

Two new tenderfoot scouts were finally admitted into Troop 2 of the Pilgrim Congregational Church in investiture ceremony conducted by the troop at the meeting last week. Thirty parents witnessed the ceremonies and a short program of sport was given afterwards.

Tracking, fire-building, and cooking tests were passed on a hike taken by 30 scouts of the Y. M. H. A. last Sunday. In addition to the regular contests were held by the troop in fire-building, water-boiling and the construction of fireless stoves. Blue, red and white ribbons were awarded to the patrols winning the first three places. Another series of contests was held at the meeting of the troop two weeks ago, the Apache patrol winning first place in making patrol totem boards, and the Mohawks taking first in a contest in carving totem poles. The Sioux patrol took second and the Comanches third in the bulletin board contest, while the Comanches were second and the Apaches third in the totem pole contest. Louis Platt, patrol leader of the Sioux, has completed his fifth year of active service with Troop 10.

Preparations for the troop's annual parents' night, next Thursday, are being made by Troop 54, at Temple Israel. Each of the eight patrols has been assigned a project to complete and display at the meeting, and all are now at work on them. The troop held a Saturday hike to Valley Park last week-end. The hike was originally planned for three days, to take advantage of the Thanksgiving holiday, but was cut to two because of the snow and cold.

The third annual parents' night of Troop 101 will be held at troop headquarters, the West Park Baptist Church, Tuesday evening. Plans have been made for the scouts to demonstrate some of the features of scouting. The winners of recent advancement contests will also be announced at the meeting. Invitations have been issued to both parents and friends of the troop to attend.

Scout Hugh Harris has been promoted to the post of patrol leader of the Silver Fox patrol of Troop 113, which meets at the Church of the Messiah. The troop held its annual parents' night at the church a week ago Friday evening. The Tiger patrol exhibited different methods of signaling, the Beavers demonstrated pioneering, and the Silver Foxes enacted a number of scouting activities. Awards were also given to scouts who had won achievement contests, and motion pictures of the troop were exhibited. Activities Director of the St. Louis Council Charles H. Mills gave a talk and the group of scouts who had demonstrated the music merit badge at the merit badge show played several selections.

South District.

Ten new recruits were initiated into Troop 63 of the Oak Hill Presbyterian Church at the last meeting, representing the entire quota of mavericks assigned to the troop for roping during the city-wide membership roundup this month. Troop 63 is one of the first troops in the city to complete its quota. The new scouts are: Melvin Niemeyer, Gail Jobe, William Koenig, James Malloy, Halstead Meyer, Victor Lund Jr., Paul Hensal, John Borah, Brandt Beau and John Schroeter.

Each of the patrols of Troop 77 of the Tyler Place Presbyterian Church will give a stunt at next Thursday's meeting of the troop. The stunts must each be based on some scouting idea. The patrols have been practicing on the stunts since Thanksgiving. The meeting will also mark the inaugural of campaigning for troop officers, who will be elected this month to serve during the coming year.

The scouts of Troop 198 of the St. John's Episcopal Church cooked a supper for their fathers at the regular meeting of the troop last Wednesday evening. In addition to the dinner the troop gave a short program, each patrol presenting a stunt. Several speeches were made by scouts and by some of the fathers.

North District.

A parents' night will be held by Troop 2 of the Grace Holy Cross Church at its meeting this week. The program will consist of stunts, ceremonies, talks and achievements, and a new game will be introduced. Invitations have been extended to all friends as well as parents of the troop to attend the meeting.

Nine Scouts of Troop 33 of the St. Peter's Evangelical Church spent last Saturday and Sunday camping at the Lions' Den reservation, the official week-end camp of the St. Louis Boy Scout Council. Two of the Scouts hiked to the reservation from Imperial, the nearest town, after midnight Saturday. Because of the snow and cold, the campers slept in the reservation cabin, but the snow also offered opportunity for study of tracks. Few animal tracks were found, but many tracks of birds were discovered, and many birds were noticed adong the Rock Creek. While at the camp each Scout prepared his own food.

The drill team of Troop 88 of the Salem Church is practicing the different formations and steps it will exhibit at the Scout Circus next February. Scout Herbert Dill, judge of an interpatrol contest being conducted by the troop, announced at the last meeting that 25 points would be awarded in the contest to any patrol bringing in a new member during the membership roundup in the city.

Suburban District.

A new troop journal, "The Council Fire" has been started by Troop Webster Groves 15 of the Knights of Columbus Hall, Webster Groves. The first edition will be issued in time to be distributed at a party Dec. 21, which will be held to commemorate the fifth birthday of the troop. The troop has issued an invitation to any troop having a publication to exchange. Exchanges may be obtained by sending a copy of the troop paper to Gregg J. Puster, 4 Jefferson road, Webster Groves.

Belleville Scout Gets Award.

Fred Schramm, of Belleville, received a veteran award for his son, Richard Schramm a student at the Illinois University, at a court of honor session of the Belleville Area Council of the Boy Scouts held in the St. Clair County Circuit Court room. Scout Schramm was a member of his father's troop, and according to Scout Executive James Swooford is the most advanced scout of the area. First and second class and merit badges were also awarded at the court last night.

WINTER RESORT TOURISTS ARE FLOCKING TO CUBA

By the Associated Press.

HAVANA, Dec. 7.—E. H. Ferras, manager of the Cuban National Tourist Commission, says that leading hotels of the city already have almost complete bookings for the entire season. Last year 80,000 guests were booked by Havana hotels. Double that number is the prospect for this winter.

To the forefront will be the casinos, whose green baise tables will be magnets for thousands; the usual smart restaurants, old night clubs redecorated and new ones flashing out invitations to be gay, the customary jai games, better racing at Oriental Park, a greatly improved bathing beach at La Playa and plenty of smooth automobile and train transportation for excursions to other parts of the island.

Thousands of dollars have been expended within the last two years to bring these attractions to the attention of travelers.

GIRL SCOUTS TO GET 1000 HONOR BADGES

Court of Awards Will Be Conducted at Christ Church Cathedral Saturday.

More than 1000 honor badges in 50 different lines of Girl Scout activity will be presented to 294 Girl Scouts at a court of awards that will be conducted by the Girl Scout Council of St. Louis at Christ Church Cathedral at 2:30 o'clock next Saturday afternoon. This will be one of the largest presentations of awards to Girl Scouts ever held in St. Louis, according to Mrs. Guy Oliver, commissioner of the organization here.

Included among the awards will be eight Golden Eaglets, the highest honor for Girl Scouts; nine letters of commendation in recognition of character, scouting ability and unselfish service to troop and community, and 12 first-class badges. The remainder of the awards will be merit badges.

Among the merit badges the one that attracted the greatest number of candidates was the health winner badge, while closely second in popularity were the needlewoman and housekeeper awards. Cook, observer, laundress and hostess tied for third place, while scholarship ranked next. The other badges include athlete, child nurse, citizen, pioneer, swimmer and first aid.

The eight Golden Eaglets will be presented to Annette Rubin, Senior Troop 1; Helen Jones, Troop 1; Vernell Diefenbronn, Troop 54; Ione Schroeder, Troop 54; Ann Goddard, Troop 25; Agnes Liddle and Georgia Flowers, Troop 31, and Josephine Harris, Troop 1, Kirkwood. All of these girls have been in Scout troops five years, and with one exception all are college students.

ANNUAL SCHOOL EXHIBIT WILL BE HELD JAN. 16-18

Aim Will Be to Give Cross-Section of Activities Rather Than Individual Bits.

The second annual general exhibit of the St. Louis public schools will be held Jan. 16, 17 and 18, and will show a cross section of school activities rather than demonstrations of work done in specific classrooms or by individual pupils.

The exhibition will be held simultaneously at seven high school districts. They are: Beaumont, Cleveland, Roosevelt, Soldan, Sumner (Negro) and Vashon (Negro). The junior high, elementary and special schools in their respective districts will exhibit in that high school. The vocational school and the colored vocational school may exhibit in all of the districts.

The evening schools will present the opening program Thursday night, Jan. 16. The elementary schools will present their display the next day and on the final day of the exhibition the junior high and high schools will give their demonstrations. A slightly different schedule will prevail in the Central High School district.

THRIFT SAVINGS ACCOUNTS IN THE SCHOOLS DEC. 17-18

Thrift saving accounts will be open Dec. 17 and 18 to public school children. Each pupil desiring to open an account will be given a pass book and deposits will be made at the school on a specific day. The same rate of interest will be paid on school savings accounts as other accounts.

The Board of Education has designated 11 banks as depositories for these accounts. The first collection day for pupils in South Side schools will be Tuesday, Dec. 17, and the next day accounts will be opened in schools in the North End.

TIBETAN BUDDHA QUITS EXILE AFTER 5 YEARS

The Panchan Lama Calls on Chinese Officials to Renew Friendships.

By the Associated Press.

NANKING, Dec. 7.—The Panchan Lama, one of the two living Buddhas of Tibet, is visiting the principal cities of China after living in exile more than five years. He is renewing old acquaintances among leading Chinese church and Government officials at Mukden, Peking, Shanghai and Nanking.

For the past few years, the Panchan Lama has lived as the guest of some of the lower ranking living Buddhas in Mongolia. He has been completely isolated from the outside world and naturally, there is more than unusual interest in his return to the center of events in China.

The Panchan Lama's visit to Nanking may result in several disclosures of international interest, according to the Chinese press, which recently pointed out that the Buddha has been prevented from returning to his own country by the Dalai Lama, alleged to be a close friend of Great Britain.

Several Chinese papers have openly declared that the British are attempting to extend their influence into Tibet through their friendship with the Dalai Lama, and that they will eventually declare some sort of a protectorate over that land. The declarations, said to have been based on reports emanating from Tibet, have caused considerable agitation among those who regard the Central Asian country as a part of the Chinese Republic.

The Tibetans, however, consider themselves an independent nation and refuse to acknowledge any jurisdiction by China. The Panchan Lama's views on this subject are not known, but it is believed that should he ever return to power in his native country, what he has to say will greatly influence his people.

Reports concerning the alleged British activities in Tibet have been vigorously denied by travelers. Most of them declare that there is no reason to believe that the present independent position of the country will be altered.

MUSSOLINI WANTS ONLY MONEY

All Other Gifts Will Be Returned.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, Dec. 7.—Mussolini, perhaps the most frequent recipient of gifts in Italy, wants no more of them in bulk, says an Order Sheet of the Fascist Party Abroad.

The Duce, who has received already enough books to stock several libraries, statues and paintings to fill a museum and enough wild animals to open a zoo, now wants only money gifts. The money would be applied to lessening the national debt, or to public improvements. Fascist centers abroad are ordered to return gifts of anything but money for Mussolini.

Paper From Seaweed.

MOSCOW, Dec. 7.—After two years of experiments, Russian paper plants have produced what is regarded as a satisfactory grade of paper from seaweed. Rumia has been importing 80 per cent of her raw material for paper.

Canal to Join Rivers.

By the Associated Press.

STALINGRAD, Dec. 7.—American engineers are to supervise 40,000 men who are to start next spring a canal costing $100,000,000 to link Stalingrad, on the Volga, with Kalatch on the Don. This waterway will make it possible for boats to go from the Caspian Sea to the Black Sea and from the latter to the White Sea.

THE TIME OF YOUR LIFE THIS WINTER IN THE TROPICS' HEALTHFUL SUNSHINE HAVANA
SMARTEST CITY IN AMERICA

If you've been accustomed to wintering in Europe you'll find you've sacrificed none of the glamour by deciding, this year, to visit Havana. The Riviera . . . Monte Carlo . . . Paris . . . Madrid . . . all find expression in Cuba's decidedly foreign, cosmopolitan, interesting, gay and sophisticated atmosphere. Yet Cuba is only two hours from Miami by air . . . overnight by train and steamship, or two nights out from New York. If you've always spent the winter in the United States, then here is a new and broadening experience that you'll never forget! Something new to do every minute of the day and evening! Much to see and study in the native architecture, music, art and customs. New health and comfort in Cuba's perpetual sunshine, with the added safety of knowing that you can keep constantly and economically in touch with your business, if necessary, by telephone or return quickly if the need should arise. Every conceivable sport and pastime is provided for. Here is the logical vacation for this day of changing business conditions and quick moves in industry. It is the sensible solution to the problem of gaining all the benefits of a warm southern winter, foreign atmosphere and complete recreation without the penalty of being too far from home or incurring excessive expense.

YOUNG PLAN BASIS FOR POLISH-GERMAN PACT

Treaty, Still to Be Ratified, Agreed Upon After Eight Years.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Dec. 7.—Another milestone on the long and difficult road to European pacification will be passed if the Polish Sejm and the German Reichstag ratify the agreement signed between August Zaleski, Polish Minister of Foreign Affairs, and Ulrich Rauscher, Gerwith the admonition of the Young man Minister at Warsaw.

This agreement is in keeping plan to "liquidate the past," and justifies the characterization of one leading German daily to the effect that, while it is not a Locarno of the east, it at least constitutes a Polish-German Rapallo.

For, just as in the Russo-German treaty of Rapallo, bygones were abandoned as bygones without examining too minutely who would get the better bargain. In the Zaleski-Rauscher agreement claims from both sides were eliminated by two strokes of the pen, and the way was paved for a commercial treaty for which fruitless negotiations had been going on for eight years.

After the treaty of Versailles there arose a number of claims and counter claims for which the Dawes plan offered no solution. The Young plan, however, in chapter IX enunciates the principles upon which mutual claims can be waived. It was in this spirit that Zaleski and Rauscher evolved their pact.

A mixed claims commission which had before it cases brought by Germans claiming $20,000,000 for under valuation of real estate taken over by Poland under the Versailles pact, is abolished. All these claims are waived by Germany.

Poland renounces private claims against Germany for $1,625,000 growing out of troubles in Upper Silesia. Each government undertakes to satisfy the demands of its own citizens in all these cases.

Poland also agrees to cease "liquidating" German real estate. This affects 125,000 acres of farm lands and 30 tracts in cities, the whole valued at $15,000,000. Poland had already taken over 300,000 farm acres and 1600 city tracts.

Poland further foregoes her claimed right to purchase German holdings at the death of present owners. About 12,000 German farmers, owning 250,000 acres, are thus freed of the thought that their sons and daughters could not inherit these holdings.

Germany in turn has waived $6,125,000 awarded her by The Hague court for the Chorzow Chemical works.

On both sides of the boundary the nationalists are attacking the agreement. The German extremists of the Right say that Rauscher was "pro-Polish." The Polish nationalists aver that Zaleski conceded too much.

The liberal press, however, hails the accord. It says that an intolerable situation has been ended and that the agreement creates the necessary conditions for a much needed Polish-German commercial treaty.

LECTURE ON LAPLAND NOMADS

C. Clyde Fisher to Speak at Mary Institute Tuesday Night.

C. Clyde Fisher, curator of the American Museum of Natural History, New York, will give an illustrated lecture on "The Nomads of Arctic Lapland," at a meeting of the Washington University Association at Mary Institute Tuesday evening.

RTUGAL TO CLEAN UP TS COLONY IN CHINA

ium Traffic and Gambling Flourish in Macao, Obtained as Reward.

BON, Dec. 7.—The Portu- Government has decided to up Macao, the city of Portu- China, on the Bay of Can- where vice is rampant and m and gambling dens wide was this "plague spot" which ught disgrace and contempt on ao has remained in Portuguese Portuguese colonial administration.

In the middle of the sixteenth century Portuguese were permitted to build a settlement there in return for assistance given to the Chinese against pirates. Ever since possession, but lack of interest in the colony by former Portuguese administrations is responsible for the unsavory state to which this island town has fallen.

Almost the whole population of Macao is thriving on opium traffic and the sale of Chinese lottery tickets. Its low grade music halls and cabarets thrive on money from sailors.

Shiploads of opium are exported to all parts of the world from Macao, and the Government derives all its income from this source.

New taxes will be created, new industries established and an attempt made to revive trade with Brazil and other South American republics.

Dr. Arthur Tamagnini Barbosa, newly appointed Governor-General of the colony, expects that the process of extirpating gambling, which has secured a firm foothold in the habits of the natives, will be slow.

His first task will be to restrict the cultivation of new opium fields, and limit the drug's consumption. The strictest control will be exercised on shipments of the drug and any quantity of it seized will be destroyed and the dealers punished.

He will also reduce the number of gambling dens by raising taxation on gambling. In time, he hopes, public gambling will cease because it will not be a paying proposition.

French Poor Own Autos.

PARIS, Dec. 7.—Parliamentary theory that the automobile is a plaything of the rich and therefore to be taxed as a luxury, has been upset by Government statistics showing that 75 per cent of French cars are owned by peasants and business men. Only four per cent belong to "life rich."

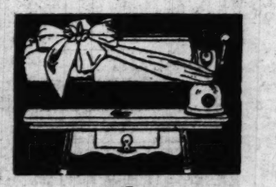
Thor Combination Washer & Ironer in Your Home

CHRISTMAS Morning . . .

Think of it—only $1.00 down gives mother this wonderful Christmas present—this beautiful new Thor Combination Washer and Ironer—two machines—yours now at the price of a washer alone of the same quality—and on easy terms! This newest of speed-type Washers will show mother what a Washer should do and be. It takes away drudgery. No work—no labor. The Washer is so simple it almost works by itself. And she sits down to iron. For mother, get this new Thor. Priced $149.25



Thor Speed Iron

A Gift That Brings Freedom From Drudgery

IRONING by hand one day each week—the hardest, most tiresome task any woman has to do. Why not free her from it by giving her a Thor Speed Iron for Christmas? The cost is negligible—compared to the labor it saves in any home. Simply place this convenient rotary Iron on a table—connect it to an electric outlet—sit down—and feed the pieces through. No exertion at all. It irons everything, including skirts and cuffs—and it presses trousers and skirts. An unsurpassable gift!.....$79.50

CHRISTMAS IN FAR OFF LANDS TO BE DEPICTED

Folk Festival to Be Presented by International Institute at Shubert-Rialto.

What happens when Christmas comes to Ukraine, Greece, Jugo-Slavia and other far away lands will be illustrated in a folk festival to be presented by the International Institute at the Shubert-Rialto Theater, Sunday afternoon, Dec. 22, at 2 o'clock. Groups affiliated with the Institute will appear in dramatic representations of the Christmas customs of their native lands.

An episode to be presented by the Circulo Recreativo Mexicano, will portray the Mexican custom in which statues of Mary and Joseph are carried about within their homes, stops being made at each door while a hymn is sung. They are at first refused admittance by those within the rooms, but later the doors are opened and the effigies are placed beside a miniature manger. This practice, called "Posade," is observed on each of nine nights before Christmas.

The choir of St. Mary's Church of the Assumption, will sing the familiar Christmas hymns of Ukraine, where at Christmas time the people go about singing from door to door.

The Deutches Club and German concert orchestra will enact the coming of Knecht Rupprecht, who makes his rounds on Christmas eve in Germany giving gifts to all good boys and girls. Over in Sweden it is "Jultomte," who is responsible for Christmas gifts. In the Swedish Folk Dancing Club skit, the children are shown dreaming of a little red capped elf for whom their mother has set our bowls of porridge. A star falls from the sky and when they awaken it is Christmas.

In Jugo-Slavia, the Christmas celebration centers about the "Badjnak" log. The Croatian Sokol Society will portray the custom there in which the father pours a jug of wine over the burning log, and then all wish each other a "Badjnak" day.

In Serbia, too, the "Badjnak" log is featured, but Serbians are not so prodigal with the wine. Instead the head of the family brings a bundle of straw to his wife, and after and exchange of "Badjnak" greetings the wife scatters the straw on the floor, meantime imitating the clucking of a hen. This episode will be enacted by the Serbian Church Choir and Serbian Women's Circle.

The Paderewski Singing Society will present a musical playlet suggestiveof the Christmas festivals of Poland. Christmas hymns of Greece will be sung by Miss Angela Kollias, and Rumanian carols will be offered by Armonia Streinul Liber.

The annual Christmas party of the Psychiatric Child Guidance Clinic will be held in Room 154 of the Municipal Courts Building, Dec. 15, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

The fourth annual Christmas party sponsored by the Hoo-Hoo Club of St. Louis and the Wood Products Institute of St. Louis will be held in the American Annex Hotel, Saturday, Dec. 21. Children from orphan homes and other charitable institutions will be taken to the hotel in busses for a Christmas dinner, and presents will be given to all.

Give Gifts that GROW!

WHAT finer, more distinctive gifts than living, growing things, which will bring more beauty and pleasure into the daily lives of loved ones and friends?

Trees, plants, shrubs and hardy flowers are growing in favor each year as Christmas gifts because they are so universally admired and desired.

Let us tell you of our plan whereby you can give "gifts that grow" even though they are not to be planted until spring.

Needless Pain!

The man who wouldn't drive his motorcar half a mile when it's out of order, will often drive his brain all day with a head that's throbbing.

Such punishment isn't very good for one's nerves! It's unwise, and it's unnecessary. A tablet or two of Bayer Aspirin will relieve a headache every time. So, remember this accepted antidote for pain, and spare yourself a lot of needless suffering. Read the proven directions and you'll discover many valuable uses for these tablets. For headaches; to check colds. To ease a sore throat and reduce the infection. For relieving of neuralgic, neuritic, and rheumatic pain.

People used to wonder if Bayer Aspirin was harmful. Doctors answered that question years ago. It is not. Some folks still wonder if it really does relieve pain. That's settled! For millions of men and women have found it does. To cure the cause of any pain you must consult your doctor; but you may always turn to Bayer Aspirin for relief.

DEAN SCARLETT FINDS CHANGES IN RUSSIA

Wild Children Who Roamed Cities in 1926 Placed in Homes and Institutions.

The wild children of Russia, those nomadic bands of orphans, the produce of famine and pestilence, which prowled the cities, stealing and begging, virtually have ceased to exist, Dean William Scarlett of Christ Church Cathedral, said yesterday in contrasting impressions between a visit to Russia in 1926 and last summer. Dean Scarlett, as well as the Rev. Dr. Ashby Jones, pastor Second Baptist Church, were with a group of American writers and educators studying internal conditions in Russia.

"People died by millions during the famine period after the World War," Dean Scarlett said, "leaving about 2,000,000 orphans. The Russian Government, although in extremely straitened finances, placed about a million of these homeless children in private homes and institutions. But the rest were forced to shift for themselves."

So came into being the tribes of little waifs, who became known as "the wild children of Russia" and rapidly congregated in the cities, stealing everything they could, going about barefooted and bareheaded, their bodies only partially covered with rags, sleeping where sleep overtook them.

"In 1926 they were to be seen on the streets of Moscow and Leningrad," Dean Scarlett continued, "filthy urchins, from 10 to 14 years old, many of them adroit pickpockets, all of them schooled in crime. They roved about in gangs, and slept in parks, doorsteps, empty wagons—anywhere they could. It was estimated that there were about 65,000 of them.

"But last summer we didn't see any of them. It seems that the Russian Government has solved the problem, after two years of labor, by creating special institutions calculated to appeal to them and make them into useful citizens.

"The problem was simplified for the Government because the children had congregated in the big cities and their number had decreased to about 40,000. As a matter of fact, it is doubtful if there ever were as many of the wild children as was currently reported. But there were more than enough of them.

"Those in charge of the campaign to eliminate them realized that no ordinary institution would benefit children who had existed under the worst possible conditions. So they proceeded to establish places where the natural energy and ingenuity of the children could be turned to some useful purpose which would, at the same time, enlist their interest.

"The children have been housed in institutions which offer courses in handicraft, manual training and other activities designed to appeal to even boys who have been forced to exist in a harsh and abnormal environment.

"These institutions appear to have solved the problem. Apparently, the wild children of Russia have become tamed."

RED DEER AND WILD PIGS ARE PESTS IN NEW ZEALAND

Government Hunters and Bounties Are Means Used to Cut Down Herds.

By the Associated Press.

AUCKLAND, Dec. 7.—Deer and wild pigs, introduced in New Zealand to provide sport for huntsmen, have proved a countryside pest.

In no part of the world is there such thrilling deer-stalking as in New Zealand, but there are not enough sportsmen. The animals, secure in their forest fastnesses, have multiplied so rapidly that the Government has sent out official hunting parties to thin the herds.

One party spent three months in the Lilburn Valley, shooting 700 magnificent red deer, the hides of which were exported at a dollar apiece.

In another region—Canterbury—where is some of the finest sheep country in the world, the depredations of the fallow deer were so severe that the graziers asked Government action, and within three weeks an official party had bagged 500.

If pig-sticking were a popular sport here—which it is not—the scope would be unlimited. So destructive are the wild pigs that the Government pays 25 cents for every snout that is delivered to its depots.

Appointed to Examiner's Staff.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PANA, Ill., Dec. 7.—Ernest L. White, banker, has been appointed as a member of the Illinois State Bank Examiners' staff by State Auditor Oscar Nelson. The appointment was not unexpected, as White had endorsement of many prominent bank presidents and other financial officials of the state. White was for 10 years president of the Pana National Bank, and is present chairman of the Board of Directors, as well as being treasurer of the Citizens' Building Association and other financial institutions.

PRIZES TO BE GIVEN FOR TREE PLANTING

Competition in Replacing Destroyed or Decayed Trees to End April 4.

Silver loving cups are offered by the Civic Needs Council to the civic organizations planting the greatest number of trees between now and April 4, it is announced. The competition in tree planting, designed to replace destroyed or decayed trees throughout the city, is fostered by the Tree Committee of the General Council on Civic Needs, and has the support of the Civic Development Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce. The Tree Committee, headed by August E. Brooker, has commented as follows on the contest:

"Cities are judged not only by their location, climate, industrial activity and government, but also by their appearance. Wide boulevards, lined with fine homes, enhance the beauty of a city. But these are material things, depreciating in beauty with the decay of time.

"Trees planted about those homes, living and growing in an architecture, man cannot even hope to duplicate, lending a friendliness to their surroundings, become more and more valuable esthetically as the years roll on. Nothing can be more effective in breaking up the monotony and cold formality of bricks and stones piled one on the other, than far-reaching vistas of rows and rows of trees.

"Other cities long ago discovered the esthetic value which trees give an urban community. The reputation for beauty that these cities enjoy is due in no small measure to the natural setting provided their buildings by trees. St. Louis, too, can achieve such beauty. The city already has a splendid nucleus around which to build."

The City Park Department has reduced the price of trees from $7 to $5, and the department agrees to plant and maintain any tree purchased from it and to replace it if the tree dies within three years. A permit from the city forester must precede the planting of a tree.

Members of the Tree Committee are Mortimer Burroughs, George Pring, E. Pancock, Dr. W. D. Aufderheide, Eugene S. Klein and Luther Ely Smith.

WAR SECRETARY'S FORCE TRAVELS IN MANY WAYS

Adams Reports Use of Submarines, Aircraft, Battleship and Automobile on Trips.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—Charles Francis Adams, the yachting skipper, Ernest Lee Jahncke, the shipbuilder, and David S. Ingalls, the aviator, have covered a lot of territory in all sorts of conveyances since they took over the job of running the Navy Department for the Hoover administration.

Secretary Adams outlined his own activities and those of his two assistants in his annual report submitted today to the President. They made trips by battleship, submarine, dirigible, airplane and automobile.

The Secretary told of personal inspections of navy yards and other shore activities, of observing battle practice in Southern waters, his attendance at the launching of vessels, his study first hand of scouting fleet movements, and winding up with this sentence: "On Oct. 10, 1929, the Secretary visited Lakehurst and made a short flight on the Los Angeles."

Jahncke had traveled by airplane, steamship or destroyer to almost every spot where the navy had interests, including Hawaii and Alaska.

SECRETARY ADAMS OUTLINES HIS PLAN TO IMPROVE NAVY

Urges Parity in Aircraft Carriers, Increased Enlisted Personnel, Higher Ratio of Officers.

WANTS PAY RISE FOR ALL RANKS

Cost of Scrapping Ships Under Washington Treaty $42,796,386 — No Mention of Parley.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—Parity in aircraft carriers, increased enlisted personnel to man new ships coming into commission, a higher ratio of officers to enlisted men, and upward revision of pay for all ranks were asked for the navy today by Secretary Adams.

No reference was made in his annual report to the postponement of work on three cruisers by presidential order nor to the possible reduction of future construction under any limitation agreement that may be reached at the London conference in January.

The problem of maintaining the fleet in a good engineering condition was said to be an increasingly difficult one as the ships grew older. The Secretary said that grave concern was being felt because of the inability to grant all the repairs asked for by the forces afloat, but that an experimental budget plan was being tried out for individual squadrons of the fleet in an effort to secure more efficient expenditure of the engineering appropriation.

Adams said the "parity of aircraft-carrier tonnage provided for in the Washington limitation of armaments treaty is the most urgent need of naval aviation."

The total cost to date of scrapping the battleships and battle cruisers sacrificed under the Washington treaty was set as $42,796,386 in the report. Some claims are yet to be settled.

Urges Increase in Officers.

The increased proportion of small vessels in the fleet, the introduction of new auxiliary weapons and the needs of naval aviation require that the old ratio of line officers to enlisted men, fixed at 4 per cent in 1926, be raised to 6 per cent, the report said.

To effect this increase it was recommended that appointment to the Naval Academy be increased from four for each state to five. Under the five appointment plan the Naval Academy could, by 1934 produce 75 to 100 more officers annually than at present.

The Secretary also urged enactment of legislation amending the system of promoting officers and furnishing means for retirement of staff officers not selected for promotion.

Regarding construction of the three cruisers whose keel-laying had been postponed until after the London limitation conference, the department estimated that the first of these should be completed by November, 1932, and the other two by February and June, 1933, respectively. The two ships contracted for at the same time with private firms were to be completed by Aug. 15, 1932. It is understood that the dates for completion given in the report did not take into account the postponement of construction but were based upon first expectations.

Construction of guns, mounts and turrets for all five of these cruisers has been undertaken by the Naval Gun Factory, at Washington, the army arsenal at Watervliet, N. Y., and the Midvale company of Nicetown, Pa. Twelve eight-inch guns are to be built by the army, the same number by the Midvale company and the balance of eight-inch guns, all secondary battery guns and accessories by the naval factory.

The Secretary reported completion of modernization work on the battleships Oklahoma and Nevada last summer and the beginning of modernization on the Pennsylvania and Arizona.

New Type Fire Control.

All cruisers now under construction and the modernized battleships are being provided with the latest type of fire control and battery for defense against airplanes. Similar installations are being made on all other ships as fast as possible.

Discussing the operations of the fleet the Secretary gave high praise to the performance of the aircraft carriers Lexington and Saratoga which, he said, "proved themselves to be effective, efficient and vital units of the fleet."

"As usual, the lack of cruisers," he said, "was severely felt in all tactical and strategical exercises."

The battleships of the fleet were reported to be in good condition and so were the 10 light cruisers of the Omaha class. The Denver class cruisers are approaching the end of their useful life and their upkeep cost is mounting, the report said. Disposition of 13 old cruisers and the decommissioning permanently of about 40 destroyers having unsatisfactory boilers also was reported.

Commending the five-year aviation expansion program, the Secretary said that it was proceeding satisfactorily but that the construction of one aircraft carrier and 15 cruisers authorized by Congress would require expansion of the program to take care of the airplane requirements of these ships.

86 New Air Pilots.

"The outstanding results attained during the recent Panama maneuvers," said Adams, "proved that naval aviation is probably equal to any emergency."

A gain of 86 pilots in the year despite high losses of men through the demands of commercial aviation was reported but this rate of increase was termed unsatisfactory to meet the requirements of the five-year building program.

In the request for parity of aircraft carriers the report did not specify whether the Navy wished the maximum tonnage of 135,000 permitted under the Washington treaty, or merely a figure to equal the British aircraft carrier tonnage, which is in the neighborhood of 107,000.

The secretary reported an authorized strength of about 81,000 for the year.

Boys Are Accomplished Musicians at 11 and 12

SAMUEL HOUSTON MAYES III, 11-year-old 'cellist, and Morris Feldman, 12-year-old pianist.

Samuel Houston Mayes III Is a Cellist, With Admiration Divided Between Bottomley and Bach—Morris Feldman a Pianist.

There are two kindred souls of St. Louis who are young musicians but their interests, oddly enough, embrace a mutual admiration for baseball, basketball and football as well as the old masters whose melodies they can reproduce on the cello and piano, respectively. Samuel Houston Mayes III, now 11 years old, has been playing various sized cellos since he was 7, and his friend, Morris Feldman, aged 12, started even earlier in life—in a small way.

Sammy is the son of Dr. Joe F. Mayes and Mrs. Esmeralda Berry Mayes, herself an accomplished violinist and pianist. Morris is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Feldman, 847 Westgate avenue, University City. They met last year, as musicians will, professionally. Preparations for an ensemble recital at the Neighborhood House, in which Sammy was to appear with the young violinist, Felix Slatkin, who is now a Zimbalist pupil at Curtis Institute, brought up the query of whether a similarly young pianist could not be found. The answer was Morris, who was introduced by his instructor, Ernst Krohn.

Give Recitals Together.

Since that time they have given several recitals together, some of these being in the form of radio programs. The most recent one was given Friday evening, at the Wednesday Club auditorium and, typical of the young musicians' skill, included compositions of Bach, Beethoven, Mendelssohn, Chopin and Mozart.

Sammy has been reared in a musical atmosphere and considers his teacher, Max Steindel, his playfellow as well as his mentor. From his earliest years he has heard the violin, the piano and the singing voice because the Mayes drawing room was the rendezvous for informal presentations by the city's artists.

Bruno Steindel, the famous cellist, of Chicago, and an uncle of Max, was a visitor at the Mayes home when Sammy was not quite 7 years old, and having observed the boy's interest in the impromptu musical program, later sent his young admirer a half-size cello from Chicago. Since that time Sammy has had five instruments, each a little larger than its predecessor, and today he owns a Johan Knilling, made in Mittenwald, Germany, more than a century ago.

Early Memory for Music.

Morris Feldman, when he was 3 years old, before theme songs had been invented, saw the moving picture, "Humoresque," and heard Dvorak's famous melody played over and over again during the showing. He proceeded to search out the most familiar parts with one finger on the piano at home afterward with a fair amount of success. But because he had always loved to create the usual discordant noises on the piano pretty much like other children, little attention was paid his later ability to remember melodies.

When he was five years old his kindergarten teacher accompanied him home one day and told his mother how he had played the simple accompaniments for the general singing of his class. She suggested that Mrs. Feldman send him to an instructor, but the mother had visions of other little boys who, like her son, loved the rough and tumble play of childhood and grew to hate the sight of the piano because they had to devote certain hours of the day to practice. She decided to wait before she inflicted the conventional "piano lessons" on her son. As his fondness for music kept apace with his love of sports, he began "taking lessons" when he was 8 years old. Since then he has passed through the hands of three instructors before he reached his present teacher, Ernst Krohn.

Bottomley vs. Bach.

His sense of rhythm is considered exceptionally keen and he has an especial aptitude for the music of Bach. After two years in two and three part inventions, he is now busy with the difficulties of three-part fugues.

Sammy Mayes was captain and manager this year of a neighborhood baseball team known as the Junior Cardinals, which achieved some notable successes in games with similar teams. Sammy's admiration, as far as heroes go, is divided between Jim Bottomley, Cardinal first baseman, and Bach, whose compositions he knows well. However, he stated in no uncertain tones that he intended to be a musician when he "grows up" and that he wanted to be able "to play like Mr. Steindel"—although he added mischievously, "That's not saying much," before he caught his instructor off guard and engaged in a wrestling bout with him on the lounge.

Sammy was named after his grandfather, a Cherokee Indian chief of Pryor, Ok., who also was an uncle of Will Rogers. Rogers is also related to Sammy's father through a second cousin kinship on Dr. Mayes' mother's side of the family.

Morris is of a staid nature—when company is around. But he is as boisterous as any youngster when an impromptu baseball or football game is being organized in his neighborhood in University City and he whoops as loudly as anyone else in the heat of basketball games in the gymnasium of the University City Junior High School where he is a freshman listed under the "general course."

Sammy is in his seventh year at the Rossman School, 5428 Delmar boulevard. Both boys practice their music three hours daily. Morris plays an hour in the morning before going to school, another hour when he returns from school in the afternoon and the third hour in the evening. Sammy devotes an hour and a half to his cello in the afternoon and a like period in the evening.

Explorers in China to Use Mechanical Transport.

By the Associated Press.

PEIPING, Dec. 7.—Gasoline driven tractors are to replace camels on a desert expedition being organized by French and Chinese scientists to cover unexplored parts of North China and Indo-China next year.

The purpose of the trip is to carry on scientific research and is to be conducted jointly by the National Scientific Union of China and the Citroen Motor Car Co. of France. The Chinese expedition is to start from Peiping in February and aims to meet with the French explorers, now in Persia, after the tractor brigade has crossed Russian Turkestan.

AMERICAN APPLES DOMINATE MARKET IN RIO DE JANEIRO

Imports by Brazil in Year Are 200,000 Cases—Fruit Brings $1 to $2 a Dozen.

By the Associated Press.

RIO JANEIRO, Dec. 7.—Apples from Washington, Oregon and California are delicacies in Brazil, and thousands of cases come here yearly. Only a small quantity arrives in barrels.

In the small fruit stands these American apples sell by the dozen at the equivalent of $1 to $2, according to quality. Apples also are shipped here from New Zealand but the United States fruit has a virtual monopoly of the market.

Just as the inhabitant of the temperate zone in the states longs for pineapples, avocado, orange, papaya, and other tropical fruit so does the Brazilian long for the apple, pear, peach and plum of a northern clime.

In the last year the imports of apples from the United States amounted to 200,000 cases valued at more than $500,000. In one month 120,00 cases arrived.

PUBLICITY CHECKS DRINKING

By the Associated Press.

KIEV, Dec. 7.—The high cost of vodka having failed to check drunkenness among workmen, the local Soviet humiliates the inebriates by chronicling their doings in the newspapers. Daily items appear like this:

"Ivan Lisenko, member of the Building Trades Union, residing at 14 Kirilloff street, came to work yesterday as drunk as a shoemaker. He tried to pick a fight with his fellow workers."

The authorities declare this method is working like a charm. It is seldom that the same name appears twice in print.

TARDIEU-CURTIUS CAREERS SIMILAR IN PEACE AND WAR

Both Fought at Champagne and Verdun and Were Decorated, Both Admire U. S. Methods.

TOGETHER THEY FACE RHINELAND PROBLEM

French Premier and German Foreign Minister 52 Years Old—Believers in Prosperity.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York Evening World.

PARIS, Dec. 7.—Two statesmen who faced each other once on the battlefields of Champagne and Verdun, the one to be decorated with the Legion of Honor for "great personal bravery" and the other to be awarded the Iron Cross for "extraordinary courage"—Andre Tardieu and Julius Curtius—will face each other shortly across the conference table when they are called upon to thrash out the most vexing of after-war problems—the evacuation of the Rhineland.

Tardieu, who succeeded Briand as Premier of France, served as Captain of Chasseurs at the front, where he was twice wounded and gassed. Twice also his name appeared in Army Orders for conspicuous gallantry in fierce attacks carried out by the company under his command. Dr. Curtius was a battery commander, who rushed his guns forward at a critical stage of the Battle of Verdun, bringing the famous Fort Vaux under direct fire, a feat which won him the Iron Cross. First Class, pinned on his chest after the engagement by the Commander in Chief on that sector of the front, who happened to be no less a personage than the German Crown Prince himself.

Both were promoted to staff positions after that. Tardieu, after recovering from his wounds, moved to General Headquarters, first under Gen. Nudant, thereafter Foch, and still later Joffre. Dr. Curtius became an instructor at the Artillery School in Potsdam after his wounds had incapacitated him for further service in the field.

Both Admire America.

The most curious similarity between the two men to whom Europe looks at present for a "liquidation" of the war is that they are both fervent believers in American industrial, financial and business methods. Neither of them makes any bones about this predilection for American spirit, notwithstanding the fact that such an attitude involves sharp criticism and often ridicule on the part of ultra-Nationalist and chauvinist elements in their respective nations.

Tardieu, who sometimes is known as "l'Americain," acquired his American-like outlook during a long sojourn in the United States as French High Commissioner after America's entry into the war. Having long been one of the outstanding journalists of Paris, his articles, written under a pseudonym from America, were the first to make known to the French people the secrets of the technique of efficiency. He has been followed by hundreds of others. If there is today an annual exodus of French writers and observers setting forth upon the discovery of America, Tardieu might be said to have been the pioneer Columbus of the army of investigators.

The nickname "Americain" was fastened upon him when he became Minister of the Interior some years back and he had a first opportunity to carry his American ideas into effect. He did this by electrifying the whole of the Southern French railroad net.

When a large district of Southern France was slowly settled by an influx of Italian settlers, who turned a formerly unproductive region into a huge garden, political obstacles prevented the new farmers from reaping the full benefit of their enterprise. Tardieu as soon as he took over the Interior administration brushed the obstacles aside and furnished them with rapid transit facilities to bring them into contact with the great urban markets of Paris, Marseilles, Lyons and Bordeaux.

Man Behind Clemenceau.

Tardieu was the man behind Clemenceau at the peace conference at Versailles. He it was who drew up most of the terms of the treaty. This has not prevented him from retaining Briand in his Cabinet as Foreign Minister, therewith putting up the strongest guarantees to Germany that he wants rapproachement and disposal of the questions that keep the two peoples apart 11 years after peace was signed.

Dr. Curtius is of the type of new German business men that emerged after the war. Instead of leading armies of soldiers, these men now are directing the activities of thousands of workers. Like Tardieu's, the German Foreign Minister's slogan is "Peace through prosperity." He is an economist of distinction and one of the foremost business leaders of the Reich. He brought about the Franco-German steel cartel and negotiated the first definite post-war Franco-German commercial treaty, which went into effect in 1927.

Having always been a personal friend and admirer of the late Dr. Stresemann, who brought him into his Cabinet in 1926, Dr. Curtius shares his dead chief's ideals for complete reconciliation with France.

Both Tardieu and Dr. Curtius are 52, extremely young as statesmen go in Europe, and neither of them dreads "Americanization," bugaboo of the Nationalists, but, instead, they welcome a speeding up of industrial activity in their respective countries by methods which have proved successful in America.

Give the Family a Home for Christmas

How treasured memories grow sweeter and multiply from year to year for the children and their children's children about the "old home place!"

Here childhood and youth learn to enjoy and take pride in possession, leading to staunch, sterling, confident citizenship.

Here family gatherings from year to year inspire and encourage, bringing again and again the enjoyment of holidays and anniversaries.

Here age rests as the evening shadows fall—after the little ones have been reared and led out into channels of usefulness.

The Yuletide's keenest pleasures center in the family circle and twine about the family home.

Consider this—the greatest gift a family can have—a home of their own.

Be sure to see the homes listed in the Post-Dispatch Real Estate pages—make your selection and see the dealer for financing plans.

GIGOLOS FROM RUSSIA FLOURISH IN GERMANY

With 2,000,000 More Women Than Men Cause of Popularity Apparent.

BERLIN, Dec. 7.—Professional male dancing partners, commonly known as gigolos, are probably nowhere so numerous or prosper so much as in Berlin.

The fact that Germany has more than 2,000,000 more women than men explains the abundance. Berlin recently crowned its "King of the Gigolos," and a song about him has become popular.

The Berlin gigolo, or "Eintaenzer," is rarely a German. Most of them hail from Russia. Many were formerly dashing young Cossack officers. Not a few pride themselves on being of the Romanoff family. Some are even successful in making their matronly partners believe that they are Grand Dukes or Princes.

Their partners usually wax violently anti-Soviet after they have listened to heart-rending tales of how the Bolsheviks stripped them of fabulous wealth. This story usually softens the lady's heart to the extent of a fee of 50 marks ($12.50) instead of the regular 20 at the end of an evening during which his dancing made her feel 20 years younger.

Yet 50 marks is by no means the best honorarium. To an amateur gigolo who gives up a 60 mark a week job as ribbon salesman to become a "jewelry expert" (gigolos are supposed to become such), such honorariums mean butter for their bread. But among Berlin's elite "eintaenzer" are not a few to whom the "profession" has brought "cake" with which they embarked upon a life of luxury and ease.

Rumors have it that American dollars have bulged many a gigolo's pockets since prohibition started the American exodus to the less arid capitals of Europe.

The Berlin gigolo's height of ambition, of course, is big game, and, the bigger the better. Age and resulting lack of feminine pulchritude are no bar to a woman's being marked as a gigolo's prey. She must have but one qualification—money. How to make her part with her worldly riches is the gigolo's job and the most subtle capture first prizes.

Such a one was the notorious Alexander Subkoff, whose mastery of gigolo-ism won for him the hand of Princess Victoria zu Schaumburg-Pippe, sister of the ex-Emperor of Germany. With her went a dowry which hereabouts was considered a fortune. As is known, he squandered her fortune, stripped her of virtually her last penny and thus made a byword out of a name that once was a fetish in aristocratic circles.

GERMANY FONDEST OF CAVIAR

Formerly U. S. Was Russia's Best Customer for This Dish.

By the Associated Press.

ASTRAKHAN, Dec. 7.—Germany has supplanted the United States as the world's greatest consumer of Russian caviar, Soviet Government statistics reveal.

The citizens of the German republic this year consumed more than half of Russia's entire export of caviar. The United States, which for years was Russia's best customer for the sturgeon roe, ate only one-third the Soviet output. Russia still enjoys a virtual world monopoly on caviar, the product of other countries being neither nearly so large nor so good in quality as that of the Soviet Union. This year's production increased to 1,500,000 pounds, valued at $2,500,000. The greater part was exported as caviar is regarded as too great a luxury for the average citizen of present-day Russia. The finest grade retails for $4.80 a pound.

PANTOMIME ON LINDBERGH'S ATLANTIC FLIGHT IS SHOWN

Work of American Composer Presented First Time at Augsburg, Germany.

By the Associated Press.

AUGSBURG, Germany, Dec. 7.—To Antonio Modarelli, 25-year-old Pittsburg composer, has come the honor of being the first American since the war whose ballet-pantomime is given a premiere in Germany.

His work, "The Ocean Flight," was presented here by the municipal opera, with Miss Ery Bos of Berlin as solo danseuse.

Modarelli learned the technique of composing from Hugo Kaun, now residing at Berlin, but who for many years was director of the Wisconsin Conservatory of Music at Milwaukee.

"The Ocean Flight" perpetuates Lindbergh's historic trip in the imaginative forms of a dance pantomime. The music is ultra-modern both in form and in the use of instruments. It is full of American "pep."

A cantata, "Lindbergh's Flight," by Kurt Weil has been presented in Berlin.

Cotton Crop Good in Irak.

Thrills and Drinkwater

Mystery Meller at the American and English Comedy At the Shubert, as Legitimate Houses Reopen for a Week With Another Dark Spell to Follow—Arthur Casey Comes to Town and Prepares for His Stock Company Season at the Orpheum Theater, Which Begins on Christmas Night With "The Bachelor Father."

AFTER a week of idleness, and with another dark week to follow, the Shubert and the American theaters reopen their doors tonight. The former will have John Drinkwater's British comedy, "Bird in Hand," with an all English company, while the downtown house will present one of those Button-Button-Whose-Got-the-Button mellers, "The Jade God," a mystery affair which has been spoken of very highly elsewhere this season. In the meantime Arthur Casey, the stock company impresario, has arrived in town and begun the preliminary work on his venture at the Orpheum Theater there, starting Christmas night, he will endeavor to give St. Louis a continuous season of dramas.

The company that will be seen here in the Drinkwater piece is said to be the same that played for more than a year at the Royalty theater, London. Nearly a year ago another company, presenting the same piece, opened in New York where it still continues to be one of the attractions.

The action of "Bird in Hand" occurs in a little country inn set in Gloucestershire, during an evening, a night and until after the breakfast hour the next morning. The keeper of this inn, one Thomas Greenleaf, is a yeoman to the core, proud of the fact that the destinies of this little hostelry have remained in the keeping of his family through several generations, and with characteristic English stolidity, is highly class conscious. When his young daughter—the idol of his heart—takes to keeping company with the son of a neighboring lord, the old man's wrath soon proceeds entirely out of control, especially when the young people, off on an evening's jaunt against his wishes, are storm-bound in a lonely summer house.

In the inn that night are three guests, an oddly assorted trio, including a salesman in sardines, a vivacious, wealthy young novelist with Socialistic sympathies and a dignified, pompous solicitor. The intimate family tempest, matching in its fury the storm without, has not progressed for long before these three strangers are drawn into the melee, and the resulting scenes are hilarious in the highest degree. Of the final outcome of this trial of temperaments, of this conflict between old English manners and the independence of modern youth, it need only be said that Cupid eventually emerges victorious.

"THE JADE GOD" at the American Theater, starting tonight, was written by William E. Barry from the novel of the same title by Alan Sullivan, and comes direct from a 14 weeks' run at the Playhouse, Chicago. Lyle Stackpole heads the cast, and the supporting company includes Colin Hunter, Lesley Bingham, Stanley Harrison, Leslie King, Eleanor Audley, H. H. McCollum and Mary Hicks.

The play is a mystery drama said to be of a different character than that which the theatergoer is accustomed to find. The scene is laid in an English country home where a mysterious murder has been committed which has baffled Scotland Yard detectives for more than a year. The story begins with the introduction of Jack Derrick, a young writer who is in love with the daughter of the murdered man. The daughter refuses to marry until the mystery surrounding her father's death is cleared.

Derrick sets about—through a series of deductions—to fasten the crime on the guilty person. He learns the story of a certain piece of jade carved in the form of an evil Buddha, which was the only thing found missing after the death of her father. It develops that the image had been carved by an embittered Oriental priest who put all the evil of his soul into a jade god, which he placed in a temple until it had given an influence of evil to all the gods in the temple. It is learned the murdered man had stolen this god from a temple in the Mong Hills of India and brought it home to England with him. Phyllis Kraeuter Soloist at Today's Popular Concert

Young American 'Cellist Will Play Saint-Saens Concerto in A Minor With Symphony Orchestra.

PHYLLIS KRAEUTER, young American 'cellist, makes her St. Louis debut with the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra at the Odeon at 3:15 p. m., playing the Saint-Saens Concerto in A minor—one of the greatest works in the 'cello repertory.

Miss Kraeuter's selection as "Pop" soloist for today's concert follows an impressive series of successes in the launching of her career as a young artist. She is a pupil of Willem Willeke, and a graduate of the Juilliard Foundation, which awarded her its artists' diploma with highest honors. Upon her graduation she won the scholarship medal and the Morris Loeb $1000 prize. Later a committee of judges—Mischa Elman, Benno Moiseivitsch and Feliz Salmond—awarded her the Naumburg prize, which entitled her to a New York debut as a professional. She was chosen from more than 100 candidates and is the first 'cellist ever to have won that honor. She appeared in recital in New York this week.

"An American, not a New Yorker," so Phyllis Kraeuter described herself. She is a native of Cleveland, O., where her father was a well-known teacher of piano. Her grandfather also was a pianist of distinction and back of him, in an unbroken line in Germany were nine generations of organists. A brother, Karl, is a violinist; a sister, Leonore, is a pianist. When Phyllis, at five, began to pick out tunes on the piano her father did not want to be bothered teaching her, and not until she demonstrated a remarkable sense of pitch did he undertake to guide her studies. There was a year at the piano. And then, because the Kraeuters didn't want two pianists in the family, and because a 'cello would complete a trio, she began at 6½ years the study of that instrument. At 7 she had played before an audience of 2000, and at 12 Willem Willeke took her as a pupil, the youngest ever admitted to his classes.

Ganz Soloist for Symphony in a Russian Program

RUDOLPH GANZ, for six years conductor of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, returns to the concert platform with that orchestra this week as its soloist in a Russian program to be conducted by Senor Arbos at the Odeon Friday afternoon and Saturday evening. Ganz will play the Rachmaninoff Concerto in C minor No. 2, Opus 18. When St. Louis last heard that work Ganz was the conductor and Henri Deering the soloist, in the concerts of Dec. 9 and 10, 1906.

Before he came to St. Louis in 1921 to guide the destinies of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, Rudolph Ganz ranked as one of the world's important concert pianists. Since leaving St. Louis he has been affiliated with the Chicago College of Music, of which he is now artistic director, but his arrangements with that institution have been such as to permit guest appearances as conductor in San Francisco, Los Angeles and elsewhere and summer engagements as conductor in Denver.

Senor Arbos has provided a program which will offer a piquant intrinsic cross-section, as it were, of the currents of Russian music.

It embraces in the Moussorgsky "Khovantchina" prelude, the Liadov "Eight Russian Folk-Songs" and the Moussorgsky-Ravel "Pictures at an Exhibition," some of the finest examples of the work of the Neo-Russian school, while on the other the "Francesca da Rimini" of Tschaikowsky, and the Rachmaninoff Concerto are two of the high marks of the work of those Russian composers who sought to assimilate the music of the western world as well as develop their own national voices.

The "Eight Russian Folk Songs" which are orchestral transcriptions of songs gathered by Laidov when, on behalf of the Russian Government, he made a special study of the folk songs of the various country districts, in conjunction with Balakirev and Liapounov. Of beautiful simplicity in their character, they are orchestrated with remarkable effect. The group is to be presented for the first time in St. Louis at these concerts.

Men's Glee Club of Washington U. in Annual Concert

The Men's Glee Club of Washington University will present its annual city concert on Friday evening, Dec. 13, in the auditorium at Mary Institute, Waterman and Lake avenues. The club is composed of 55 voices and is again under the direction of Mr. Clay Ballew.

Webster College Plays.

Students of the Dramatic Art Department of Webster College will appear in several groups of one-act plays to be presented in the Little Theater of the college on Wednesday evening, Dec. 11, and Friday evening, Dec. 13. The freshman students will present "Her Victory" and "Snowed Up With the Duchess" on Dec. 11. The senior students of the department will play on Dec. 13. They will present "Will o' the Wisp" with Helen O'Brien, Mary Frances Broeker, Kate Sullivan and Billy Surprise; "My Lady's Lace," with Clarabelle Mueller, Catherine Geary, Mary Hickman and Catherine Bussman, and "Widows," with Catherine Cody, Alice Widmer and Jo Rabbitt.

Cameraless Test.

Gary Cooper, who is starred for the first time in the all-talking picture production, "Medals," was signed to a contract by Paramount after a cameraless test. He was brought before a gathering of the studio executives and pronounced "okay," three years ago.

First Starring Role.

Dorothy Mackaill in "The Love Racket" at the Ambassador.

Little Theatre Group to Give Pulitzer Play

"Hell Bent Fer Heaven" on for a Week at Artists' Guild, Starting Tomorrow Night.

COMMENCING tomorrow night and throughout the week the Little Theater of St. Louis, Inc. (formerly the Players' Guild), will offer the second production of its regular 1929-30 season, Hatcher Hughes' 3-act Pulitzer prize winning comedy, "Hell-Bent Fer Heaven." The cast for this play, according to the management of the theater at 512 Union boulevard, will be one of the strongest yet assembled from the acting group of the organization, including the following: Downey Harris, Pauline Sievers, Noel Grady, Avon Blue, Gordon Sommers, Elliot Bergfeld and Adelaide Tarrant.

All of these actors were chosen without try-outs in pursuance of the Little Theater policy to cast in that way when persons are available whose qualifications have been proved before audiences. This policy will not obtain, however, in the casting of all plays to be produced this season, as one of the fundamental purposes of the Little Theater is to encourage open competition and to find and develop new talent. "The Ivory Door," by A. A. Milne, to be shown after Christmas, has just been cast by the try-out method.

Elliot Bergfeld of the "Hell-Bent" cast has appeared in more parts in Little Theater plays than any other actor; Downey Harris played Lingley in "Outward Bound" and David Bliss in "Hay Fever;" Avon Blue did the tramp in "The Shadow of the Glen;" Pauline Sievers played Mrs. Cliveden-Banks in "Outward Bound;" Noel Grady has done Simon Bliss in "Hay Fever;" Ralph Twiller in "The Torch-Bearers," Ned Talbot in "Her Children Shall Rise Up," and Miquel in "The Marquise." Adelaide Tarrant is a newcomer in the acting group of the Little Theater.

Professor Hatcher Hughes of Columbia University, author of the play, found time about six years ago to penetrate the wild and almost inaccessible mountains of western North Carolina and to write this tragi-comic picture of that region. He was rewarded in 1924 when "Hell Bent Fer Heaven" won the Pulitzer prize for the best play by an American author.

Children's Theater In "Forest Ring"

Next Saturday afternoon and again in the evening, at the Toy Theater, in the Musical Art Building, "The Forest Ring" by William de Mille and Charles Barnard will be presented by the Children's Theater organization. This organization had its beginning in the fall of 1927 and since then has presented a number of plays which children can understand and enjoy. Miss Bessie Bissell Morse, the director of this group of youthful players, spent six weeks in New York and Boston last spring visiting children's organizations, and reading and selecting material for the children here.

"The Forest Ring" is a whimsical play with fairies, humans and animals as characters. The children taking part are: Ruth Schmidt, Nesta Johnson, Mildred Bardelmeyer, Jean Hess, Irene Virginia Miller, Vivian Schenck, Betty Herbert, Walter Herbert Jr., George Hoffman, Beatrice Blinsky, Mary Kathryn Hoffman, Lorraine Allen, John Henry Pohlman, Eileen Russell. Marion and Maxine Williams will give a musical program between the acts.

Lippsonian Players To Give "Kick In"

The dramatic play of the underworld, "Kick In," which a few seasons ago was made famous by John Barrymore in the role of Chick Hewes, the reformed crook, will be staged next Saturday night at the Masonic Temple in Maplewood by the Lippsonian Dramatic Club under the direction of Frank Lipp.

Ralph Graves, Eunice Quedens, Belle Baker and Arthur Housman in "The Song of Love," at the Fox.

Pauline Frederick

She is the star of "The Sacred Flame," at the Missouri.

The Stage and The Movies

An Intimation That One of the Chains of Legitimate Houses May Be Taken Over by the Cinema Operators—Rudolph Friml, Well-Known Composer, Going to Hollywood to Write Music for the Screen—W. Somerset Maugham and the Talkies Which Now Claim Belle Baker Among Other Stars.

By NIE.

REFERENCE last Sunday to the fact that Florenz Ziegfeld and Arthur Hammerstein were flirting with the talking movies and the further announcement during the week that so successful a composer of stage operettas as Rudolph Friml will go to Hollywood shortly to devote his time to writing the score for Mr. Hammerstein's first screen venture, would seem to indicate that the calamity howlers who are predicting the downfall of the legitimate theater in America have something upon which to place their clay feet. If ever an art, or a business, as you may prefer, has been mismanaged it has been the theater. The policy of The Public Be Damned has been followed so consistently that the talking pictures have had considerably better than an even break in the battle for the patronage of the cash customers.

Many of the best actors of the stage have already deserted the footlights for the glow of Hollywood—several of them are on view on the screens here in St. Louis this week. Managers, authors and composers are following and the next step, which may be looked forward to at any time, will be the announcement that one of the big picture concerns, Fox, or Paramount or Warners or R. K. O., has taken over the Shubert or Erlanger chain of legitimate theaters.

Certainly such a move is not beyond possibility. If the picture men want the theaters the only thing which will be discussed will be the price. And, equally certain, neither the Messrs. Shubert nor Mr. Erlanger have any leanings towards art which cannot be overcome by cash. R. K. O. has, for some time, controlled the destinies of the greater vaudeville theaters of the entire country and the "legit" houses can be picked up just as easily—and, probably less expensively.

THIS is a commercial age and there can be no quarrel with the theaters on the sole ground that they are commercial. The fault largely with the Little Theater movement is just that—that it is so uncommercial that it fails to provide its patrons with the comforts demanded by a comfort loving modern audience. The legitimate theaters, too, have failed also, to follow in the footsteps of the smart movie showmen and build up-to-date show houses and equip them with the super-excellent conveniences of the cinema palaces.

Perhaps it would be a good thing all around for the show business if the movie people branched out into the legitimate field and provided the customers with more tons of gold lace, more jade elephants in spacious lobbies, and still more to the point, more comfortable seats and better ventilation. Art would probably not be improved by such a move, but then no one is doing anything to improve stage art anyway so that the Theater, as an institution, would be no worse off than it is today and the occasional good plays which take to the road would find homes which showgoers would enjoy visiting.

As said above, the talking pictures have claimed Rudolph Friml, composer of "Rose Marie," "The Vagabond King," "Three Musketeers," and other musical hits. He will go to Hollywood in three weeks, and there compose the score for "Bride 66," Arthur Hammerstein's first picture play. Mr. Friml's first connection with the screen was established through a contract signed with Joseph M. Schenck, president of United Artists.

Friml says that he had deferred his advent to the audible screen, had refused earlier offers, because he wished to wait until recording and reproducing apparatus could do justice to a musical score. Now he believes this is possible, and so he is going to Hollywood. His association is with the Broadway producer, Hammerstein, for whom the composer contributed scores of "Rose Marie," "Katinka," "The Firefly," "High Jinks" and other operettas and musical comedies.

"Bride 66" is a story by Herbert Stothart, and it marks the advent of films of Hammerstein and Friml. The composer described his first film story as a musical play rather than a musical comedy or operetta. He will remain in Hollywood several months, composing his score while the author and producer of the picture are there.

Born in Prague, Friml received his musical education at the Conservatory of Music at Prague, and came to America with Jan Kubelik, violinist, as solo pianist. Not long after his arrival Friml played his own compositions at a piano con-

Argentina's Visit to St. Louis

Spanish Materials Glorified by Spain's Foremost Dancer—Mr. Arbos' Letter—Siegfried Wagner Announces Bayreuth Plans.

By Thos. B. Sherman.

THE two most famous dancers who have come out of Europe in the last 10 years are Harold Kreutzberg and Argentina. Both are just beginning to make themselves known to America as a whole and both will visit St. Louis during the present season.

Argentina, in fact, is almost upon us. Her first St. Louis recital will be given Tuesday evening at the Odeon and unless I am very much mistaken in the susceptibilities of local audiences it will not be her last. Argentina comes trailing clouds of glory which she picked up all along the way. She has been called the greatest Spanish dancer of all time, a statement that nobody has disputed but which is misleading, nevertheless if one allows one's self to emphasize the word "Spanish." For while Argentina is Spanish herself and uses Spanish material almost exclusively she is a devout practitioner of the artistic method which means that her materials are so transmuted that they have a significance for every one regardless of his nationality or associations.

She is therefore not to be classed with those artists who are appealing purely because of their exotic character. In this connection I will quote herewith a letter from E. Fernandez Arbos, who is now conducting the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra and who has known Mme. Argentina for a long time. Mr. Arbos' associations with her have been that of guide, counselor and friend. He was partly responsible for her determination to make the whole world her field of activity and he was directly responsible for one of the greatest successes of her career—the ballet "A Triana" for which he wrote the scenario and provided the music and which was presented at the Opera Comique in Paris last May.

Mr. Arbos says:

"I really consider La Argentina the greatest dancer we have ever had in Spain, or at least the greatest artist. It is like this . . . Spain is a country of the dance. Every girl dances and some of them do it uncommonly well. Spain has always had great and wonderful dancers and still has, but the difference between La Argentina and all the others is that they can only dance their national dances to the original national music. For example in Andalucia, every dancer will dance Alegrias, Farrucas, Fandanguillos — the native gypsy dances—while in other parts of Spain, as for instance in Aragon, they do La Jota; in the Basque country, the Zortzicos; in the Asturias, the Alborado and in Galicia, the Callegada.

"But if you ask them to invent dance steps to music that is unknown to them, even though it be Spanish, they will fail, because their ability is restricted to the national dances that have been transmitted from generation to generation and they are not musical enough to create a dance on a new theme.

In addition there is the fact that the dance in Spain has been kept in a rather low condition. Apart from the dances that may be seen at some festivities, like the Sevillana at the Sevillian annual fair which is held following Holy Week, you can see real national dancing only at some variety shows, as a rule of not a very high standard —this was true until a few years ago—or at small taverns or cafes where ladies would not care to go.

"La Argentina, owing to her culture, artistic gifts, and high aims has been the very first to raise the Spanish national dance to the status of a real cosmopolitan art, preserving at the same time all of the national characteristics in their primitive aspects. La Argentina presents the national dances in their original form, but in addition she has taken music composed by the best composers of the modern Spanish school—Granados, Falla, Albeniz, Halfter, Turina, Espla, etc. — and created dances, almost little poems on this music. Accordingly, she has been able to present a higher form of the Spanish dancing art all over the world, by the quality of the music she interprets.

IT WAS for her that I conceived the idea of my "Triana." I had often wondered why, having such a wealth of national music, dancing rhythms and beautiful dancers, Spain had never produced a ballet, at home or abroad, like Petrouschka or any of the other Russian ballets. But I knew that only La Argentina could dance it and stage it, and accordingly when the Grand Opera in Paris requested me to write such a ballet but did not include La Argentina in its plans, I refused.

"A year ago, La Argentina sent me a telegram telling me that she had succeeded in interesting the Opera Comique in the idea. About the results, you already know. It was one of the greatest successes that Paris has ever witnessed. We were told that never in the history of the Opera Comique had they had such receipts. Forty performances were given in succession at the Opera Comique and the theater Marigny.

To appreciate the dancing of La Argentina you must know first that Spanish dancing does not depend, as in other forms of ballet dancing, on spinning on the toes or lifting up of legs. It is entirely an art of arms and hands and facil expression and is characterized by grace and dignity. As for the playing of the castenets, you will see that even if La Argentina did not dance, she could give a recital of castenets, as Kfeisler does on the violin or Paderewski on the piano. . . . Listen to the perfection of her rhythm achieved with the castenets and her heels!

"Saint Louis is going to see her and I am sure that she will conquer it as she has every city she has visited. I feel rather proud of it, because in a certain way, Saint Louis—and the rest of the world—would perhaps never have had the opportunity of admiring her, but for us. It was Madame Arbos and myself, about 10 years ago, who persuaded La Argentina—almost forced her—to leave Spain where she was famous and go abroad. She went with us to San Juan de Luz. There a performance was arranged for her before a large audience composed of the foremost musicians, literary men, press men and influential people from Paris. Later she went to Paris and very soon achieved the fame that has conquered the world.

SIEGFRIED WAGNER, son of Richard Wagner and director of the Wagner Festspielhaus at Bayreuth, has made a formal announcement of the 1930 Festival plans, which include, among other things, performances directed by Arturo Toscanini. Her Wagner's statement is as follows:

THE Bayreuth Festival Plays are, as a rule, given during two years in succession. Then comes a pause of one year, which is employed exclusively for rehearsals and general preparations. The "Ring of the Nibelungs" and "Parsifal" are included in each year's program, since Richard Wagner, realizing the tremendous difficulty of presenting these works in the ordinary theater, built the Bayreuth Festival Theater especially to make possible a worthy presentation.

"Since 1925 I have gradually created an entirely new staging for the "Ring" with the help of all the achievements of modern stage technic, especially lighting effects and plastic decorations. In Lauritz Melchior, Nanny Larsen-Todsen and Friedrich Schorr, to name only the Siegfried, Brunnhilde and Wotan, I have found singers who would have delighted my father. In 1930 Kapellmeister Elmendorff will conduct one cycle of the "Ring," and if my task of stage manager for all the seven works that will make up the program does not demand all my time, I shall conduct the second production of the "Ring." "Parsifal" will be in the hands of Dr. Muck, who has during more than 25 years made this dedicatory festival play a loftily impressive experience.

"In addition to these two works, an earlier one will be presented in a completely new setting: After a pause of 24 years, "Tannhauser" will be revived. The most careful attention has been paid to selecting the artists for the main parts. Sigismund Pilinsky, a gifted Hungarian with a splendid tenor voice, will take the title role. Frau Maria Muller, with an ideal appearance and voice, will sing the Elizabeth, and Frau Jost-Arden will be the Venus. The part of the Landgrave will be given by Ivar Andresen, with his wonderful bass voice. Rudolph von Laban will stage the choreographic details of the bacchanal, which will be presented by members of his troupe of dancers. Toscanini and Elmendorff will alternate as conductors.

"Tannhauser" will naturally be presented in the so-called Paris version. The erroneous belief still persists that this version was made especially for Paris. As a matter of fact, this designation was due to the fact that the work in this revised form was first presented in that city. Richard Wagner was moved to give the drama this new form by the feeling that, at the time when he composed "Tannhauser," he was not yet technically mature enough for a scene like that at the Venusberg. In order to conjure up the period of the gods of Olympus a musical coloring was required which he did not achieve until he composed "Tristan."

"The impression made by the newly staged "Tristan" in 1927 and 1928 was so great that the guests demanded that it be given again at the coming performances. I am glad to comply with this wish by giving three presentations of "Tristan," which will be conducted by Toscanini.

"The Bayreuth Festival Plays can now look back on a history of more than 50 years. In August, 1876, there were opened on the pleasant hill near Bayreuth for the first time the doors of the Festival Play House which my father, after overcoming all difficulties, had created for the production of his mighty four-part work, "The Ring of the Nibelungs." King Ludwig II of Bavaria had devoted himself enthusiastically to making this deed possible, the municipal authorities of the city of Bayreuth had co-operated in the plan with far-seeing understanding, and thus came the inception of the Bayreuth Festival Plays, which have now for a half century been for uncounted visitors not only a source of loftiest pleasure, but at the same time of the highest and noblest spiritual elevation and enrichment.

"AFTER the 'Ring' had been presented three times in 1876, renewed hindrances arose which made it impossible to resume the presentations until 1882, when 'Parsifal' was again given. It was performed again in 1883 and 1884. But it was not vouchsafed to my father to live to see the plays in 1883. However, his lifework was developed and carried along the lines laid down by him. In 1886 'Tristan and Isolde' was presented in the Festival Play House for the first time. Then the other works came—in 1888 and 1889 'The Mastersingers of Nuremberg,' in 1891 and 1892 'Tannhauser,' and in 1894 'Lohengrin.' In 1896, after a pause of 20 years, the 'Ring' was again presented, and since then it has remained on the program together with 'Parsifal' and one other work. An extra offering in 1901 and 1902 was 'The Flying Dutchman,' which was presented in one act without pauses, following the composer's original intention.

"In the summer of 1914, when 'The Flying Dutchman' again had a place on the program, the Festival Plays had to be discontinued after eight performances as a result of the war, and the Festival Theater remained closed for 10 years, until, in 1924, the Festival Plays were resumed with the faithful help of the artists and both old and new friends, with splendid success. The 'Ring,' the 'Mastersingers' and 'Parsifal' were produced, and the same works were given in 1925.

"The musical world was astonished at the fact that the year 1926, marking the fiftieth aniversary of the Festival Plays, found the theater closed. But it was absolutely necessary to devote that year to the preparations and rehearsals for the following summer. In Bayreuth thorough, serious work takes precedence over the celebration of anniversaries, to the end that the Festival Plays may be presented in the greatest possible perfection. All the achievements of modern stage technic are taken advantage of there, but there is no departure from the course prescribed and desired by my father for the presentation of his works.

"In 1927 the fiftieth anniversary of the Festival Plays was made especially noteworthy by the fact that in addition to the 'Ring' and 'Parsifal,' 'Tristan and Isolde' could again be presented for the first time in 21 years."

BEHIND THE SCREENS

OUT IN HOLLYWOOD

Kidding the Talkies Is the Latest Move of Mack Sennett

Raymond Hackett is No Newcomer To the Movie Films

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 7.

PROBABLY Sherman was right, but a checkup will reveal that war has not been unmitigated fire and brimstone to many of those now in the movie spotlight.

Jean Harlow, an unknown from Chicago, has been selected as leading lady in the talking version of "Hell's Angels," the war and aviation film, and if the "fortunes of celluloid" serve Miss Harlow as they have other movie celebrities of today, she should have a bright future.

DOLORES DEL RIO

It will be recalled that "Wings," another war flying picture, gave three of today's stars notable boosts in their upward climb.

Richard Arlen it established. Buddy Rogers it made famous. To Clara Bow, already widely known as the heroine of "It," the picture gave added popularity.

And Gary Cooper, after a good impression made in one other picture, found in "Wings" his first real part for the studio which recently made him a star.

DOLORES DEL RIO, although she skyrocketed to fame in 'Resurrection" a year later, found her first stepping stone to stardom as Charmaine in "What Price Glory?" the war picture which also established Victor McLaglen and increased Edmund Lowe's fan mail.

Similarly, John Gilbert first attracted notice in "The Merry Widow," but it was not until "The Big Parade" that his name became a household word, and the same war epic offered Renee Adoree, a comparative unknown from the French circus tents, her big opportunity as Melisande.

"The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" made the late Rudolph Valentino an overnight sensation, and it was in "Seventh Heaven," a romantic idyl set against a World War background, that Janet Gaynor and Charlie Farrell, headliners today, first achieved startling success.

Even the first great picture the movies produced, Griffith's "Birth of a Nation," with the war between the states as its theme, had in its cast the names of many who since have risen (some to fall, sadly) on the movie ladder: Lillian Gish, Henry B. Walthall, Mae Marsh, Miriam Cooper, Wallace Reid and the rest.

IN THE face of all the efforts to uplift the movies, some may be justifiably startled to note that after one company announced it would film "Murder on the Roof," another now heralds a new production to be called "Murder on the Second Floor"—a lower homicidal form by at least a couple of flights.

At any rate, Loretta Young and Sidney Blackmer are to appear in the latter.

A CONDITION reported to be general in small movie houses has been burlesqued in a Mack Sennett two-reeler.

In "A Hollywood Star" the records and the film being shown in a small theater go out of synchronization and the operator can find no remedy. The situation is made the worse (and the funnier) because the star of the picture is a guest of the manager.

The sound record and the film brought her mother and her father and her younger sister and brother from Pittsburg.

RAYMOND HACKETT, the young hero of "The Trial of Mary Dugan" and of "Madame X," is by no means a newcomer to the movies. He is a veteran with a record that would dwarf those of some of the so-called "old-timers" of this business.

RAYMOND HACKETT

Twenty years ago, when the Lubin studios were in New York, Hackett made his bow to the camera at the age of 6. Even at that age he had seen two years on the stage. His first stage appearance was in the comic opera, "The Toymaker of Nuremburg," in which his mother, Florence Hackett, also appeared.

After several plays young Hackett had roles in split-reel and full-reel "flickers" for nearly three years.

For nearly 22 years, then, Hackett has been acting continuously. His schooling was obtained between shows and picture engagements.

HACKETT has no favorite role; he hopes each new one will be better than the preceding one. He probably took a tip from the late Jeanne Eagels, who told Hackett once that her favorite part "hasn't been written yet." Like her, he is always looking for a better role.

Until a year ago Hackett appeared in plays in New York. A tour with a show brought him to the coast and a role in Gloria Swanson's "The Loves of Sunya" followed.

Hackett many years ago appeared with Lionel Barrymore in "The Copperhead," and it is an interesting coincidence that on the start of his new film career he was directed by Barrymore in "Madame X."

WILLIAM BOYD

IT IS particularly unsafe in Hollywood to write that anything is new or singular or that something is being done "for the first time." But this case seems different: A bunch of old movie sets has suggested a motion picture story.

Howard Higgins, a director, was without material for William Boyd's next picture. Wandering around the Pathe lot, he discovered a number of sets erected for Gloria Swanson's ill-fated "Queen Kelly," and some others used three years ago in "The King of Kings."

These gave him an idea for a satire on Graustark and other mythical kingdom stories and he and a writer set to work and wrote "Crashing Through."

In the picture Boyd will be an American adventurer in an imaginary Balkan country, and the old sets, painted up a little, will be used.

Joseph P. Kennedy, head of Pathe, thought the story so good that he appropriated an extra $50,000 to make it.

THE prophet is not always without honor at home. Someone who attended Grinnell College with Gary Cooper recalls the excitement in the little Iowa town when Gary first appeared on the local screen.

His first bit was no senation anywhere else, but there it was a gala event. He appeared for a few seconds in Clara Bow's "It," but that was enough.

One of the boys chanced to see the matinee, and scurried back to the campus to spread the news. That night the theater was packed with students.

And when "The Winning of Barbara Worth" came along, with Gary in his first featured role, the show house did not miss its opportunity. Dodgers flooded the town and campus proclaiming: "Grinnell's Own Star—Gary Cooper in "The Winning of Barbara Worth."

And—perhaps as an afterthought —was added: "with Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky!"

WE, it seems from the advance advertising, are already committed to the statement that "The Sacred Flame," at the Missouri Theater this week, is a fine picture drama. It is, and it is the sort of cinema offering which the more intelligent picturegoers have always been demanding. In it, in addition to the usual list of screen favorites, will be found Pauline Frederick and William Courtenay, who bring from the legitimate stage skill and a distinction above the ordinary.

And the play itself is from the book of the same name, by W. Somerset Maugham, a distinguished author and playwright. True, Mr. Maugham did not write this screen version but it is reported that he, too, is casting eyes upon Hollywood and that an original drama, from his hand, is to be turned out for the cinemas.

William Somerset Maugham is a name to conjure with in the theater. Born in Paris in 1874 he was educated there and at Heidelberg, later becoming a physician and surgeon at St. Thomas's Hospital in London. His interest in human beings and his preoccupation with the tragic futility of life, caused him to change the scalpel for the pen, and to devote his time to the dissection of minds instead of bodies.

The first of his novels was "Lisa of Lambeth." Others are "The Making of a Saint," "The Moon and Sixpence," "The Painted Veil," a forceful portrayal of conditions in China," and "Of Human Bondage." The latter, supposedly autobiographical, is considered by many to be the greatest novel of the last quarter century.

His fame as a novelist is rivaled by his triumphs as a playwright—"Lady Frederick," "The Tenth Man," "The Sacred Flame," "The Circle" and others. He wrote the short story "Miss Thompson," from which the tremendously moving play "Rain" was made—as a starring vehicle for the late Jeanne Eagels. "East of Suez" was a melodramatic presentation of the old problem of East and West. "Our Betters" appeared in 1923 and later "The Letter" in which Katherine Cornell starred.

Though his plays are often lightly cynical, all are suffused with the essential tragedy of life. Mr. Maugham's art is the first reason for the success of "The Sacred Flame."

THE vaudeville stage, as well as the dramatic division, is contributing its talent to the talkies and in "Song of Love," at the Fox Theater this week, Belle Baker is making her screen debut. Miss Baker, one of the most popular headliners of the varieties, is a product of New York's East Side —that metropolitan district that has produced more political and artistic celebrities than any other section of the world.

Her theatrical career started early. She made her debut on the stage at the age of 8. She appeared frequently in East Side music halls, thereafter, and was the first singer to make a specialty of Hebrew melodies.

Morris Gest discovered the talented child and decided to introduce her to uptown audiences. An opening was arranged for her at Hammerstein's Victoria. Gest interested Leo Feist in his protege. Both persuaded Belasco to attend one of Miss Baker's performances. Belasco was so impressed with the young girl's ability (she was then about 17) that he wanted to send her to Europe, have her trained and bring her out as a dramatic star. Miss Baker had by this time become endeared to vaudeville and did not want to give it up.

Belle Baker has continued in the varieties and musical revues from that time to the present. She is one of the most popular vaudeville artists of the decade and one of the highest paid. One secret of her popularity is her versatility. She sings peppy jazz songs, ballads, character and dialect selections with equal success.

Oland Still Menaces.

Warner Oland will bring Joseph Conrad's infamous Schomberg to life in Nancy Carroll's first starring picture, "Flesh of Eve," which is suggested by Conrad's "Victory." He is just finishing his part in the Ludwig Berger production of "The Vagabond King."

Facing the Music

Walter A. Hansen, pianist-composer of Fort Wayne, Ind., will give a recital in the Concordia Seminary auditorium this afternoon at 3:30 p. m. His repertoire will include compositions by Bach, Liszt and De Falla. He will feature the "Sonata in E Minor, Opus 7" of Grieg. Prof. Hansen will also play a group of his own compositions for the first time in St. Louis. The titles include, "Birds," "The Pensive Banjo-Picker," and "The Cascade."

Rose L. Everts, pianist; Robert Zwisselbauer, violinist, and Paul O. Schinke, violinist, will give a recital at Carondelet Evangelical Hall, Michigan and Koeln, Wednesday evening, Dec. 11, at 8:15 p. m.

A junior program arranged by Miss Bertha M. Donnelly, chairman, will be given by the Eighth District Missouri Federation of Music Clubs at Baldwin's Hall, Dec. 12, at 3 p. m.

The Rubenstein Musical Club will hold its monthly meeting Thursday morning at the home of Mrs. Anna W. Lochmoeller of 4122A Farlin avenue, with Miss Atillie Wehrle as assisting hostess. Music of Scandanavia will be studied with Miss Olivia Williams in charge of the program.

Handel's Oratorio "The Messiah" will be sung by the Kirkwood Choral Club Tuesday evening, Dec. 17, at the Methodist Church. A chorus of 50 will be directed by William B. Heyne assisted by four soloists—Mrs. Raymond Henley, soprano, Mrs. George Jackson, contralto, James Leroy Simmons, baritone, and Alfred Friedli, tenor. The accompanists will be Frank Parker, organist, and Lambert Mennemeyer, pianist.

A series of Candle Light Recitals will be given at the First Congregational Church, Wydown boulevard and University Lane, every Sunday afternoon in December between 5 and 6 o'clock.

MYSTERY AND ENGLISH COMEDY WEEK'S BILLS AT "LEGIT" THEATERS

opening of the Orpheum Theater Christmas night, Casey's plans are for a season of what he announces as super-stock, such as is being done by most of the prominent stock companies throughout the country. The company of resident players, about a round dozen in number, will fit themselves into a cast that will include featured artists from the original road shows. For instance, the opening play of the season will be "The Bachelor Father," David Belasco's comedy hit, which played at the American Theater last winter. Casey will use three or four of the original cast.

This will be the first time that David Belasco has released "The Bachelor Father" for stock purposes. The plays will be scheduled for a minimum run of two weeks. Prices as announced by Mr. Casey are box, orchestra and mezzanine loge seats, $1; balcony, 75c and 50 cents. Matinees on Tuesdays and Thursdays will be at 50 cents. Saturday matinees will be 50 cents and 75 cents. There will be no Sunday matinees.

"JOURNEY'S END," the much discussed drama which comes to the Shubert Sunday night, Dec. 22, was written by Robert C. Sherriff, a former Lieutenant in a Surrey regiment. It presents actual experiences and pictures men whom the author really knew. It is presented by Gilbert Miller, who, at this time, has four other companies playing this drama in this country and Canada. The company to visit here is the one he organized after the New York one now running at Henry Miller's Theater. The play is now being produced in London, Paris, Berlin and Stockholm, in addition to the United States and Canada.

Included in the all-English cast will be Henry Mowbray, Reginald Mason, Fred Monti, Edward Woodings, John Williams, Ralph Nairn, Leslie Barrie, Royal Beal, Lionel Pape and Henry von Zynda.

MUSICAL comedy of a new type is at least the promise contained in "A Connecticut Yankee," announced as the New Year's attraction at the American Theater, beginning Sunday, Dec. 29.

It is an adaptation of Mark Twain's masterpiece, made by Fields, Rodgers and Hart, and given by permission of the Mark Twain estate, which has placed its stamp of approval on it.

First given at the Vanderbilt Theater, New York, early in November, 1927, it met with success over night and ran for a solid year at that theater to record-breaking receipts.

The song hits have already been made familiar by means of the orchestras and the radio and "My Heart Stood Still," "Thou Swell" and "On a Desert Isle" are being hummed and whistled throughout the land.

ON the same night, Dec. 29, the Shubert Theater will also go into musical comedy with "Fallow Thru," another big hit with musical numbers already thoroughly familiar. Among them are "Button Up Your Overcoat," "I Want To Be Bad," "Lucky Star," "You Wouldn't Fool Me, Would You?" and "I Could Give Up Anything But You." Heading the cast will be Bobby Jarvis, Olive Olsen, Warren Hull, Lilian Bond, Dorothy Dare, Harry Tighe, Dave Thursby, Helen Carrington, Mae Tamblyn, Thomas Tracey, Nanon Pearce and Peggy O'Neil.

Day by Day IN New York

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.

A GENTLEMAN who has been watching Broadway for 30 years sends these bits of philosophy: The most amiable night out companions are those who never buy a drink.

Watch out for the fellow who says: "I don't believe it but I heard"——

The inevitable end of a showgirl is a hide-away.

There are more thinkers in the first two rows of a theater's balcony than in the whole of downtown Paris.

No one ever saw an actor get temperamental with a policeman.

Ninety-nine per cent of the people who knock New York couldn't get hired to live elsewhere.

Almost any man can attract a girl but only a diplomat knows how to get rid of her.

Broadway hails impertinence as wit!

The fellow who is always passing out pretty phrases is a hard guy for a quick loan.

It may take some time for the fellow who is looking for the best to get it, but he usually does.

Men who will accept any drink offered them are the sort who clean their table silverware before using.

New York has had more gaiety since the passing of the saloon than it had before.

Not 80 per cent of successful men in New York could make good in a small town.

No hero received such Broadway approval as Col. Lindbergh, and he doesn't drink, smoke or swear.

The trouble with most experts is that they can't relax.

Any time you loan a friend a sum under $10 you are putting a strain on his friendship.

The husband who has a habit of dropping down to the corner to see the boys at night will soon be going farther.

The real intuitive women are those who have had more than two husbands.

The father who goes out "to do the town" with his son is inviting sorrow.

I never knew a decent fellow to be without a job very long.

The king of the thrillers, Edgar Wallace of London, got a "thrill" for himself at a dinner in his honor in New York. After the guests assembled an argument suddenly developed between two of the guests. There were high words and suddenly the lights went out with a crack of revolvers. There was the clang of an ambulance, a sheeted body carried out and then miniature newspapers with the heading: "Another Wallace Thriller," were passed out. Mr. Wallace, whose host was Ray Long, enjoyed it all, but was a little pale, even up to the after-dinner coffee.

ON the same night, Dec. 29, the Shubert Theater will also go into musical comedy with "Follow Thru," another big hit with musical numbers already thoroughly familiar. Among them are "Button Up Your Overcoat," "I Want To Be Bad," "Lucky Star," "You Wouldn't Fool Me, Would You?" and "I Could Give Up Anything But You." Heading the cast will be Bobby Jarvis, Olive Olsen, Warren Hull, Lilian Bond, Dorothy Daw, Harry Tighe, Dandy Thursby, Helen Carrington, Eddie Tamblyn, Thomas Tracey, Nayan Pearce and Peggy O'Neill.

Day by Day IN New York

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Dec. 7. A GENTLEMAN who has been watching Broadway for 30 years spends these bits of philosophy: The most amiable night out companions are those who never buy a drink.

Watch out for the fellow who says: "I don't believe it but I heard"—

The inevitable end of a showoff is a hide-away.

There are more thinkers in the first two rows of a theater's balcony than in the whole of downstairs.

No one ever saw an actor get temperamental with a policeman.

Ninety-nine per cent of the people who knock New York couldn't be hired to live elsewhere.

Almost any man can attract a girl but only a diplomat knows how to get rid of her.

Broadway hails impertinence as wit.

The fellow who is always passing out pretty phrases is a hard guy for a quick loan.

It may take some time for the fellow who is looking for the best to get it, but he usually does.

Men who will accept any drink offered them are the sort who clean their table silverware before eating.

New York has had more gaiety since the passing of the saloon than it had before.

Not 80 per cent of successful men in New York could make good in a small town.

No hero received such Broadway approval as Col. Lindbergh, and he doesn't drink, smoke or swear.

The trouble with most experts is that they can't relax.

Any time you loan a friend a sum under $10 you are putting a strain on his friendship.

The husband who has a habit of dropping down to the corner to see the boys at night will soon be going farther.

The real intuitive women are those who have had more than two husbands.

The father who goes out "to do the town" with his son is inviting sorrow.

I never knew a decent fellow to be without a job very long.

For a good, rousing laugh from the boots up, try: "Is there a Doctor in the House?" a slim volume by the irrepressible Rube Goldberg.

The king of the thrillers, Edgar Wallace of London, got a "thrill" for himself at a dinner in his honor in New York. After the guests assembled an argument suddenly developed between two of the guests. There were high words and suddenly the lights went out with a crack of revolvers. There was the clang of an ambulance, a sheeted body carried out and then miniature newspapers with the heading: "Another Wallace Thriller" were passed out. Mr. Wallace, whose host was Ray Long, enjoyed it all, but was a little pale, even up to the after-dinner coffee.

Harlem black-and-tans have been drawing much of the Broadway cabaret business these days. There is no cover charge, the entertainment is above the average and gin is 50 cents a shot. And terrible!

I know a man past 50 who has been a prodigious reader all his life but had only read snatches of the Bible. Recently during a convalescence he started reading it and became so interested that he now reads little else.

The sudden lengthening of skirts on ladies' evening gowns left more than $2,000,000 frocks in New York of little value.

Shavings: Benny Leonard takes his mother to all the parties he attends. . . . Will Rogers answers his mail with lead pencil. . . . Cafes report fewer women are dieting. . . . Eighteen elaborate apartments on Park avenue were abandoned in one day during the market crash. . . . The new Waldorf will have "sample rooms for drummers." . . . Rudy Vallee has been offered $10,000 to popularize a new shape of hat to be named for him. . . . Ed Howe, who lives in Atchison, Kan., refused a big offer to knock New York in a magazine article. . . . John J. Raskob and Al Smith are chop suey addicts. . . . A big increase in church attendance since Wall Street rocked.

Self-Back-Patting Department: From this column three years ago: "I believe most movie goers are interested more in the news reel than any other picture diversion, and some day a playhouse devoted solely to the latest news pictures of the day will turn them away." The News Reel Theater at Broadway and Forty-sixth street, devoted exclusively to news pictures, is turning them away.

And we still cannot make out this one from a fashion column in a theater program: "The latest is a dime-sized wrist watch pinned to the vest edge."

PROF. H. E. BARNES TO SPEAK ON "SCIENCE VS. RELIGION"

Prof. Harry Elmer Barnes of Smith College will speak on "Science vs. Religion," at the Liberal Forum of the Y. M. H. A.-Y. W. H. A., Union boulevard and Enright avenue, at 8:30 p. m. next Sunday. Prof. Barnes is engaged in a lecture and debating tour during a sabbatical year from Smith College. He is the author of several books, the latest being "Living in the Twentieth Century."

Program Announced For La Argentina's Recital at Odeon

Most of Dances Based on Music by Such Modern Composers as De Falla, Grenados and Albinez.

LA ARGENTINA, first dancer of Spain, makes her debut in St. Louis at the Odeon on Tuesday evening, Dec. 10. Schooled from childhood in the traditional Italian ballet, and at 11, principal dancer at the Royal Opera House in Madrid, La Argentina was not long in finding for herself her own individual means of expression, devoting herself entirely to the dances of her country which contain a wealth of beauty. There are 49 provinces in Spain and each has evolved its own distinctive dance to which it has given the quality of its soul.

La Argentina has prevailed upon such composers as Halffter, Nin, Espla, Duran, to write special music for her. Her program for Tuesday evening contains some of the more popular dances of Spain "The Bolero," "The Fandango," "Seguidillas," the one intoxicating, the one inflammatory and the last danced without music to the rhythm of the castanets. The following is her full program:

El Puerto ..... I. Albeniz
Serenata ..... M. Malats
Dance No. 5 ..... E. Granados
Fire Dance from ballet "El amor brujo" ..... M. de Falla
(Ritual dance for driving away evil spirits)
La Argentina
Scene 11 from "El amor brujo" ..... M de Falla
Farruca from "The Three-Cornered Hat" ..... M. de Falla
Miguel Berdion
First Dance from La Vida Breve ..... M. de Falla
Lasarteriana ..... J. Guerrero
(Peasant dance of the province of Toledo)
La Argentina
Intermission.
Cordoba ..... I. Albeniz
Andalusian Tango ..... Popular Melody
La Argentina.
Triana ..... I. Albeniz
Miguel Berdion
Bolero (classic dance of 18th century) ..... I. Yradier
Seguidillas (dance without music) ..... I. Yradier
La Corrida (Impressions of a bull fight) ..... Q. Valverde
La Argentina.

NEW WAY TO SUPPRESS COMMUNISM IN BRITAIN

Mine Director Sends Two Men to Russia to See Conditions.

By the Associated Press.

EYTHORNE, England, Dec. 7.—A new method of combatting Communist propaganda in mining districts has been discovered by Tilden Smith, managing director of the Tilmanstone collieries here.

Smith's method works without the arrest of a single soap-box orator, or the expenditure of public funds in the prosecution of criminal syndicalism cases. It also has the supreme virtue of converting agitators into helpful friends.

The mine had its share of grief from the gloomy coal situation in England, and this was increased by a growing belief among the miners that under Communistic conditions in Russia things must be much better.

So Smith offered to send two miners to Russia on condition they stay there, if things looked better than at home, and on the further condition that, if they didn't like the Russian system, they would come back and tell their fellow workers why.

J. Crane and W. Roone took him up. They returned from Russia full of hard words. Mines in Russia were indeed different from English mines. Of the Barovsky mine in the Donetz Basin, Crane said:

"It was just a hole in the side of a hill. Our interpreter refused to go in with us. We went down by sliding on our backs from prop to prop. We told them British miners wouldn't work three hours in such a place."

In Moscow the British miners were horrified by high prices, pestered by flies and beggars, and revolted by the sight of "clothes and jewels which only the rich could buy" displayed in shops not far from where "thousands of workers stood in bread lines to obtain their daily ration."

Smith had his little joke at the meeting addressed by Crane and Roone. He posted near the door the following notice:

"Booking office for free outward passage to Russia. Application can be made here after the meeting by Tilmanstone miners desirous of proceeding to Russia with their families to take up employment arranged by their delegates in accordance with the conditions of their tour."

No one asked for a ticket.

STUDENT EMPLOYMENT BUREAU

Shurtleff College Plans to Assist In Finding Work.

Formation of a student employment bureau under the direction of the Shurtleff college Y. M. C. A. will soon take place as the result of a recent survey of the student undertaken by a student employment committee headed by Raymond Stutz, Alton. Investigation revealed the need of a clearing-house to bring together local employers and students desirous of part-time work.

Three-fifths of the male enrollment of the college is part-time employed, the survey revealed. Seventy-eight of the 120 men in Shurtleff are working outside of college, several of them holding down eight-hour jobs besides carrying full-time college work. Although the latter situation was deprecated in the committee report, it was pointed out that there is still a need for additional part-time employment, both for men and for women.

GIVES SERVICE BONUSES

At the recent meeting of officials of the Commonwealth branch of the General Steel Castings Corporation at Granite City, Ill., service checks at the rate of one dollar for each year of service was given to 1698 employes who have been in continuous employment at that plant for five years or more. The total in years service of the group was more than 15,000 years.

In the 25 year service class there are 25 men, who are: Arthur T. Morey, Charles F. Fiede, Clifford S. Griffith, Fred W. Gould, Charles L. Robinson, Walter Buhr, Hugh Stuart, R. G. Brown, Marcus De LaHunty, Pete Gaspard, Arthur Dixon, Harry Ryckman, Harry J. Kraft, W. Wood, George Schweider, Ollie Tolleson, H. Deputy Coroner Resigns.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SPARTA, Ill., Dec. 7.—Lawrence J. Allard of Prairie du Rocher has tendered his resignation as Deputy Coroner to Coroner C. A. Jackson, to take effect the first of the year. Allard said that the office interfered with his mercantile business and he was unable to give the office the attention it deserves. As yet Coroner Jackson has made no choice of a new deputy and will make no appointment until after the first of the year.

CREDIT UNION FORMED BY DECATUR PARISH

Organized to Promote Thrift and to Serve as Agency for Small Loans.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DECATUR, Ill., Dec. 7.—Members of St. James parish have recently organized a credit union, first of its kind in Illinois. Its organization is the first step to establish credit unions in Catholic churches throughout the state. Anton Spaeth, president of the Catholic Unions of Illinois, says he intends to start credit unions in Bloomington, and in Lincoln by the first of January. These unions are to operate upon the same principle as the Wabash Credit unions, which have been found to be very successful.

The general purpose of the unions is to promote thrift among its members, and to set up a credit agency from which small sums may be borrowed.

Seventy-five years ago, credit unions of any kind were unknown. The idea was first put into operation in Germany. It quickly spread to France, and a Frenchman brought the idea along with him when he settled in Quebec. It was another Frenchman, who located in Massachusetts, who started the first Credit Union of the United States.

KANSAS 4-H CLUB GIRL HAS WON $1604 IN PRIZES

Latest Award Is $300 Scholarship Given for Garden Display at Chicago Livestock Show.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Dec. 7.—A $300 scholarship awarded Mary White, 18 years old, of the Glendale community, Pulaski county, for taking first place in the contest sponsored by the National Garden Club at the International Livestock Exposition in Chicago last week is not the only award the 4-H girl has won. Her latest victory was based on the display of canned fruits and vegetables taken from her garden this year.

"When I finish my city work this spring I'm sure I will have 500 quarts of fruits and vegetables," she said.

She began her 4-H club work in January, 1923. Her first year's exhibit of canned goods won first place with a prize of $5, at the community fair. In 1926 she walked first in the county bread contest and fourth in the state contest. In the same year she received $25 from the Little Rock Chamber of Commerce for having won in the 4-H club gardening and canning contest. Her club elected her president in 1928 and again this year. Her total income for the past seven years from her garden was said to be $1,604.75, according to the county home demonstration agent.

CARLINVILLE, Ill., Dec. 7.—The will of Phillip Breggan, Gillespie merchant, which has been filed for probate, bequeaths the homestead to his niece, Mrs. Marquerite McCelland. The following bequests were made: Agnes Breggan, wife of a deceased brother, $1000; James Breggan Jr., $500; Harry McCelland, $500; the Rev. John Cronson, pastor of the Gillespie Catholic Church, $25; and an equal division of the remainder of the estate between Mrs. McCelland, John Breggan, James Breggan's widow, and a sister, Mary Joy Breggan.

DISPLAY OF BUTTERFLIES

A collection of moths and butterflies gathered by members of the St. Louis Entomological Club, has been placed on display at the Public Library to remain throughout the month. Included in the exhibit are specimens from India, Java and South America.

$12.75

Smoker With Two Pedestals

The so-called tired business man is wont to be restless. He lounges in one place and then another; unusually leaving a trail of cigar or cigarette ashes in his wake. In the name of tidiness give him this Smoker with detachable pedestals which he can carry from room to room. Priced at

Console Table

A Table with a definite character that fits admirably beneath a mirror or below a tapestry in the hall. Very handsome with its mahogany veneered top and its ornamental carving and understretcher. Well made, too. Priced at $9.75

Substantial Cedar Chest

Cedar Chests are the bane of moths. They steer clear of them because the aromatic cedar seems to irritate their noses or something. Anyway Cedar Chests and moths just don't "click" and you are doing someone a favor when you tender one as a gift. This one is 33 inches long. Priced at

Hexagonal-Top Occasional Table

You hear much in decorative parlance of "occasional" Tables. Surely a well chosen word because a table of this kind just seems to fit in and complete a group as nothing else can. This one with a six-sided top is 24 inches across. Finished in walnut. Priced at $11.75

Revolving Book Table

The top of this little Table holds books. It goes farther than that; it spins around at the touch of your finger, thus placing your favorite book at your finger tips. It is well made, too, and can be procured in either walnut or mahogany finish. Priced at $9.00

Large Occasional Chair

The men who built this Chair had an ideal behind them. They wanted to produce a Chair that was at once an attractive piece of furniture and an out-of-the-ordinary value. That they succeeded is attested by the favor which it has met. Covered in moquette. Priced

$11.75

Luxurious Coxwell Chair

A Lounging Chair in every sense of the word. Deep seat, inclined at just the right angle. Sloping back. Wide arms gracefully sweeping into the back. Covered in a choice of three covers of moquette with mohair arms trimmed with fringe and velour outside seat and back. Priced

$24.50

Small Maple Tables

Maple furniture, how bright and cheery looking it is; how it seems to express the prim, spic-and-span qualities of our Puritan ancestors. The little End Table in solid maple, is priced at.....

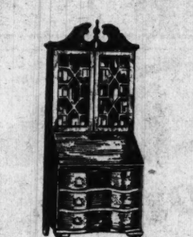
The Drop-leaf Table, familiarly known as the "Butterfly" Table, is of solid maple, an authentic reproduction, priced at....

$15.75

Solid Walnut Armchair

The Georgian influence is immediately apparent in this beautiful Chair. It is of solid walnut, carved; with gracefully curved arms. Covered in a very good tapestry and studded with antique brass nails. Well made and nicely tailored. Priced at

$29.50



Gov. Winthrop Secretary

A fine idea for a Christmas gift is this staunch Governor Winthrop Secretary. In mahogany veneer with three drawers and space for books and compartments for stationery. Specially priced.

Tuxedo Easy Chair

This Chair possesses a certain individuality that sets it apart from and beyond the general run of chairs. It is designed to be comfortable but the factor of beauty has been well maintained. Covered in combination wool mohair and moquette in a choice of patterns. Priced at $39.50

Leather Easy Chair

After all a Leather Chair supplies something to the decorative value of a room that you just cannot procure in any other way. Take for instance this big roomy Easy Chair. It is covered on all wearable parts in genuine leather, in either red or green. Loose cushion, button back. Priced at

$59.50

Comfortable Lounge Chair

Here is one of those great big generously proportioned Easy Chairs that invites you to relax and rest. Sink into its enveloping folds and forget the cares of business. Good quality interior construction in a choice of excellent tapestry covers. Priced at $182.50

A Wonderful Collection of Pewter

Pewter is in vogue . . . perhaps because it is so unobtrusively beautiful . . . perhaps because it contributes so much in decorative charm. Lammert's are always abreast of public preference and as a consequence you can find a splendid collection of pewter pieces in our Gift Shop. Tea sets, water pitchers, platters, bowls and trays are just some of the creations on display. Have you thought of Pewter as a gift piece?

3-Candle-Light Floor Lamp

We illustrate a Floor Lamp, one of the very new, smart Lamps that glow softly in the Lamp Shop. It is styled in the newest mode. It has a three-candle light fixture, each with a separate pull chain. It is complete with a tailored silk shade. Priced at

$29.75

Brass Bridge Lamp Complete

A Bridge Lamp of brass with a bronze finish. Good looking with its extended arm. It comes complete with a variety of shades in hexagon shape; some shades with Godey prints, others with hunting scenes with Dickens' characters, and still others with quaint and original motifs. Priced complete, at $12.00

2 Light Table Lamp

A Lamp that really belies its low price. It looks like a much more expensive Lamp with its rich bronze or antique brass finish. Has a two-candle-light fixture, each with a separate pull chain. Complete with shades to harmonize in a choice of colors. Priced at

$17.50

ANOTHER CHAIN STORE SEEKS SITE ON KINGSHIGHWAY

Reported Negotiating Between Delmar and Easton Where Sears, Roebuck Is Now Operating.

1,000,000 DEAL ON OTHER PROPERTY

Seven-Story Building at 1723 Locust, Tramore Castle Apartments and a House Affected.

By BERRY MOORE.

Negotiations for investment property were of broader scope and on more aggressive basis the last week with a well-defined demand for holdings in both the business and residential parts of the city. Offers for west end business corners were a feature, Kingshighway corners north of Delmar boulevard being in urgent demand, according to real estate men.

A report was persistent that a chain store concern of national importance had entered into negotiations for a corner on this thoroughfare, between Delmar boulevard and Easton avenue, with plans being made for a department store on a complehensive scale. The renewed demand for sites on this thoroughfare for chain store units undoubtedly has been inspired by the success of the Sears-Roebuck department store on the east side of Kingshighway, south of Easton, established there less than two years ago at the instance of the Franciscus Realty Co.

Downtown Firms Seek Sites.

The Union House Furnishing Co. has concluded negotiations for a building under construction on the south side of Delmar boulevard west of Skinker road. Other large downtown retail concerns, it is understood, are dickering for sites for branches on this thoroughfare, which with the completion of the Wabash viaduct and the new Wabash station at Hodiamont avenue, has taken on new life.

A triangular operation involving a seven-story building at 1723 Locust street, the Tramore Castle apartments, recently completed at 4525 Lindell boulevard, and a residential structure at 3733 Washington boulevard, with a total reported value of approximately $1,000,000, was concluded during the week by Victor H. Rhodes, real estate agent and building contractor.

Rhodes Heads Holding Company.

The names of the principals in the deal are withheld pending the forming of a holding company headed by Rhodes. The Locust street building, which has a frontage of 75 feet with a depth of 150 feet, received a valuation of $75,000, including the site. It is equipped with elevators, vaults and sprinkler system. Construction is fireproof. The entire building is occupied under long lease by the Lincoln Warehouse Co. It was owned by Edward A. Lake, who was represented in the negotiations by Rhodes.

The Tramore Castle apartments were owned by Joseph W. Kopman, who was represented by Rhodes. It is an 11-story structure with an attached garage, the roof of which is covered with a Venetian garden with wading pool and fountains. Across the rear of the premises is a pergola available for parties.

Rhodes has been an important factor in the real estate and building field for several years, the Winston Churchill apartments at 5475 Cabanne avenue being among other high class structures which he has erected.

Long Term Leases Announced.

Long term leases in both the downtown and uptown business centers were announced. The most important were made for Olive street and Vandeventer avenue corners. Details of a 20-year lease involving the Republic building which was the feature of the week and which was negotiated by Martin & Brettt, are given elsewhere.

CLAYNORTH PLACE DEALS BY LEGRAND JONES, INC.

LeGrand Jones, Inc., reports the following sales: Five-room bungalow, Auburn avenue, near North and South Road, for Sylvester Raftery to J. Smith; lot in Claynorth place for Sylvester Raftery to Frank Siteman. Claynorth place is a subdivision situated at the southwest corner of Clayton and North and South Roads. Thirty bungalows have already been built and sold in this subdivision.

Joins Hauer-Lustkandl Staff.

Otto Truebe, who has been associated for the last 10 years with several prominent real estate firms, has joined the sales staff of the Hauer-Lustkandl Realty Co., which is engaged in a general real estate and insurance business in South and Southwest St. Louis. He will be located at their downtown office, 806 Chestnut street.

BRIDGE DEAL INDICATES NEW WASHINGTON AVENUE

Retail Business Is Expected to Feel Stimulus Resulting From Opening Eads Upper Deck to Free Traffic.

A new Washington avenue in the region adjoining the Mississippi River is in prospect through the proposal for the opening of Eads Bridge upper deck as a free highway to vehicles and pedestrians. This plan, as has been told, is part of the program now embodied in a proposed ordinance for use of the Municipal Bridge railroad deck by the Terminal Association.

Discussion of the proposal has led to a new interest in realty in this section of the retail district.

Since its opening in the horse car days of 1874, the owners of Eads Bridge have collected a nickel toll from every person walking across it, and various sums from occupants of vehicles. A toll for street car passengers is part of the fare they pay, and this apparently will continue, as it is contemplated that the existing street car arrangements shall be maintained.

The opening of the Municipal Bridge free highway diverted much automobile traffic which had previously gone over Washington avenue. The Municipal Bridge will do for those who are crossing the river on extended trips or pleasure rides, but persons in a hurry to get from the business section of St Louis to the business center of East St. Louis can hardly spare the time for this roundabout route. The present toll burden tends to limit the number of such crossings.

With the toll removed, no one can doubt that the traffic in both directions will be greatly increased and that retail business will feel the stimulus resulting. Not only will many persons who now use the Municipal Bridge use the more centrally located Eads Bridge, but some traffic which now goes to McKinley Bridge and the new Chain of Rocks bridge, toll structures, will seek the new free gateway.

Incidentally, traffic congestion may be expected, and the need of a Third street super-highway will be tested.

5092 WESTMINSTER PLACE SOLD TO JOHN J. NANGLE

Albert T. Terry & Co. have closed contracts for sale of the residence at 5092 Westminster place, the home of Harrison Hoblizelle, vice president of the General Steel Castings Co., to John J. Nangle, vice president of the Lynton T. Block Insurance Agency. The house has 10 rooms, three bathrooms, hot-water heat, hardwood floors, and garage for two cars, on a lot 50x150 feet. Nangle intends to occupy it at once.

LOWE & CAMPBELL RENEW LEASE ON PINE STREET

Lowe & Campbell, dealers in athletic goods, have just extended their lease on the premises they now occupy at 1127-1129 Pine street for a period considerably longer than the term of the lease just expiring.

Local Manager Reber says the lengthening of the term of the lease is evidence of his confidence in the future importance of this section of the city.

S. CHARLES HARVEY HEADS COUNTY REALTY DEALERS

S. Charles Harvey of Clayton was unanimously elected president of the St. Louis County Real Estate Board at its regular meeting at the city hall in Clayton. Harvey succeeds J. R. Thursby of Kirkwood. Other officers elected were Conrad Reinemer, Overland, and Enno Kraehe, Webster Groves, vice presidents; William P. Morgan Jr., University City, secretary and treasurer. Three directors are Edward F. Wilson, Webster Groves; Homer N. Lloyd, Clayton, and B. Cordell Stevens, Clayton.

All those attending the meeting were enthusiastic about 1930 prospects in St. Louis County. Speakers pointed out that nearly $2,000,000 of the $10,000,000 county road bond fund had been expended in 1929, and that it was proposed to epend at least $4,000,000 more in 1930. This amount will be in addition to money to be expended by the State Highway Department and the funds produced by the road tax which are used for maintenance and repairs.

Leaflets were distributed stating that in the next five years there will be about $25,000,000 expended on roads in the county, while the State will expend $75,000,000 in Missouri.

REPUBLIC BLDG. IS LEASED BY J. S. WOLFF CO.

Clothing Firm Will Occupy Greater Part of Seventh and Olive Corner in 1931.

WILL RETAIN PRESENT QUARTERS

Stores Will Be Operated at Broadway and Washington, in Wellston and at Columbia, Mo.

Negotiations were concluded yesterday under which the J. S. Wolff Clothing Co., of which Walter V. Wolff is president, acquired a 20-year lease of the major portion of the Republic Building, covering approximately a quarter of a block at the southwest corner of Seventh and Olive streets. Martin & Breitt conducted the negotiations which have been pending for several months.

The lease shows renewed confidence in the future of Olive street as a retail center for men's clothes. It is especially noteworthy in that it does not become effective until April, 1931, and is for an unusually long term.

While the rental was not disclosed, it is understood to place the property on a new high investment basis.

The Wolff company, established in 1891 by the late J. S. Wolff, is one of the largest men's clothing stores in the local retail field, and has occupied extensive quarters for the last 20 years at the northwest corner of Broadway and Washington avenue. It is exclusive handler of Hart Schaffner & Marx clothes.

The Republic Building, a four-story structure of original design, has a frontage on Olive street of 135 feet and on Seventh street of 170 feet, with an alley on the west and on the south. It stands at one of the most valuable intersections of the downtown district.

Room for Expansion.

The Wolff company will occupy the entire second, third and fourth floors and approximately 60 feet of the first floor fronting on Olive street. The concern also has taken options on two additional stores on Olive street in this building to provide for further expansions with plans for ultimately occupying the entire building.

Plans of the Wolff Co. contemplate extensive alterations and improvements in the building, including installation of the modern fixtures. The new store will incorporate a group of men's shops into one big store.

The new building will be occupied in addition to the concern's present quarters at Broadway and Washington avenue. The Wolff Co. recently opened a store in Wellston and a College shop in Columbia, Mo.

Second Deal on Olive.

This is the second large lease closed on Olive street within the last 30 days, the other being that acquired by the Mississippi Valley Laclede State Trust Co. of the former quarters of the Liberty Central Trust Co. in the Liberty Central Trust building at the southwest corner of Broadway and Olive street and adjoining quarters on Seventh street. The Mississippi Valley-Merchants Laclede now occupies the ground floor quarters on the west side of Fourth street, extending from Pine to Olive street.

A large life insurance company recently made overtures looking to the purchase of the former National Bank of Commerce buildings at the southeast corner of Broadand Olive street, occupying the west half of this block, with an arcade extending through to Pine street. Plans of the insurance company contemplated occupying the entire first floor of these two buildings. As yet, however, nothing has developed in this direction.

Paved Road to Bel-Nor Open.

The first unit of the new concrete paving on Natural Bridge road has been completed and is open to traffic to the Bel-Nor subdivision. This road is being paved for eight miles to the junction with St. Charles rock road.

HEATH CLOSES 99-YEAR LEASE AT 3542 WASHINGTON BL.

The Chauncey P. Heath Real Estate Co. reports having closed a 99-year lease on property at 3542 Washington boulevard for the account of Mrs. Alice Sluder, who was represented by the Boyle Realty Co., to the H. H. Sims Construction Co., which is wrecking the building preparatory to erecting a three-story fireproof building which has been leased for 10 years to the Kissel-Skiles company, automobile rental agency.

The ground rent on the 99-year lease establishes a new ground value for this district, the rental being on the basis of approximately $2250 per foot.

The building which is to be erected on this property will be fireproof, with an automatic elevator and concrete roof to carry advertising signs. The property is 92 feet east of the east line of Grand avenue, on the south side of Washington. The building is to be completed by March 15, 1930.

MISSOURI BAG LEASES FIVE-STORY BUILDING

Location at 1206-12 North Main Street Obtained Through First National Co.

The Missouri Bag Co. has leased for a long term of years the five-story building located at 1206-12 North Main street, containing approximately 60,000 square feet, which building is owned by the Gerard B. Allen estate.

The building is equipped with sprinkler system, high-speed elevator, has light on four sides and trackage to accommodate three cars. It is situated on the Terminal Railway.

The Missouri Bag Co. began business about 34 years ago. its officers are Jacob Grodsky, president; Sam E. Grodsky, secretary-treasurer. All parties in this transaction were represented by the First National Co., in conjunction with Norman Neuhoff, attorney for the Allen estate.

Modern Engineering Co., manufacturers of oxygen, acetylene and electrical welding and cutting equipment, with general office and main plant at 3411 Pine street, have acquired lot fronting 25 feet on Pine boulevard by a depth of 156 feet immediately adjoining their plant on the west, which property will be used to expand its business.

In addition to the plant at 3411 Pine street, Modern Engineering Co. also has an acetylene gas plant at 831 South Theresa avenue. Direct factory control distributing stations are located in all principal cities. Officers and owners of the company are A. J. Fausek and I. F. Fausek. All parties in this transaction were represented by the First National Co.

New Grantwood Terrace Homes.

Mederacke Realty & Investment Co. reports the completion of four new homes and the starting of two more six-room homes in Grantwood Terrace, on Gravois road, just east of the historic Grant Farm. The company also reports the following sales: 4225-29 Fair avenue, the southwest corner of Miami street and Russell place, 4155 Miami street, 4140 Potomac street, 4144 Potomac street, 3623 Holt avenue and six lots in Oak Hill terrace.

OIL COMPANY LEASES SOUTH SIDE STATION

Wholesale Distribution Planned by Firm From 3538 South Kingshighway.

The Trackage Oil Co., distributors of petroleum products, of Minneapolis, has leased for a period of 10 years property owned by the Northampton Service Station Co., at 3538 South Kingshighway, through the Mercantile-Commerce Bank and Trust Co.

The location was chosen primarily because switch service was available and the possibility of a number of highways converging at this point. The opening of Tholozan avenue, which will provide easy access to the southern-eastern part of the city's manufacturing area, was also a factor, Karl T. Wiedemann and Earl D. Paulson compose the Trackage Oil Co.

The Northampton Service Station Co. is composed of Joseph A. Skillman, Wallace Skillman and Charles Duffield.

The Mercantile-Commerce Bank and Trust Co. represented all parties to the transaction.

BUSINESS LEASES MADE BY THE ISAAC T. COOK CO.

Isaac T. Cook Co. has leased a large part of the second floor of the building at 1408-12 Washington avenue to the Kirschman Millinery Co.

The Barack Shoe Co. has taken another lease on the three story and basement building at 1424 Washington avenue.

M. Davison Fur Co. has leased the remainder of the space on the fourth floor of the Sesame Building, at the northwest corner of Seventh and St. Charles streets.

The fourth floor of the building at 1517 Washington avenue has been leased to the Primo Pants Manufacturing Co.

All parties in these negotiations were represented by Isaac T. Cook Co.

SALE OF 521 WARREN AVENUE TO MR. AND MRS. L. B. HALE

William Keane Jr. has sold the seven-room residence of English architecture located at 521 Warren avenue, University Hills, for Mr. and Mrs. Harry Kaiser to Mr. and Mrs. Lero B. Hale. This modern residence is one of the newest dwellings in this section of University City. The sale price is reported to have been $30,000. Negotiations were handled by Harry J. Gannon.

Three Sunshine Homes Sold.

Yeckel-Earickson & Co., Inc., reports the sale of the following recently built Sunshine homes: 6143 Wanda avenue to Herman L. Beyerbach for $9975; 6127 Wanda avenue to Eugene L. Mueller for $9475; 4942 Upton street to John H. Frederick for $7650. Yeckel-Earickson recently sold 62 lots on the north and south sides of Upton street, between Gravois and Hampton, to the Norso Realty Co. and the entire 6100 block of Wanda to the Wandavard Realty Co. Both of these companies will improve the ground with Sunshine homes under the direct supervision of Yeckel-Earickson & Co., Inc. The name "Sunshine Homes" has been adopted by the company as its trade mark.

RECOVERY OF 39 PER CENT IN UTILITIES

Average of Industrial Stocks Up 21 Per Cent From Nov. 13 Low While Rails Have Improved 13 Per Cent in Period.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—The Evening Post in copyrighted weekly financial review, says:

"With improved confidence in the market have come material rallies in stock prices this week from the Nov. 13 bottoms. The extent of the recovery is plainly exhibited in the averages. Industrial stocks are up 30 points or 21 per cent from the lows of nearly a month ago. The rails are up 15 points or 13 per cent. Public utility shares which fell furtherest in the break have gained 62 points or 39 per cent. A visualization of where the market stands is helped by a comparison of present with previous stock price levels. The rally has cut down substantially the time elapsed since current values prevailed in the market previous to the October-November debacle. Industrial stocks now sell where they did in August, 1928, but we need go back only to April this year to find public utility shares as low as now and only to May to find the rails selling around present levels.

Drastic Credit Readjustment.

"Perhaps the most constructive development within the market in recent weeks has been the drastic adjustment in credits so strikingly portrayed by brokers loans. Since October 16 brokers' loans have been cut exactly in half. Then they were $6,800,000,000. Now $3,400,000,000. Here is basis for real faith in the technical position of the stock market. Stock prices have been reduced to their average levels of October, 1928, but brokers' loans have not been so low as now since November, 1927. Indeed loans are within $989,000,000 of the very lowest level established since publication of the reserve compilation which was $2,403,000,000 in May, 1926. But these loan figures do not tell the full story. In some respects the favorable adjustemnt has not been so dramatic as they portray. For a more complete survey of what has transpired we must review them in conjunction with member bank loans on securities.

Loan Accounts Compared.

"Without minimizing the unquestioned adjournments of a highly constructive character revealed in the brokers loan reductions it must be confessed that similar reductions have not been made at the banks. Brokers loans in the last seven successive weeks since Oct. 16 have shrunk $3,400,000,000 but the volume of member bank loans on securities stands almost precisely where it did on Oct. 16. What this means is that the liquidation in brokerage house loans has proceeded very much more rapidly than the liquidation in bank loans to customers. That the whole market situation in credits has been strengthened nobody will question but a reflection on these facts is important for the man who is seeking an unbiased conclusion rather than attempting to emphasize the bullish implications of recent changes.

Period of Currency Demand.

"From now on until Christmas day, the expanding requests for currency will tend to tighten money, but since the supply of funds so greatly exceeds the demand, no flurry in rates is anticipated. With the approach of January, the investment market is looking forward to a revival of interest in bonds and preferred stocks such as it has not witnessed in recent years. The condition of ease in money certainly differs from a year ago. Increasingly the market is exhibiting interest in the choicest investment vehicles. Short-term securities, municipals, governments and quality corporation bonds are returning to favor. The extent of the decline in money rates and its duration is, of course, a matter dependent on business itself and one on which no final conclusions can now be reached."

Chain Store Sales.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—November sales of 47 chain store systems and mail order houses aggregated $238,670,433, an increase of 21.78 per cent over November, 1928, when the sales for the same companies totaled $212,406,301. Combined sales for the same group for the 11 months totaled $804,017,637, compared with $721,952,953 for the corresponding period last year.

BULL MOVEMENT IN PIVOTAL SHARES; STEEL IS FEATURE

Sales for Short Session Total 3,002,560 Shares and Ticker Runs 52 Minutes After Close.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—Powerful bullish operations were pressed forward in toady's two hours of trading on the Stock Market, the first Saturday session in six weeks. For the first time in a fortnight trading swelled to such volume that the mechanical facilities became inadequate. Sales for the short session totaled 3,002,560 shares, and the ticker ran for 52 minutes after the close.

The movement centered in the pivotal shares which were somewhat sluggish during the upturn earlier in the week, and was attributed to the activity of strong banking interests. U. S. Steel was once more the leader, selling up nearly 12 points to 183½, compared to its recent low of 150, and closing at 182¾. Week-end profit-taking failed to check the advance until toward the close, when moderate recessions from the day's best levels were common.

The day's upturn appeared to have received its momentum from yesterday's bull rampage following the General Electric 4-for-1 split-up. News was rather colorless, although it contained reports of some acceleration of activity in automotive centers. Yesterday's money rates carried over the week-end, and report that $10,000,000 in gold left for France last night was calmly received. Wall street was somewhat surprised that no exports to London were reported, and would prefer to see its surplus yellow metal go to that center, where there is greater need for it.

Upturn in U. S. Steel.

The upturn in U. S. Steel was largely in reflection of the General Electric splitup. The Steel corporation is sponsored by the same banking interests. Steel shares generally were strong, however.

Western Electric was a buoyant feature, shooting up 21 points, then sliding back 8 from the top. It rallied following the announcement American Telephone interests and Halsey Stuart & Co. with Fox became trustees of certain Fox interests. The stock mounted 4½ points to 56¾, and closed at 53¾. International Combustion recently one of the market's weakest features, rallied a couple of points on rumors of a merger with a certain concern, but these rumors were denied.

Among shares gaining 5 to 10 points were Allied Chemical, American and Foreign Power, A. G. Byers, Westinghouse Electric, International Telephone, Ingersoll Rand, U. S. Industrial Alcohol, and Public Service. American Can, American Telephone, Montgomery Ward, Chrysler, Delaware & Hudson, Standard Brands, Paramount, Coleman, Liggett & Myers and Simmons were among shares closing 3 or 4 points.

General Electric lost 4 of yesterday's gain of nearly 22 points in profit taking, and American Power & Light, General Railway Signal, Columbia Graphophone, Stone & Webster, and U. S. Rubber closed off 2 or 3 points.

Sterling Exchange Holds.

Commodity markets eased. Wheat futures lost about 2 cents with weakness in the Buenos Aires market and a letup in foreign buying. Corn sagged ½ cent and more. Cotton futures were quiet but barely steady pending publication of the Government crop report Monday.

Foreign exchange was largely steady, with sterling cables holding at $4.85⅛, but showing signs of going higher.

CURB STOCKS MOVE IRREGULARLY HIGHER

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—Saturday trading was resumed on the New York Curb Exchange today for the first time since the early November break, with prices moving irregularly higher. The curb failed to follow the increased activity on the "big board," although a brisk demand developed for a few of the speculative leaders. The day's sales were 937,000 shares.

Electric Bond & Share retained its position as the leader of the public utility group by crossing 94 and then easing to 93¾ for a net gain of 2¾ on a turnover of nearly 100,000 shares. American & Foreign Power A each closed with net gains of five points or more, but most of the other active issues advanced a point or two.

Gulf Interstate Electric dropped 23 points on one sale to a new low at 34 and Standard Power & Light dropped seven.

Investment Trust, trading and holding corporation shares displayed a much firmer undertone, gains of a point or more being quite common in that group. Buying of the oils was rather selective in character, with a jump of nearly 10 points in Illinois Pipe Line and a gain of 3¾ in Gulf Oil as the features of that group.

Aluminum Co. of America soared 21 points in odd lot trading, and Aluminum Ltd. and Tubize Artificial Silk each ran up 10 points. Farmer declined to a new low level for the year.

WAGNER ELECTRIC LEADS QUIET LOCAL MARKET

Sales of This Issue Amount to About Twenty Per Cent of Week's Total Business — International Shoe Also Is Higher.

The St. Louis Stock Exchange held sessions on six days during the week just ended but aggregate transactions were but slightly in excess of the total for the preceding week of but three sessions.

Wagner Electric was about the only stock to show activity, ranging up 2¾ points on turnover of over 2300 shares. International Shoe moved up over 3 points on sales of 500 shares. Landis gained fractionally. On transactions of less than 600 shares St. Louis Public Service common sold up over a point and Consolidated Lead lost a point. Stix, Baer & Fuller moved up 2 points.

Boyd-Welsh advanced 3 points and Moloney Electric "A" closed ¾ point higher, while Coca Cola Bottling and Hamilton-Brown declined.

Among other shares recording gains were Brown Shoe, First National Bank, Mississippi Valley-Merchants State, Skouras, which rose 5 points, and Southwestern Bell preferred.

HELP WANTED—MEN, BOYS

I Offer You GROCERIES at Wholesale and a Wonderful Chance to Make

$15 A DAY Besides

Yes, I'll give you Groceries at rock-bottom wholesale prices and a chance to make $15 in a day besides! Just send me your name and I'll show you some money-saving facts that will amaze you. I'll show you how L. C. Van Hoosier, Illinois, quit a $23 a-week job, sold 6 of my proposition and shortly afterward reported earning $125 in a single week. Gustav Karnath, of Minnesota, says, "Making more money than before—from $18 to $60 a day." Of course people make more than others. But these big earnings of a few of my Representatives prove the wonderful opportunity. And today I offer you a proposition even better than I gave these men.

No Experience Necessary

With Groceries at wholesale and $15 a day in your pocket, you would have cash to pay your bills, to buy new clothes, a home, furnishings, or take pleasure trips. You positively don't need any capital. You don't need any experience. You get all the training you need. You learn to take any course of training. You can start right in making good money the very first day.

$15 a Day for Pleasant Work

All you do is call on your friends and my established customers in your locality and take care of their orders for any line of groceries and other Household Necessities. It is very pleasant work. Your own home will be your headquarters. You set your own hours and work as you please. All orders from my customers must go through Groceries. You alone get all the profits. In addition, I will supply you with Groceries, Toilet Goods and Household Necessities at our lowest, rock-bottom wholesale prices. Thus you have a splendid opportunity to save big money as well as to make big money.

Send No Money

If you want to you can keep your present job and start in spare time. Oscar Krege, of West Virginia, reports $18 profit in two and one-half hours' spare time. This shows the wonderful possibilities. So get the facts at once. You have everything to gain and nothing to lose. In addition to giving you Groceries at Wholesale and a chance to make $15 in a day, I also offer you a brand-new Ford Tudor Sedan as an extra bonus—in addition to your large cash profits. Here's a chance you can't afford to miss. Mail coupon now for this amazing new facts.

MAIL THIS

Albert Mills, Pres.,
American Products Co.,
4305 Monmouth Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio.
Send me, without cost or obligation, all the facts about your new plan whereby that offers Groceries at Wholesale and a chance to make $15 in a day besides. Also explain your generous Ford Sedan offer.

Lobby Investigating Committee Works Without Gloves and Gets Results Otherwise Unattainable

Justified Existence if Only in Putting Brakes on Special Representatives and Giving Public Insight Into Way Tariff Bills Are Made.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.

THE Caraway investigation of lobbying at the national capital has shocked some of our self-appointed keepers of the proprieties by what they have been pleased to term the "police court methods" of the Arkansas Senator and his colleagues. Journalistically and otherwise it has been said that the committee has been altogether too severe in its examination of witnesses.

Exactly the same complaints were made, and by the same class of critics, against the tactics of the Walsh Oil Investigating Committee and the Wheeler committee on the administration of the Department of Justice by Harry Daugherty. It is a sufficient reply, in those cases, that if it had not been for the work of the Walsh committee, Harry Sinclair and E. L. Doheny would now be enjoying the rich fruits of the corrupt oil transactions and Sinclair never would have gone to jail, and if it had not been for the revelations of the much-maligned Wheeler committee, Harry Daugherty would have been permitted to serve out his term as Attorney-General.

CARAWAY OF ARKANSAS.
From a caricature by Fitzpatrick

Softening the Hard-Boiled.

To those who hold up their hands in polite horror at the rough ways of the Senate's Lobby Investigating Committee, the answer is similar. Nobody who has watched the committee at work can imagine that the full story of the Bingham-Eyanson affair could have been obtained if the committee had been content to handle the Senator with the kid gloves of Senatorial courtesy, or that mild methods would have sufficed with such a witness as the hard-boiled J. A. Arnold.

But, say some of the critics, even though the committee may have been justified in the way it went after Bingham, Arnold, Grundy, Lydia Popkins et al, it strayed when it departed from the course laid out for it and summoned banker Kent down from New York.

Banker Kent, the critics said, had been engaged in no lobbying, but had merely indulged in the inalienable right of an American citizen to criticise his public servants. The committee in this instance did stretch its elastic powers pretty far, but it was not without warrant for so doing.

Banker Kent Curbed.

Banker Kent told a New York audience of bankers that the "inability of the Senate to function" on the tariff bill had a great deal to do with the stock market debacle. The committee decided that if Mr. Kent had occult knowledge of what was going on at the national capital, it would be interesting and instructive to hear where he got his information. He might have got it from one of the so-called "confidential news services" that pretend to reveal to business men, for a fee, the true inwardness of affairs at the seat of Government. Kent's testimony, therefore, might open up an illuminating line of inquiry into these "services," which, although not lobbying outfits in the strict sense of the word may fairly be presumed to have an indirect influence on legislation through the character of the "tips" distributed to trusting clients.

Moreover the constant attacks on the anti-high-tariff coalition were getting on the nerves of its members. They were properly sick and tired of hearing the uninformed criticism that the refusal of the Democrats and Western Republicans to accept the outrageously high industrial rates proposed by the Senate Finance Committee was a factor in the stock market crash.

Made an Example of Banker.

Senators are human. They decided—these members of the Caraway committee—to call banker Kent down from New York and, as Champ Clark used to say, "put him through a course of sprouts." It turned out that Banker Kent had no special source of information; he had merely echoed a sentiment that he had found among business men. He had been talking about the "psychology of the situation." He had not read the tariff bill or the record of the Senate proceedings upon it.

Though he had set himself up as a pundit on Congress, he knew very little about legislative processes. The sum of his contribution to a solution of the tariff tangle was essentially the same as Grundy's contribution — namely, that the Western Republicans, despite the sentiment of their states, should have knuckled under to the regular Republican Senators. It developed, in fine, that Banker Kent, a competent man no doubt, in his own line, had been indulging in loose talk about matters concerning which he knew next to nothing. Justified or not in calling Kent, the committee made of him what may prove to be a salutary example.

A First-Rate Service.

In throwing the spot light of national publicity on lobbying practices at the capital, the committee has performed a first-rate service. It has not shown any new condition, but it has dramatized and directed attention to an old condition that can hardly be exposed too often. A lobbyist says the dictionary, is a person who solicits a member of a legislature to influence his vote. The practice has existed since the beginning of the Republic—since the beginning, indeed, of the making of laws. It always will exist. In some of its aspects, it represents merely the citizen's right of petition to his chosen law—making officials. In other aspects it is pernicious. All that any set of investigators can do about lobbying is to hold up its various forms to the general view, so that the public and the servants of the public may be forewarned against insidious and antisocial methods. This the Caraway committee of the Senate has been trying to do, and for what it has accomplished and promises to accomplish in its further hearings, it deserves the thanks of the public.

Let us see, precisely, what it has done in a number of specific instances.

45 Cents on the Dollar.

The committee would have justified its existence if it had done nothing more than bring out the facts concerning the ineffable J. A. Arnold. In four years, as the committee showed, Arnold and his associates collected for various purposes more than $1,000,000 of which more than

WALL STREET AS WINSTON CHURCHILL SAW IT

Victims of Market Crash Lost Everything Save Hope, He Says

Thrift Abandoned for Speculation by Multitudes Who Gambled in Glittering Casino That Dwarfs Monte Carlo in Eyes of British Observer.

THIS is the fourth of ten articles by Winston Spencer Churchill, British statesman, on his impressions during a recent visit to the United States. Churchill, who was First Lord of the Admiralty at the beginning of the World War, was Chancellor of the Exchequer in the Conservative Cabinet which went out of office when Ramsay MacDonald became Prime Minister. In next Sunday's article he will write about California.

"THE dark, narrow, crooked lane leading to the river and the graveyard," to quote the local description of Wall street, has been during the last few years, the cynosure of American eyes. No social or political topic, no foreign or domestic event, not the presidential election, not even prohibition itself, has been a serious competitor. Everybody dabbled in stocks. Earned increments are sweet, but those unearned are sweeter. . . . It was said that 18,000,000 men and women were recently in the market, all eager to supplement the rewards of energetic toil by "easy money."

From every part of its enormous territories the American public followed the game. Horseracing, baseball, football, every form of sport or gambling ceded its place to a casino whose amplitude and splendors make Monte Carlo the meanest midget in Lilliput. No pages of the innumerable newspapers which cater to the public taste were more prominently or carefully printed, more eagerly and more earnestly studied, than those which recorded the daily operations of the stock markets. Brokers were present on every side. The more enterprising hotels installed complete apparatus of tape machine and telephone facilities; and provided entire suites where, amid the clack and rattle of tickers, expert clerks chalked up from minute to minute the latest quotations, not only from New York, but from other important exchanges.

All Classes in Market on Land and on Sea.

The housemaid who made your bed was a stockholder on margin. Workmen of every class, brain or hand; the chauffeur, the tram conductor, the railwayman, the waiter, all had their open accounts; and so very often had their wives. Even the Trans-Atlantic steamers have their floating migratory exchange where sea-sick "bulls" and "bears" contended amid the heaves and lurches. Even English people have been known to participate, from time to time, in this recreation.

A speculative public, numbering in the United States alone between 15,000,000 and 20,000,000 was of course, utterly novel. Nothing approaching it had ever been seen or dreamed of since the world began. Nothing could stop these enormous multitudes when they came in full of ardor. Nothing could even delay them when swept by panic they streamed out. Nevertheless the physical structure of the New York Stock Exchange has rules and regulations, which have been framed with such massive strength and strictness, that the perils of the situation were less formidable than would appear to European eyes.

London has never attempted to handle such masses. Our people have not the wealth; nor is our machinery adapted to such strains. The British workman bets and gambles on the turf, and finds his bookmaker, legal or illegal, never far away. But the American public concentrated upon the stock markets; and it was as easy to buy shares few or many on margin as it is to buy a pound of tea; and far easier than to buy a motor car or a gramophone upon the installment system.

Rules Save Brokers in Stock Hurricane.

The personal relation between broker and client, which is the staple of our old-world business, has in the United States been superceded by iron rules which, while they facilitated every form of speculation, have nevertheless enabled the brokers to weather, with scarcely a shipwreck, the greatest financial hurricane that ever blew. Before disparaging American methods, the English critic would do well to acquaint himself with the inherent probity and strength of the American speculative machine. It was not built to prevent crises, but to survive them.

The turbulent life-force of this community, its vast creative and productive effort and achievement, its sense of worlds to conquer, its unshakable faith in a golden future, led it naturally, perhaps inevitably, certainly uncontrollably, to anticipate the good days which are surely coming. "What?" they asked, "can stop the United States?" Has it not rather only just got on the move? Vast enterprises, acquiring momentum every day; science and organization smoothing and lighting the path; the very magnitude of every operation facilitating the next; a continent as raw material in the hands of industry; wealth abounding, and wealth diffused; millionaires multiplying; wages high and rising; 7,000,000 college students; 25,000,000 motor cars; food plentiful, clean and cheap; room to live; room to breathe; room to grow; room to kick; Socialism, a European delusion; politics an occasional pastime; the Constitution, a rock—Why should they fear? Forward. Headlong! All will be well.

Was it wonderful that a population thus circumstanced and thus inspired should outstrip advancing reality, should prefer speculation to thrift, should try to live a year or two ahead of time, should consume and cast away, and make again. A blunder! We can repair it. Hideous losses. We can make them good. Ruins! Watch us rebuild them.

To write thus of the solidity of the speculative apparatus, or of the buoyancy of the speculating public, must not lead to any under-rating of the disappointment and suffering which the recent violent collapse of values has brought to millions of American homes. The steady inflation of prices had gone on so long, that ordinary people with busy lives and short views had readily and comfortably accepted its continuance as one of the regular conditions of life.

The worker who has deposited his 25 per cent margin easily persuaded himself that he possessed 100 units of capital. He felt himself doing business on a large scale like the great capitalists. Everyone round him was doing it too. It all seemed so good and sound; and behind it lay the broad United States. And then—suddenly, the earth trembled, the chimney stacks fell crashing into the streets, and many dead and wounded were carried away.

Wives Said 'Sell Out at All Costs.'

Then, when it was assumed that all was over, came other shocks, heavier and heavier, and the fronts of buildings cracked or fell out, spreading havoc and panic in the crowded streets, and billions of capital value were annihilated in 10 days; and all the small stockholders were ruthlessly sold out. And the women said to their husbands 'Sell out at all costs,' 'Let it all go,' 'You have your job or your salary,' 'Let's keep the home.' And several million families decided to make the old car do for another year.

The consuming power was grievously weakened. In opulent Fifth avenue fur coats, already half-accepted by clients, came back in scores and dozens because they did not fit. Under my very window a gentleman cast himself down 15 stories and was dashed to pieces, causing a wild commotion, and the arrival of the fire brigade. Quite a number of persons had overbalanced themselves by accident in the same sort of way. A workman smoking his pipe on the girder of an unfinished building 400 feet above the ground, blocked the traffic of the street below, through the crowd, who thought he was a ruined capitalist, waited in a respectful and prudently withdrawn crescent for the final act. But all the time the steel skyscrapers stood. They were earthquake proof!

The Bankers Lecture on Virtue of Thrift.

And then the bankers arrived upon the scene, and lectured the unfortunates who had lost their money and preached the virtues of thrift and the immorality of speculation, and picked up the securities that were lying about the streets in baskets and even in wagons, and took them home for safety in their vaults. Grim!

Still, after all, no one can say the public was not warned. Many times had the Federal Reserve authorities denounced speculation and raised the rate to check it. Repeat-

Small Fighting Units Alone Interest Italy at London Navy Parley, Says Mussolini

Points to Fact Country Has Not Built Capital Ship in 17 Years—Cites Needs of Nation "Wedded to Sea."

By BENITO MUSSOLINI,
Premier of Italy.

(Copyright, 1929.)

ROME, Dec. 7.

THE conference on naval limitation which meets on Jan. 21, 1930, will discuss the most comprehensive scheme for the reduction of sea power ever proposed in modern times. The Washington conference of 1921 was limited to capital ships, while the coming conference is scheduled to take into consideration the limitations of all classes of naval crafts. Besides, there is to be a wide discussion on other subjects relating to sea forces, such as the abolition of submarines, the establishment of new sea codes, something about the freedom of the seas, immunity for food ships and the rights of neutrals. However, since the inviting power has not yet issued an agenda, premature discussion on the various topics which have so far been echoed from various parts of the world would be purely speculative. What we do know will be discussed is the limitation of the naval forces of the five great powers, Great Britain, Japan, France, United States and Italy. The fact that these five naval powers are meeting almost divides the conference itself into two categories, namely, the big sea power group and the small sea power group. Britain and the United States belong to the first group, Japan stands between one and the other, while Italy and France belong to the small sea powers.

These groups have decidedly different standards and needs. The Italian delegation will go to the conference ready to accept in principle the lowest figures, providing those equal those of any other continental Power.

MUSSOLINI.

The Conference is opening in a broad-minded spirit and we accept that spirit and in return show an equally receptive attitude in making effective efforts for a real reduction. An encouraging fact is that all the Powers have manifested their willingness to adhere to and thus help to reduce naval expenditures.

Italy Wedded to Sea.

It is enough to throw even an absent-minded glance on the map of the world to realize immediately that few lands are so intimately wedded to the sea as Italy. The Italian peninsula, with its two islands, Sicily and Sardinia, appears like a draw bridge thrown out over the sea from Europe to Africa. At least one fourth of the population of Italy lives on the sea-coast, including its greatest cities, Rome, Genoa, Leghorn, Naples, Palermo, Messina, Catania, Bari, Ancona, Venice, Trieste and Fiume, besides many small towns the names of which, meeting our eyes, awaken glorious associations with near-distant sea glory.

Such constant traditions maintained through thousands of years until today, have become deep-rooted and fatal reasons which persist unchanged through all other changed circumstances to present as essential reasons to the existence of modern Italy as a people and as a nation. The sea is not to us a thing "de luxe," but a stern reality and necessity.

Sea-power is the defense of the marine lines of communications. The size and nature of a nation's fleet is dependent on its necessity of keeping lanes through which its food and other necessities come and its commerce goes. In wartime, this is its most prime essential if it is to fight at all. For a small seapower the question of naval armaments is the question of its defense.

Dual Naval Purpose.

For Italy it is also specifically a question of keeping its coast free from assault and the necessity of maintaining contact with the colonies. Our Adriatic coast is subject to attack from the East, while our island coasts of Sicily and Sardinia create problems of coast defense of an important character. Italy besides depends to some extent on the importation of food-stuffs to maintain its population, so that its problem of sea power demands the closest attention.

Her problem, therefore, is different from that of either Great Britain or the United States. Reduction of its battleships or its cruisers or aircraft carriers would not solve the question of Italian sea defense. The fact is that Italy needs an entirely different navy from that of Great Britain or the United States, so that a mere reduction class for class does not arrive at a satisfactory settlement of Italy's maritime needs.

True, we do not have a far-flung empire rendering us riches or providing outlets for our surplus activities of commerce. Our few colonies are scattered from North Africa to the Eastern Mediterranean and thence to the Indian Ocean. What is much more is the fact that the vigorous vitality of our race disseminates our nationals to all corners of the world, creating for us an imperative duty of being able to protect them. For this widely scattered national effort we cannot afford large numbers of capital ships. It suits us better to have as many fighting units on the sea as possible, rather than a restricted number of big craft. Hence, we want especially small craft, and for that very reason Italian concern in capital ships is relatively less than it would be for Great Britain and the United States. We have not even used the faculty given us under the Washington Treaty to build two new battleships to bring our tonnage to the 175,000 tons allowed us by the Washington Treaties.

Limits by Categories.

It is possible for both the United States and Great Britain to effect a satisfactory limitation of their naval armament by fixing limits by categories. That is to say their navies are so large that in no matter what categories they reduce, they would still have a homogenous navy, well-balanced and able to fight in any emergency. If England should keep twenty capital ships as her limit, that number would be sufficiently large to allow her to keep a certain number in active service. The others could be held in reserve while still others would from time to time be laid up in dry-dock.

Italy does not possess one modern capital ship. Her last was constructed in 1912. Even though we are allowed a certain tonnage in capital ships, of what use is it to us? The luxury in which the capital ship has to live is too much for us to bear. According to the opinions of experts, one capital ship is of no effective use and two would not be sufficient enough since there would be the possibility of keeping one in drydock and one in reserve. Three would just give the opportunity of keeping one in active service. Experts assure us that the capital ship in this way would not give an adequate return for what is spent in

THE POST-DISPATCH PLATFORM

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles; that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare, never be satisfied with merely printing news, always be drastically independent, never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Trial By Jury.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IT is gratifying to discover that in your editorial of Dec. 1, "Trial by Jury on Trial," all four of the direct quotations of opinion are against substituting for the jury.

The Congressional Digest declares that jurors are not capable of judging facts in the complications of modern social and industrial organizations, that they are moved by prejudice and emotions, and that the jury is not scientific.

Complexity in the organizations of a society may affect the law, but it never disturbs the "rightness" or the "wrongness" with which the jury is concerned. In addition, the Judge, through his instructions, his power to strike out improper testimony, etc., furnishes the juror with all the necessary knowledge of the law.

A juror is no more a human being than a Judge and a jury is probably governed less by prejudice and emotions because of the opportunity of balance of opinion. Does a Judge not have greater opportunity to become prejudiced? And hath not a Judge eyes, ears and the other common traits?

Then, have we become so ultra-modern that we discard institutions because they are not scientific? Why not abolish the right of suffrage and appoint a commission to elect our governmental officials? The commission would be perfectly trained and comparatively inexpensive—scientific, in fact. Why not kill our quail with poison gas or with machine guns? That would be highly scientific. May heaven forbid that an American institution survive solely because it is scientific!

The real problem is delay in court procedure and subsequently a delay of justice. At this the New York Bar Commission should strike by recommending the removal of unnecessary details in judicial procedure which check the court's progress. But it will never obtain indorsement of a plan to abolish an honorable and well-established constitutional right of the people to decide the local rights and wrongs and of an individual to be tried by an unprejudiced jury of his peers-in-situation.

The Sunday Hunting Law.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IF I hunt on Sunday in Missouri, with permission from a farmer to hunt on his ground, and obey all game and bag laws, are the Sheriff and his deputies or the game warden and his deputies allowed to confiscate my gun and game?

This applies especially to Montgomery and Gasconade Counties, as the Sheriffs of said counties have undertaken to enforce this old blue law prohibiting hunting on Sunday.

What personal rights have I in this matter as a citizen of Missouri?

JOSEPH J. SCHNEIDER.

Section 3596 of the Missouri statutes classifies hunting on Sunday as a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of $50. It contains no provision for confiscating hunter's gun or game. When game laws are violated, it has been ruled that hunting or fishing equipment may be confiscated. It is doubtful, however, that this ruling could be applied to the Sunday law, which is not, strictly speaking, a game law. (Editor's note).

Mr. Garvin's Journalistic Ideal.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THERE are some witty journalists in England. At a dinner recently given in London in compliment to J. L. Garvin upon the completion of his 21 years of service as editor of the London Observer, Mr. Garvin said: "I have striven to make a newspaper impartial in its news, independent in its views and to give the public what they don't want." The editor of the Spectator said that Mr. Garvin had proved that to give the public what they do not want is to give them what they do want. In low-brow American speech this seems "good stuff."

Two New Verbs.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

KNOWING your interest in philology, the science of languages, I hasten to report to you two new verbs which I have discovered in the English vernacular.

The first is the transitive verb, "to rich up," and I submit two instances of its use, in case you wish to add it to your vocabulary. The first was the garage mechanic who was preparing my car for easier starting on cold mornings. Inventorying what he had done, he concluded with, "And I've riched up your carburetor." The second case occurred in a restaurant. One man had coffee with a tiny pitcher of cream; the other had milk. The coffee drinker, preferring it black, passed the cream over to his companion with the remark, "Rich up your milk with this."

My other find is the verb "to firm," but I regret my report must be incomplete, as I have discovered it so far only in the gerund. However, the source is unimpeachable: it is in the summary of a "finance laboratory," which says: "Commodity prices have been falling since July, but our forecast for December shows a decided firming."

STUDENT.

THE CASE AGAINST WAR.

This twentieth century will abolish war or it will witness the death of civilization. The pacifist, once a dreamer, is today the hard-boiled pragmatist. The poets, from Homer to Rudyard Kipling, have glorified war. Today the prophecy might be hazarded that Kipling will be remembered by posterity as the last of the imperialistic bards. Statesmen today may consecrate themselves to peace in eloquent terms of humanitarianism, but it is the economist, with his bill of costs, that is preaching the funeral sermon of war to a practical public opinion.

War, once the way of a nation to territory, power and wealth, is today the sure road to ruin. No nation can today afford war. The United States, incomparably the richest of the nations, cannot afford it. And it is an astonishing thing that the United States, which has no predatory design, which, in the words of Woodrow Wilson in his famous Mobile speech, "covets no neighbor's foot of soil," is today spending more money on its army and navy than any other nation in the world.

It is this destructive cost of maintaining an adequate military establishment in the name of preparedness that is inspiring the disarmament efforts of Mr. Hoover. The horrible waste of the nation's substance, which should be invested in the constructive arts and enterprises, is intolerable to the President's engineering mind.

The figures sustain his position. During the current fiscal year, he has told us in his message, our military expenditures will exceed $730,000,000, and "programs now authorized will carry it to still larger figures in future years."

This subject of the cost of war, from a world viewpoint, was searchingly discussed in a recent number of the Saturday Evening Post by Isaac Marcosson. These figures were given for the three-year period since 1927: The United States—For 1927-1928, $624,000,000; 1928-29, $684,700,000; for 1929-30 (estimated), $741,000,000. Great Britain 1927-28, $570,000,000; 1928-29, $551,000,000; 1929-30 (estimated), $547,000,000. France—1927-28, $461,000,000; 1928-29, $523,000,000; 1929-30 (estimated), $523,000,000. Italy—1927-28, $272,000,000; 1928-29, $244,000,000; 1929-30 (estimated), $234,000,000. Japan—For the three periods, $240,000,000, $239,000,000, $247,000,000.

The total expenditure for war of the five countries, including Russia, for the current fiscal year, is $2,640,000,000.

Mr. Marcosson remarks the fact that, on the day the Kellogg pact was signed there were 3,000,000 men under arms in Europe. He points out, too, that the annual costs of the military establishments of France, Italy, Poland, Belgium, Rumania, Spain, Germany, Czecho-Slovakia, Jugo-Slavia and Greece total $930,000,000, "or more than the cost of the combined upkeep of the navies of the United States, Great Britain and Japan." That those nations—many of them in straitened circumstances—can continue to carry such a burden is obviously impossible. Something must crack. What will crack is peace. What happened in 1914, from the same conditions of bristling preparedness, though in much smaller dimensions, must inevitably happen again. The logical outcome of such preparedness for war is war.

Mr. Hoover has visualized the number of miles of hard-surfaced roads that could be built with the $40,000,000 required to build a battleship. It costs $17,000,000 to build a 10,000-ton cruiser. Wherever one looks, on land or sea, he beholds the economic madness of war.

The irretrievable tragedy of war is necessarily as old as war itself. And emotion cannot be denied its part in the crusade to liberate humanity from the scourge of war. Nevertheless, emotion has failed to accomplish that emancipation. Now the economist assumes command. Not only war itself, but a state of mind that contemplates the possibility of war and consumes the substance of the people by the insatiable monster of preparedness must be abolished.

Money has the floor. Money is speaking, not only for the security of life, but for the comfort, well-being and progress of mankind and the ultimate vanquishing of poverty. That is the case against war.

The pacifists of the school of Hoover and MacDonald are today's official realists and practical statesmen.

GREAT WHITE FATHER STIMSON.

Secretary Stimson suffered the traditional fate of the peacemaker when he put his oar into the Russian-Chinese imbroglio. Mr. Stimson's diplomatic experience has been confined to telling backward and semi-barbarous people what to do. He was what might be called a wow in Nicaragua, where barefoot Indians regarded him with awe, and he made good in the Philippines, where he dealt with a polyglot mass of Orientals. Being the subject of his environment, he has the frame of mind of a man long accustomed to dealing with people who do not talk back. It is this which led him into the fatal error of adopting the Great White Father pose in his attitude toward Russia and China. That Russian note, bearing a sting in every line, will shock Mr. Stimson into the realization that he is now dealing with expert politicians instead of Igorots.

ICY WINGS.

Formation of ice on the wings of airplanes has been one of the dangers of aviation since distance flying began. Nearly every Atlantic flight has been menaced by it, and some of the aviators who disappeared on ocean attempts doubtless owe their fate to this peril. In all the perfection of safety devices, no means has been discovered to prevent the danger, although the problem has interested investigators almost as much as the fog menace. Experiments in applying grease preparations, oil and paraffin to the wings have been fruitless. Plans for heating the wings above freezing point also have failed.

In this connection it is interesting to note that the weight of the ice is not primarily what forces the plane down. Normally a plane before getting into the ice zone has flown for some distance and consumed enough fuel so the added weight does not necessarily exceed the plane's lifting power. The ice damages the wing fabric and twists the struts. Lumps of ice deposited unevenly on the wings affect the aerodynamic properties of the wings so that the plane becomes unmanageable.

Important knowledge along this line has just been contributed by the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics. Its tests have shown that ice is not deposited on the plane's wings in bitterly cold temperatures, but only at a few degrees below freezing, for much the same reason that streets take on a slippery coating only in temperatures near 32 degrees Fahrenheit. The committee's finding does not supply a preventive for this danger, but is useful in teaching the aviator how to avoid it. By thermometers, he may know the temperature of the air about him, and can fly higher or lower when he sees the danger signal of 31 degrees or thereabouts. Until the invention of a device for keeping ice from forming on the wings, the committee's finding will remain the most valuable contribution on the subject.

MR. HOOVER DODGES.

President Hoover's treatment of the tariff in his message suggests a man handling a piece of hot iron. He touches it gingerly. There is not a hint of that courageous and vigorous spirit with which a President should act in an issue so vital to the public welfare.

Mr. Hoover has been energetically and usefully active in stimulating business leaders to make special efforts to maintain prosperity, employment and living wages, but that is not more important than protecting the people from robbery under the forms of law by excessive tariff taxation.

The lusty fight of a group of independent Republicans allied with Democrats to check the greed of the tariff plunderbund, supported by a high-powered lobby, is in its crisis. It is a good fight. It is a fight against plundering privilege—privilege gone mad. If this fight fails, what good will it do to maintain prosperity if the enjoyment of it is limited to a favored few? What will it profit the wage earner if his wages are exhausted in paying tribute to the tariff barons?

There is a principle of justice involved in tariff taxation. The protective tariff is unjust because it benefits one class of citizens at the expense of all others, but that point has been yielded by the American people to build up industries, which will benefit the whole country, not to pile up huge profits for established industries.

Mr. Hoover repeats his message calling the extra session urging tariff on agricultural products to put the farmer on a level with the manufacturer. Farm tariffs have never been effective and the agricultural tariff taxes are intended to reconcile the farmer to the high protective tariffs levied on the commodities he has to buy. The President's recommendations of readjustments of the existing tariffs to meet the needs of a few industries not sufficiently protected opened the way for the general assault of the tariff profiteers whose greed Mr. Hoover does not rebuke.

Neither by word nor influence does Mr. Hoover encourage the fight for justice to the people or help to smash the vicious lobby working to put over the excessive demands of favored manufacturers.

Never was there a better opportunity offered a President to serve the people. Mr. Hoover apparently lacks the courage and the wise statesmanship to utilize it.

MISSOURI AND THE VARE CASE.

Both Senators Hawes and Patterson of Missouri, one a Democrat and the other a Republican, voted to reject William S. Vare, a record of which the State should be proud.

Like the Smith and Newberry cases, the Vare case was a test of our democracy. The American people have realized this so acutely that after the Senate condemned and then seated Newberry for corrupting the electorate in Michigan the people bowled over at the polls one by one those who betrayed their public trust until the list became a new charter of our faith. "Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty."

"THE SHAME OF THE CITIES."

The Detroit Bureau of Governmental Research, browsing over "a quaint and curious volume of forgotten lore," finds occasion for rejoicing in the moral progress we are making in municipal government. The particular volume is "The Shame of the Cities," written by Lincoln Steffens in 1904. It was then that the political boss, now a legend, was a burly, brutal reality. It was then that the utility magnate purchased his franchises at the city hall, which dispensed all manner of concessions, privileges and favors at whatever price could be exacted. Then, too, the liquor interests were affronting public decency and unconsciously creating a public sentiment which the Anti-Saloon League, with masterly skill, cultivated into a public hostility that, in the feverish mentality of the war, wrote the eighteenth amendment.

A comparison of present conditions with those of a quarter of a century ago warrants the Detroit Bureau's pronouncement that "graft and corruption are passing out of American municipal politics." Certainly the flagrant abuses which were then more or less meekly acquiesced in have disappeared. And it is permissible to observe that St. Louis, in the Circuit Attorneyship of the late Joseph W. Folk, played the leading part in the revolt that routed the corruptionists of silk-hatted and rough-necked varieties and moved municipal government to a higher moral level.

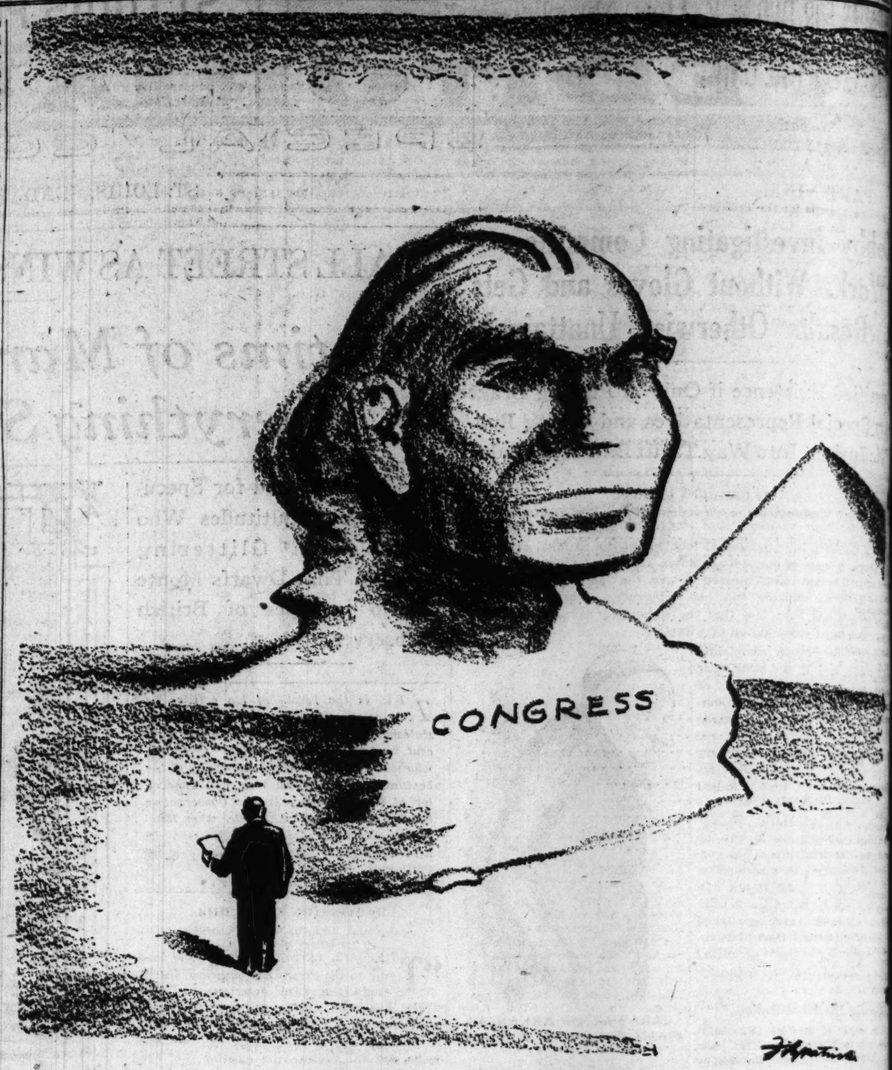
Mr. Steffens and all his fellow-muckrakers of that tumultuous Roosevelt era are now old, and their successors have not appeared. One may, however, indulge the fancy that another investigator will presently arrive to follow the trail which Steffens so capably pioneered and that he will find evidence enough of inefficiency and lack of official vision to jar the complacency of the Detroit Bureau's postulate.

PROFITS IN TOLL BRIDGES.

The State of Kentucky, having purchased three toll bridges and gone temporarily into the toll bridge business, is learning how lucrative a pursuit that may be. Two of the spans, in a year's time, have earned net profits of 24 per cent and 45 per cent, respectively, on the purchase price. The third bridge has been operated by the State for only seven months, but in that time it has returned 27 per cent of the outlay. Thus in a few years these three bridges will have paid for themselves and will be thrown open to free public use.

These large profits are a benefit to the people, since they go to make the bridges free. But flowing into private coffers, such profits would have been a detriment to the citizens and the traveling public. The toll bridge, it has been pointed out many times, is an archaic survival of the days when states were not so wealthy nor their functions so wide as at present. The states, and they are many, which permit the continued collection of exorbitant profits from what should be a free utility are neglecting a primary duty to their people. Kentucky is wise in ridding itself of the toll bridge nuisance as rapidly as possible.

A New Jersey woman has just paid a $1000 fine for shooting a member of a fife-and-drum corps. Now she is said to be saving up for a trip to Scotland, where bagpipers flourish.



MR. HOOVER: WELL, I'LL TRY THIS EAR.

Britain and Hoover's Foreign Policy

President's Armistice day address shows U. S. is becoming aware of loopholes in Kellogg pact, says English publication; positive provisions suggested by executive to supplement it; food ship plan has great appeal to Britain, but difficulty lies in enforcing it; Admiralty and people prefer navy to written agreement on blockades.

From the Manchester Guardian Weekly.

IT is already plain that the world owes a great debt to President Hoover for his address on Armistice day. That address did two things—it set forth the general American attitude toward the problems of world peace and it made, in a purely tentative way, a practical suggestion. America's attitude toward the problems of world peace differs from that of some other civilized countries chiefly by the vehemence with which she repudiates the idea of international sanctions—the idea, that is, that force may legitimately be used by the nations acting in concert to suppress a peace-breaker. The only occasion for which America retains the right to fight is in self-defense. But it is plain that, since America is the only judge of when the need to defend herself has arisen, there is still a dangerous ambiguity as to what she would regard as a threat sufficiently menacing to justify a war of self-defense.

This might, indeed, be called the gap in the Kellogg pact, which otherwise rules out wars absolutely. The gap is a large one (since all countries have always claimed to be fighting in self-defense), but there has been something like a conspiracy of silence in the matter.

One of the most important things in President Hoover's address is that it shows that the American Government is becoming more clearly aware of the deficiencies of the Kellogg pact as the instrument of organized peace. It needs to be supplemented, as President Hoover says it will be supplemented, by positive provisions for the pacific settlement of all disputes—by the extension of arbitral treaties with other states and by the formulation of an authoritative system of international law.

Along these lines of development there is no necessary distinction between the United States and members of the League of Nations. So far as procedure for the pacific settlement of disputes is concerned, America and the League can march hand in hand. The farther and the more effectively this procedure is carried the smaller will become the gap in the Kellogg pact.

In his general statement of the American position, President Hoover showed great wisdom, deep humanity and a keen sense of practical realities. So rare a combination may not only place his address among the documents of history, but will give Europe a juster and friendlier appreciation of the American point of view. That is all the more probable since the general trend of opinion, certainly in this country and perhaps in Europe as a whole, has been away from the ideas of an international police, sanctions and the other objects of American distrust. On both sides of the Atlantic the tendency has latterly been to concentrate rather upon the development of law and the habit of legal and arbitral settlement as the only effective safeguard of peace. If these things fail both pact and Covenant will have failed, and the question whether the ensuing war is "public" or "private," "aggressive" or "defensive" may become of very minor importance. Nevertheless such distinctions must be drawn so long as the possibility of war remains, and so long as we remain pledged to the Covenant of the League, which discriminates between an aggressor state and its victim.

But how, in the light of such considerations, are we to deal with President Hoover's practical proposal for treating food ships in time of war as absolutely immune from attack or seizure? So far as the League is concerned the difficulty is obvious since the right of blockade is its chief instrument of coercion against an aggressor state. If President Hoover's proposal ever gets so far as to be made the subject of international agreement, either there would have to be reservations on this point or the Covenant of the League would have to be amended. Until that point is reached the difficulty appears to be somewhat academic.

President Hoover lays chief emphasis on the humanitarian aspect of his proposal—the removal of "starvation of women and children from the weapons of warfare." But the humanitarian appeal is not so strong as it seems. Peaceful blockade may be at least more humane than armed invasion. Moreover, attempts to humanize war have failed in the past, and the probabilities are that wars of the future will become not less but more ghastly in their instruments and effects. There can be, in the nature of the case, no superior power capable of enforcing rules of warfare upon a state which sees in their infringement its one hope of safety. The last argument, it may be said, knocks the bottom out of President Hoover's proposal, since if there can be no guarantee that a rule of immunity for food ships would be observed it would be foolish to act (and more especially to disarm) as though its observance could be guaranteed. That certainly raises the crucial problem.

So far as this country is concerned, nothing could suit us better than a guarantee that our food supplies would be safe even in the grimmest war. Not even the Admiralty could deny that. All that the Admiralty can and does say is that it prefers the protection of the royal navy to any written agreement. And it calls in witness the German submarine blockade during the World War. But in actual fact it was the German submarine's activities, inhuman and illegal as they were, which brought America into the war and, if they did not convert defeat into victory, at least made victory sure. Could we know in a future war that if any state interfered with our food supplies from America we should have America's armed support?

Great Britain and America together could guarantee the immunity of food ships across the Atlantic, in war as in peace; they could supply the "sanctions" without which a rule of immunity would be almost worthless. But it is hardly to be supposed that this is at all what President Hoover has in mind. His proposal is one which if carried through would benefit no country so greatly as Great Britain, but it is not easy yet to see the best means of making it effective.

WASHINGTON DAY BY DAY

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.

GEORGE H. CARTER, the Public Printer, is attempting to solve a problem for the high schools and colleges of the country which have courses in political science. He has compiled and offered for sale at cost, which is small, the more important debates in the Senate and House over a period of years. These are official reprints from the Congressional Record.

"During the school and college term," Mr. Carter says, "my office is quite deluged at times with inquiries from students, instructors and directors of debating teams concerning literature on the various subjects for debate in use at the time.

"In order to meet these inquiries without resort to long typewritten lists and explanatory letters, we have endeavored to compile a new list of the publications available at the date of issue on various subjects which are, have been and probably will be in the future used as subjects for debate. There is a wealth of Government material on these subjects, both statistical and critical, while speeches made in Congress from time to time furnish abundant material for debaters."

A READER of this column writes to ask how President Hoover keeps in touch with the news and editorial opinion of the newspapers of the country.

Mr. Hoover has the morning papers delivered to the residential section of the White House. He reads the New York morning papers, a Baltimore newspaper and the two Washington morning papers before he goes to his office. By noon every day he has before him a digest of other newspapers throughout the country, and he manages somehow to scan that summary every day. If he is too busy he takes it home with him to read at night. The afternoon papers in Washington are placed on his desk as soon as they are received.

MR. HOOVER is an expert at reading newspapers. He reads with the facility of a trained newspaper man, rapidly absorbing all the essentials of news and editorial pages. Within a very few minutes he can go through a paper and not have missed anything about which he ought to know.

In Mr. Hoover's case, news and editorial extracts which are critical or unfavorable are not withheld so that he sees only the rosy side. He will not stand for that. Frequently he prefers the hostile papers to those whose editorial reaction on any given topic he could almost outline in detail in advance.

The President's publicity sense has been a matter of extended comment. When he runs across an item which he thinks suggests something on which the White House might comment, he sees to it that Secretary Akerson has that bit of information to give newspaper men at the press sessions he holds twice daily.

How Mussolini Regards London Naval Parley

building her. The fact that Italy has refrained from building a capital ship for 17 years is a noteworthy protest against the great expense in construction and maintenance as well as to the fact that in order to obtain the maximum efficiency they must be accompanied by other craft as well as to have other capital ships replace them when withdrawn from active service.

To give a lesser Power certain limited tonnage in capital ships is to permit it something which is of scarce use. Probably it does not want to build capital ships. Why, therefore, should its available tonnage be alloted to capital ships? The hundred thousand tons we had at the time of the Washington treaty have been diminished. Italy would only build this heavy craft in case it was forced upon her by similar construction on the part of other nations.

Interest in Three Classes.

Of the five categories usually mentioned in connection with naval disarmament, Italy up to this time has been interested in only three—cruisers, destroyers and submarines. In the fifth category—aircraft carriers—we have none because our necessities until now are diverse. We need above all ships of medium tonnage, and this, too, for the maintenance of the homogenity of the fleet.

For a lesser sea Power, therefore, the fixing of any limitation should be on total tonnage. That is, the tonnage allotted should be its total tonnage, so that it can devote that tonnage to the building of the type of ships best fitted to its particular problems. Our tonnage limitations should be elastic enough to permit us to choose the type of ship we shall assign that tonnage.

The only outlet of Italy to the world is through the Strait of Gibraltar, because Gibraltar opens on the Atlantic, which is an ocean particularly indispensable to Italy for its supplies of raw material as well as on account of the fact that of the 10,000,000 Italians who live abroad, 7,000,000 live in the three Americas. The Straits of Gibraltar are just about eight miles wide and can be blocked by a very small force. In such an eventuality the very existence of the Italian nation would be at stake, that is to say, a people of 42,000,000. Those considerations create for Italy the necessity of possessing a navy which assures her an indispensable minimum of free navigation on the seas.

Lobby Investigators Work Without Gloves and Get Results

half represented the cost of collection. That is to say, for every dollar which an estate (hoping to get the estate tax repealed) or a corporation (hoping for a reduction of the corporation tax) or a Southern bank (hoping for an increase in the tariff) invested in any of Arnolds' organizations, it got, at the most, 45 cents worth of lobbying service. Except, perhaps, among the state legislators, whom he brought on free joy rides to Washington, to lobby for the repeal of the Federal estate tax and except among his associates in gathering funds, there should be general gratitude to the committee for putting Arnold on the grill.

$150,000 a Year Lobbyist.

The Committee deserves a vote of thanks, too, for bringing into the limelight the altogether delightful Col. John H. Carroll, the Missouri boy so to speak, who made good in a big way. Col. Carroll has fees from corporations aggregating more than $150,000. Becoming entranced with Col. Carroll's story of Queen Marie's trip over the United States, the committee did not probe so deeply into his manner of earning his big fees as it might otherwise have done. But his mode of procedure was fairly clear, nevertheless. It was, and is, the task of Col. Carroll to create a friendly atmosphere for his clients in the legislative and departmental halls of the capital.

When the need arises, one gathers, it is Col. Carroll's job to present the point of view of client in places where such presentation will be most effective. He does his work quietly and is seldom seen in the lobbies of the capitol. There was no evidence that Col. Carroll, during his long time in Washington, had resorted to the methods of "button-holing and lobbying around" that he had found distasteful years ago in Jefferson City.

Disarmed by Carroll's Candor.

If any sinister quality attached to the figure of Col. Carroll, he divested himself of it by his frankness in telling the names of the corporations he represented and how much each of them paid him. Whether Col. Carroll performed services warranting the payment of $150,000 a year was a question with which the committee did not concern itself deeply. His attitude, which the committee appeared to accept as its own view of the matter, was that if the corporations concerned wanted to employ him for fabulous fees, that was their look-out.

He established himself before the committee in the role of a genial, worldly-wise old man, whose pathway through life had been made pleasant by many friendships along the way and who wanted everybody to be as happy as he is.

Col. Carroll is unique. He is a charming Washington institution. Recognizing him as such, and completely disarmed by his candor, the committee accepted him at his own valuation and contented itself with spreading on the record the list of his clients and the amounts of his fees.

No witness who has been frank with the committee has been unduly punished. Like Col. Carroll, one of the sugar men, though he told a story of large expenditures to influence the action of Congress on the sugar tariff, escaped lightly.

Censure of Bingham.

Quite different was the experience of Senator Bingham of Connecticut, who, it was shown, employed an official of the Connecticut Manufacturers' Association as his secretary and tariff "tutor," and introduced him into secret meetings of the Senate Finance Committee. Bingham came before the lobby committee with an air of complete frankness, but his testimony opened him to the charge of evasion. Not until Eyanson, the quandem Secretary, came to the stand did the committee get the complete picture of the Eyanson incident. Because of his lack of entire frankness, the committee threw all notion of senatorial courtesy out of the window and fell on the unhappy Senator like a pack of wild cats. The examination resulted in the passage by the Senate of formal resolution of censure against Bingham.

The committee has done the country a good turn, not only by exposing lobbying methods, but by giving the public an insight into the manner in which tariff bills are made.

A flood of illumination came from the testimony of Joseph R. Grundy, head of the high tariff lobby in Washington for many years. This is to be said to Grundy's credit: He pays his own way and there is every reason to believe he is fully convinced of the justice of his cause.

Grundy aired his views with engaging frankness. He held that when a tariff bill was up for consideration, the "backward" states of the West and South should "talk darned small" and let the issues be settled by the industrial states, like Pennsylvania. In the Grundy political philosophy the donors of campaign funds to the Republican party should be repaid with tariff favors. Hence he has played for many years a dual role: he has been the G. O. P.'s best moneygetter among protected corporations, and he had been the head and front of the demand for a high tariff. "Grundyism" has passed into the political language of the day.

The committee has turned its searchlight on the high tariff sugar lobby and the low tariff sugar lobby, disclosing expenditures on both sides running into hundreds of thousands of dollars. Much of the money went for the creation of public sentiment by hired press agents. On the high tariff side, a single agency received $3000 a month for sending out propaganda to the newspapers in the guise of news stories. On the low-tariff side, there was revealed a "tariff defense fund," to which the grower of sugar in Cuba, including the National City Bank of New York, contributed. The Cuban Government came into the picture as a supporter of the low-tariff movement, and Col. Carroll was shown to have been employed at $4500 a month, to help sustain the present Machado regime in power in the island.

Col. Carroll is now in Cuba to get material for a report. He capped his triumph before the Investigating Committee when he told Senator Borah, in reply to the latter's request, that he would be delighted to let the Foreign Relations Committee have a copy of his report. So Col. Carroll is in Cuba not only for his client, the Cuba Co., of New York, but in a sense, as the agent of the Foreign Relations Committee! Truly he is sui generis.

The committee has flashed its light over a wide territory. It has disclosed a deal by which the corn sugar refiners agreed to stand for a high tariff on cane and beet sugar in return for support of legislation desired by the corn sugar interests. It has shown the late William Burgess, lobbyist for a high tariff on pottery, engaged in an effort to oust from his job a tariff commission expert, whose attitude toward the pottery tariff was too impartial to suit the industry. It has brought to light the building of fires under Southern Senators to compel them to vote for the high industrial rates of the tariff bill. It has given the public a glimpse of the activities of Congressional "lame ducks" who have settled down in Washington for the "practice of law." It has disclosed a delectable scheme hatched in one of the Arnold organizations to get fresh funds through the creation of a "Southern Republican Council."

Police court methods, perhaps. But the character of the exposures indicates that refined methods would have got nowhere. As it is, the committee has produced for the public enlightenment an excellent cross-section of lobbying activity in Washington. It has done, in this writer's opinion, a capital job.

edly Mr. Mellon declared the position unsafe, and counselled investments in bonds. The British Chancellor of the Exchequer, with the profound knowledge of the Treasury behind him, stigmatized the proceedings as "an orgy."

A certain financial counsellor whose firm advises the American public about the markets in much the same way as "Hotspur" tells our betting crowd about the turf, had the prescience, and what is more remarkable, the courage, to predict an imminent fall of at least 60 points in values. But all these warnings fell upon ears deaf to unwelcome tidings. The American public had certainly been cleaned out; but they cannot say that they had been hoodwinked.

I happened to be walking down Wall street at the worst moment of the panic, and a perfect stranger who recognized me invited me to enter the gallery of the Stock Exchange. I expected to see pandemonium; but the spectacle that met my eyes was one of surprising calm and orderliness. There are only 1200 members of the New York Stock Exchange, some of whom have paid over $400,000 for their seats. These gentlemen are precluded by the strictest rules from running, or raising their voices unduly. So there they were, walking to and fro like a slow motion picture of a disturbed ant heap, offering each other enormous blocks of securities at a third of their old prices, and half their present value, and for many minutes together finding no one strong enough to pick up the sure fortunes they were compelled to offer.

It was refreshing to exchange this scene of somber, and for the moment, almost helpless liquidation, for a window high in a Titanic building. The autumn afternoon was bright and clear, and the noble scene stretched to far horizons. Below lay the Hudson River, dotted with numerous tugs and shipping of all kinds, and traversed by the ocean steamers from all over the world moving in and out of the endless rows of docks. Beyond lay all the cities and workshops of the New Jersey shore, pouring out their clouds of smoke and steam. Around towered the mighty buildings of New York, with here and there glimpses far below of streets swarming with human life. No one who gazed on such a scene could doubt that the financial disaster, huge as it was, cruel as it was to thousands was only a passing episode in the march of a valiant and serviceable people who, by fierce experiment are hewing new paths for man, and showing to all nations much that they should attempt, and much that they should avoid.

My dear and Faithful Companion:

This letter deals with a very ticklish subject. It concerns the Christmas Gift you are going to select for me.

Last year you gave me a box of cigars, some screaming green aad yellow seat covers for the machine, and a red leather volume of Love Lyrics. The cigars broke Henry, onr office porter of his smoking habit, the seat covers have been a source of real enjoyment to Uncle Nolan, who is color blind, and the Love Lyrics went over in a large way with little Patricia.

This letter I'll admit is a trifle cruel, but I am determined to help you avoid your past mistakes with this key to the situation.

My Necktie rack is quite forlorn, my golf hose all are badly worn. My sweater size is thirty-eight. Matched irons wouldn't be hard to take. If you think I'm a good guy to have around, why not select a dressing gown? Here's an idea you'll think is great, give me a gift certificate.

I noticed countless things I'd like to have while browsing through Boyd's the other day. Boyd's, by the way, is my favorite store. Need I say more?

FRITZI SCHEFF'S SECOND DEBUT

How a One-Time Broadway Favorite Who Had Been on the Shelf for Twenty Years Has Successfully Started Her Career Again in the Same Role That Made Her Famous.

Fritzi Scheff in 1908.

As "The Mascot of the Troop" in "Mademoiselle Modiste."

Fritzi as she appears today.

NEW YORK.

IN A TOWN where yesterday's newspaper is classified as an early American antique most theatrical revivals excite about as much public interest as a new exhibit in the Chaldean room at the Metropolitan Museum. But now as always you never can tell. This is the sagest comment one can make on the return of Fritzi Scheff.

Where she has been all these twenty-odd years is something that a New Yorker doesn't think about. So far as he is concerned she has been on the shelf and it was a darned impertinent thing for her to hop down, shake off the dust and leap into the spotlight again just as if she had only been away for the week-end.

But Fritzi not only "came back," as the saying is, but she brought with her a type of musical show which had also been counted among the lost. In 1905 Victor Herbert's operetta, "Mademoiselle Modiste," was produced with many excursions, alarums, barrages of flowers and cheers from the gallery. It was a hit in every sense of the word and the person most responsible, aside from Victor Herbert himself, was a lithe, wasp-waisted girl with a face that has been said to resemble an "engaging and faintly malicious kitten."

Twenty-four years later the same scene was repeated. The theater was Jolson's Theater on Fifty-ninth street instead of the old Knickerbocker, but the operetta was the same and the bright particular star was the same old Fritzi—with waist a little more ample to suit modern style but just as "faintly malicious" in appearance as ever.

"MADEMOISELLE MODISTE" was restored to the boards by Milton Aborn, who suddenly was struck with the notion that New York might welcome a limited season of old style operettas with flowing, unsyncopated melodic lines and choruses which sang instead of doing tap dances. He started his venture. The Jolson Theater was hired and a Victor Herbert repertoire announced.

The first two productions were hardly noticed. Then "Mademoiselle Modiste" was announced with Fritzi Scheff in the title role. It was generally supposed that the reasoning behind this venture was based on the assumption that Fritzi would have a certain value as a novelty—enough, at any rate, to carry the show for a week.

The demeanor of the audience before the curtain went up tended to support that attitude. A few old-timers were there in search of their youth but most of the audience were animated by curiosity. Fritzi's first entrance gave everybody a distinct shock. Her self-assurance was that of a reigning favorite and her voice, though slightly worn in its upper register, was used so intelligently and supported by such thorough-going musicianship that an unGrudging cheer went up. A little while later when she sang "Kiss Me Again"—the song which was so closely associated with her during her former regnancy, her success was complete.

As Marguerite in "Faust."

"Mademoiselle Modiste" stayed on for weeks and was then transferred to the Casino Theater, where it continued to draw audiences purely on its merits. A road tour was then planned and Fritzi Scheff, at an indeterminate age, is an established Broadway personage who talks of her "future" like any up-and-coming girl who is making good in show business.

Few of the persons who have been hearing the revived Fritzi realize that her career in America began when the century was young—long before the Big War, before Hot Jazz, before the Movies moved into Burmese palaces—and at the Metropolitan Opera House, of all places.

Fritzi was brought to America by Maurice Grau. As director of the Metropolitan he was making one of his periodic visits to Europe when he saw her playing an infinitesimal bit in the opera at Munich. She plainly had that indescribable ferment of personality which Madame Elinor Glyn later wrote about with much profit. Mr. Grau signed her up, and from that time forth she belonged to the New World.

Fritzi joined the Metropolitan forces next season and almost immediately became known as the "Little Devil," both to the audiences and to her fellow artists. She was the season's most volatile Musetta in Puccini's "La Boheme," and many an old gaffer will remember the third act of that sentimental opera in connection with the way Fritzi Scheff flung her shoe at the baritone playing Marcello.

During her stay at the Metropolitan she sang many roles, among them Nedda in "Pagliacci," Marguerite in "Faust," Zerlina in "Don Giovanni" and both the title role and Micaela in "Carmen." Eventually Charles Dillingham thought that she was wasting her time with such academic stuff and took steps to introduce her to the works of an up-to-the-minute composer named Victor Herbert.

IT IS said that Fritzi was apathetic to these offers until she glanced at one of Herbert's scores. After that she unhesitatingly put grand opera among her memories.

Her first two Victor Herbert roles were only negligible successes. Then came "Mademoiselle Modiste," which double-riveted the fame of Victor Herbert, established Fritzi as a comic opera star and made "Kiss Me Again" an American folk song. Strangely enough, Fritzi was dead against that song right up to the time the show opened in New York. At the rehearsals she expressed the greatest enthusiasm for the rest of the operetta, but wanted "Kiss Me Again" taken out. "It's too low," she said. "I can't sing it. Am I a 'cello?"

Messrs. Herbert, Blossom, the lyric writer, and Dillingham, the producer, yielded temporarily and allowed the song to be cut out during the road trial. But before the New York opening they insisted so strongly on its being restored that she in turn yielded to them. From the very first the house went mad about the song. It expressed the sentiment of that period with a languorous effectiveness that no other composer could touch. The song stayed in for good and Fritzi must have learned to like it.

"Mademoiselle Modiste" ran for three years, a record for those days, and for these, too, when it comes to that, despite "Abie's Irish Rose" and "Lightnin'." Following other mildly successful Herbert operas Fritzi Scheff went over to the Schuberts and did a season of Gilbert and Sullivan operas. Then she started into that decline which was gradual enough as such things go, but which carried her almost immediately out of the Broadway consciousness.

From time to time the New York theatergoers heard rumors of their old favorite playing bits in legitimate plays, trouping in vaudeville, singing in picture houses and what not. Then a complete fadeout.

BERLIN.

Thank thee, O Euclid, for prisms . . .
Pyramided into the apotheosis of groceries,
let us be devout to prunes:

HUS sang the poet Walter Lowenfels in his lyrical narrative, "Finale of Seem," published early this year, thus preparing Berlin playgoers for his forthcoming musical drama, "U. S. A. mit Musik," which is to be produced this season.

That is, almost preparing them. A glance over the manuscript of the production and the absolute secrecy maintained by Mr. Lowenfels when asked about the music seem to point to something more than the artistic sensation the critics are waiting for. However, as one of his fellow writers wrote of Mr. Lowenfels (and a nice pun he turned, too), "let him who is guiltless throw the first Stein."

In "U. S. A. mit Musik" the author vents the spleen of a soul that has been brooding since the massacre of the nonunion miners at Herrin, Illinois, in 1922. It seems, according to his understanding of it, that 16 of the victims were buried unidentified, and on the manifest injustice of this he has based a dramatic tirade against America and Herrin, representing the former as a land of Mammon, with vulgarity and materiality run mad, and the latter in a way that will make the merchants and the Chamber of Commerce of Herrin wince.

Most of the no-brain national foibles of the past decade stalk through the piece, including the fuss over the man trapped in a cave, the Ku Klux Klan and bobbed-haired bandits. Queerly, bootlegging, hijacking and lynching are ignored, but the play contains enough jeers to make the reader wonder whither America is skyrocketing.

Several German critics have said that Mr. Lowenfels has stripped the coverings from the basic futility and shallowness of American life. Others are of the opinion that the young poet has started a crusade almost comparable to that inspired by Harriet Beecher Stowe with "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

A Mr. Zero, who devotes his time to collecting funds to bury the 16 unidentified dead properly, so that they may achieve social standing in the other world, is the main character. Smartly enough, Mr. Zero makes his appeals for funds wherever the emotions of the nation are centered.

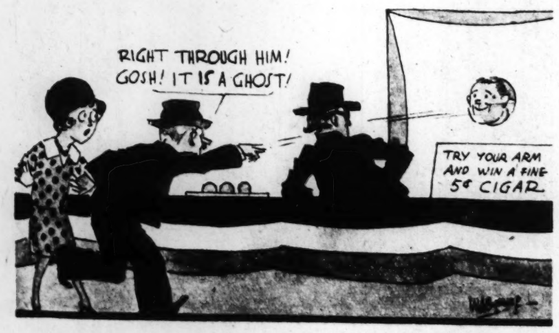
The first act opens in "Kinneltown," Kentucky, where efforts are being made to rescue "Arthur Kinnel," who has been entombed in a cave. This naturally recalls the Floyd Collins affair.

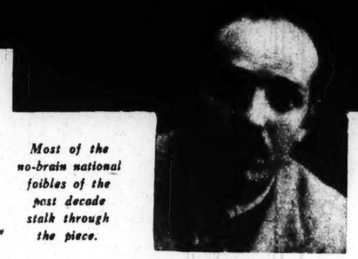
For the benefit of the crowds attracted to the scene, a vast midway of amusements and sideshows has been provided. It seems that Mr. Zero has obtained the services of one of the Herrin dead (or, rather, his ghost) to push his face through a hole in a blanket for the crowds to heave baseballs at. "Henry" is a man who has come over from Evansville to watch the rescue work.

The dialogue follows:

Henry: I'd like you to meet my daughter, Mabel, Mr. Zero.

Mabel: Father has told me some wonderful things about you; I'm so glad to meet you.





Most of the no-brain national foibles of the past decade stalk through the piece.

Walter Lowenfels, the young poet who was raised to be a butter merchant.

Mr. Zero: That's very nice of you, Miss Mabel.

Henry (interrupting): What were you going to say, Mr. Zero, about your men being ghosts?

Mabel: Ghosts! Oh, Mr. Zero—do tell us about ghosts.

Mr. Zero: I'm afraid it's not very pleasant. They're the ghosts of the men who were killed in Herrin a few years ago. They got hold of me to see if I couldn't get them decent burial.

Mabel: But are they real ghosts?

Mr. Zero: Your father can tell you—he handed one a dollar a few minutes ago.

Henry: The fellow I hit with the baseball? My God, was he a ghost?

Mr. Zero: So he says. Here, try it again. If you can make a ball bounce off any of those fellows' heads you're Emperor of Russia! It can't be done.

Henry: But I hit one of them!

Mr. Zero: Try again and watch closely. You didn't hit him. Your baseball passed right through him.

Henry: But I handed him a dollar!

Mr. Zero: Ectoplasm. It couldn't hold onto a dollar any more than you could hold a breeze. I picked up that dollar. I always do.

Henry tosses another ball and it passes through the target's face. He is convinced and goes away frightened. But Mabel is ga-ga over the fascinating ghost story and wants to hear more. Mr. Zero, not unattracted by the gal, goes on.

Mr. Zero: I'd been thinking about it a good deal. It got me nervous, those 16 wingless souls flopping around. I knew I had to do something. One day—it was broad daylight—in Boston, in a one-arm lunch a man sat down in a chair next to me. He was a ghost.

Mabel: Weren't you terribly frightened?

Mr. Zero: I was numb at first. But I got used to the idea. It seems that these sixteen were being ritzed by all the other dead. They couldn't get into decent society in heaven. They were worse off dead than alive. They got together and decided that the only thing to do was to get buried again, decently. They sent this ghost to see me. He wanted me to start a campaign, rouse up the country—a sort of Ghost Week—and have them buried decently.

At this point the announcer (the whole rescue seems to be conducted along the lines of the master of ceremonies show) pops up on a platform to explain that, "Folks, the Happiness Boys have resigned. Pending a thorough investigation, work on the Kinnel rescue has been suspended."

Cheer Leader: All together, folks: One, two—Happiness Boys—rah—rah—rah.

Happiness Boys (entering and singing):

Friends and foes,
We've failed, but still
We're on our toes
And say to East,
North, South and West,
America—we did our best.

(Handspring and exit.)

The Crowd: Hurrah, hurrah!

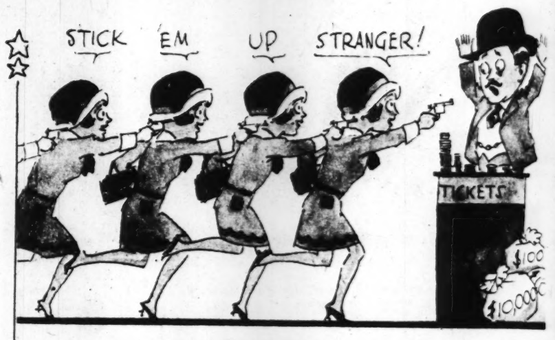
(A Girl Scout hands the brother of the entombed man a subpena.)

The Brother: My God! another subpena! Why in hell don't they stop that jazz band? No one seems to realize that I've got a brother buried alive down there!

The Announcer (to crowd): Special broadcast from the Brinkle-Dingbat murder trial: "Goose Girl and baby doing well." (The crowd cheers).

Getting more blotto as the action progresses, the playwright introduces the Ku Klux Klan, which takes over the rescue work, but before it can get started someone sets off a dynamite charge and in the excitment Mabel falls into Mr. Zero's arms and it is love at first clutch.

Dismayed, Mr. Zero explains that he is a member of the Society for Companionate Marriage, which requires a year's trial, and Mabel floors him by saying it's O K with her. Then the bobbed-haired bandits enter in a chorus and rob the show of a million dollars. The first act ends as Mr. Zero elopes with Mabel, with the father in pursuit.



The second act finds Mr. Zero carrying on his propaganda at the Coliseum in Chicago, where a political convention and a six-day bicycle race are alternating in using the hall. A sign-board, hung with crepe, reads: "Score at end of the 143rd hour of the six-day bicycle race, Commonwealth of Massachusetts 120,000,000, Sacco and Vanzetti 2." The political convention discusses companionate marriage as a platform. In the third act the Zeros are seen in a shabby New York tenement, still trying to raise the burial fund. At the close of the act they win $1,000,000 in a cross-word puzzle contest. In the fourth act they are dining on the Ritz roof. Mr. Zero has raised a billion dollars for a swell mausoleum to be erected in Herrin.

Mr. Lowenfels, a New Yorker by birth, was brought up to be a butter merchant, but gave up the job to live in the Latin Quarter in Paris. To this ill-considered act may be attributed the birth of his poem, "Finale of Seem," of which the theme is the dictum of one Wallace Stevens, "Let be be finale of seem." There was hardly a dissenting voice, so Mr. Lowenfels leaped into the work. The result was practically devastating.

"Is there any kind of a sandwich but a ham sandwich?" he asks passionately in the midst of

Perhaps Mr. Lowenfels' most striking expression of the American spirit is contained in these lines:

Cosmetics can never hide the truth.

he has dandruff; O America!

And again he writes:

Admirable as is his vaulting imagination (and his preface writer says he is not muscle-bound by thought), the poet leaves one aching void. He not only neglects to tell why the sunflower no longer speaks to the daisies but fails utterly to give an idea of just what he DID with those $50,000.

Dick Grace—he who has been half-burnt up, he of the broken neck—tells the story of the stunt man in his recent book, "Squadron of Death" (Doubleday, Doran). A naval air pilot during the war, aviation held him when the battle was over. For a time before the war, he attended the University of Minnesota. After the conflict he returned to it again. But it didn't keep him long. It was not in him to be the lawyer his father, the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of North Dakota, wanted him to be. Aviation beckoned him. Before long he landed in Los Angeles, with 20 cents in his pockets.

His first job in the movies was that of assistant property boy. "To go from the property room to the wardrobe department it was necessary to pass the sky back drops," he writes. "One of the companies was making a thriller which called for a 40-foot net dive. The cameras were set in position. Everything was in readiness for the stunt man to do his leap. He was supposed to turn over twice before he hit the net. . . .

Ribs Cracked—Nose Smashed—and Neck Broken—but HE STILL LIVES

The Adventures of Dick Grace, the Movie Stunt Man Who Does Anything for a Thrill.

By a Member of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff

HALF-BURNT up on one occasion, foot broken on another, ribs cracked again and again, a smashed nose, a broken neck—that is the toll the movies have taken of one stunt man. Strange nightmares, the thought of tragedy lurking in his mind—that, too. Still, this particular stunt man has fared better than many of his fellows who give thrills to the movies in return for pay exceedingly small as movie salaries go. Dick Grace—he who has been half-burnt up, he of the broken neck—tells the story of the stunt man in his recent book, "Squadron of Death" (Doubleday, Doran). A naval air pilot during the war, aviation held him when the battle was over. For a time before the war, he attended the University of Minnesota. After the conflict he returned to it again. But it didn't keep him long. It was not in him to be the lawyer his father, the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of North Dakota, wanted him to be. Aviation beckoned him. Before long he landed in Los Angeles, with 20 cents in his pockets.

His first job in the movies was that of assistant property boy. "To go from the property room to the wardrobe department it was necessary to pass the sky back drops," he writes. "One of the companies was making a thriller which called for a 40-foot net dive. The cameras were set in position. Everything was in readiness for the stunt man to do his leap. He was supposed to turn over twice before he hit the net. . . .

"The director gave the word. Cameras started to grind. But the stunt man still stayed where he was. A second call from the director had no more effect. . . . The man on the platform didn't say a word, but with a rather hopeless gesture he turned and walked slowly down the ladder. . . .

"Of a sudden my heart beat faster. Why should I not try the stunt? It appealed to me. It would be a thrill, especially as it was a tough spot for a tryout. . . . I met the stunt man as he hit the last step of the ladder and asked him for the double's coat. My trousers were a near-enough match to get by. When I was dressed I ran up the ladder to the platform.

"'All ready?' I shouted.

"The assistant looked at the director, and the director at the assistant. They held a short consultation. 'Jump when I give the word.' The order came floating up to me and the director sat down in his chair.

"The cameras clicked again. I was getting nervous; almost wished I hadn't been so quick in my decision. Then I heard that one fatal word: 'Jump!'

"WHEN I got it I was so startled that one foot slipped off the stand. The next moment I went tumbling and turning, down toward the net. As I gathered speed I felt that thrill, right in the belly, which only a high fall can give. . . . I hit the net. . . . Unaccountably, I hit to perfection, square on my back, between the shoulders and the base of the spine. . . .

"From that time on I was a Hollywood stunt man.

"I trained. I learned how to do high net dives. My sense of balance was always good, but from my comrades I learned how to handle my body while still in the air. . . . Out of their competent hands I emerged as a high diver for nets and water. I was something of an equilibrist and race driver; also I was a good swimmer, both on top and under the water. My aviation work in the war and after had made me a pilot of some ability and an aerial trapezist.

"In consequence of all this I found no difficulty in getting work. During my first year at Hollywood I averaged about 100 stunts, or almost two a week. In this number I include only the dangerous ones."

Grace progressed rapidly as a stunt man. Important thrillers were given him now, dangerous ones. But let him tell it.

"A Fox film was to be done from a Rex Beach story. . . . It seemed that a dance-hall set had been erected on Stage 1. It was supposed to be of the sort popular in the wilds of Alaska during the mad stampede of the gold-rush days. A balcony, perhaps 20 feet above the main floor, was to be partitioned into booths. And in those booths would be girls of a type which decorated dance halls in those days.

"Being a place of revelry, liquor was supposed to be served, and in the course of a brawl some drunken sourdough was to throw a lighted match on the flimsy ballet dress of a dancer. Instantly, the tulle, or whatever it was, would flare up, and the girl, wreathed in fire, would rush from the private table to the rail of the balcony. She would pause for a second, then desperately leap from the balcony onto the floor about 20 feet below. At this, the hero, tearing off his coat, would wrap it around her, smothering the flames.

"I, being of medium height, could easily double for the girl in medium and long shots. . . .

"I went to the set. Cameras were placed. . . . The director gave me his last instructions, and I received them with outer calmness, but my heart beat fast as they soaked my clothing with gasoline and alcohol. . . . I was ready. 'Camera!' The word clicked from the mouth of the director. 'Set him on fire!'

"That was a bad moment. I rather think I prayed.

"The property boy threw a lighted match at me, keeping a respectful distance himself, and instantly I became a human torch. Flames leaped 18 feet above my head. Something had gone wrong. This wasn't according to plan.

"Not that I was thinking about that, then. I wasn't thinking at all. I was feeling. I had never dreamed of such agony. I was burning to death, the worst death man or animal can suffer. The terrific heat scorched my lungs. It seared my flesh, bit into my muscles. Even through my anguish of pain, the smell of my own burnt flesh sickened me. I can smell it again now, and feel the horror, as I write. If I live to be 90, I can never forget.

Dick Grace.

"'HELP! My God! I'm burning to death!' I cried. Frantically I leaped down the stairs, landing so hard that I broke a 2-by-4 in the floor below. Then I was up again, half-mad and yet fully conscious, running round and round in a circle to prevent the flames from entering my lungs. All the while I remembered to keep my face covered with my arms, though the flames licked my armpits. I don't know how I did that. Perhaps it was instinct. Or maybe I was recalling unconsciously some faces I'd seen as a result of the war.

"'For God's sake, put me out! Put out the fire!' I begged.

"Just then the assistant director stepped in and tripped me up. . . . He wrapped me in blankets, and fought desperately with the flames. But it was hard work—almost more than he could do. First the flames would shoot out near my head, then from my feet. For more than two minutes, which seemed to me like years and years, I burned. Then I lapsed into unconsciousness, but not for long.

"When I woke to my misery again a few seconds later it was to realize my body was a charred, blackened mass. From head to waist all my skin was burned off. I rubbed one of my charred arms over my chest and bits of flesh dropped away from my arm. Clothes, skin, flesh were all one indistinguishable mass of blackened cinders. The thought of myself as I now was nauseated me; but just to prove that I wasn't down and out, I rose to my elbow, then staggered to my feet, and, with the help of the ever-present doctor, walked to my dressing room.

"Another stunt finished! I had been paid for it, and I had paid—according to the doctor—with just 786 square inches of skin. 'Now you know,' he said to me, 'exactly what it is to burn to death. You couldn't have suffered more had you gone through death itself by fire.'"

THIS strange adventurer did not always reap injuries as his reward. True, it seems he usually got a sting or two. But at times he had miraculous escapes.

Summoned to do a stunt on one occasion, he found: "The thing which I was to do this time was nothing at all. Doubling for the star, I was to walk along a trestle, over which one of the fast trains ran. With me, also doubling a principal of the cast, was Al Mazola. We were to let the train approach until it was so close that it would be impossible for us to reach the end of the trestle. Then, in final desperation, we were to throw ourselves over the side and hang just below the ties while it passed above our heads.

"Hun! Things never seemed to work out quite as I planned. We were on the track all right when the train started over the trestle, and we were walking, just as we had been told to do. But a train traveling as fast as a limited does, between 50 and 60 miles an hour, does not take long to catch up with a couple of doubles traveling on two legs. Of course, we ran, and when the front of that engine was about 200 feet behind us we started looking for places.

"Have you ever been in an automobile traveling along at a fair rate of speed and have it pass fairly close to a high wooden picket fence? Somehow or other every piece of wood is blurred into the next. That's exactly what happened then. Every one of those railroad ties lost its individuality! Of course, I'd have to pick one that wasn't there at all, and I stumbled. More than that, I went down—

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

DRAGUIGNAN, Riviera, France.

A JURY of 12 temperamental Southern Frenchmen at Draguignan Assizes decided recently that a man has the right to kill his nearest and dearest when she is suffering untold agony from an incurable disease.

Richard Corbett, a young Anglo-Frenchman, aged 28, offspring of a dramatic secret mesalliance that ended in a marriage between the son of the British Consul at Hyeres, near Toulon, and a beautiful French femme de chambre, who admittedly shot his mother in their Riviera villa because she was dying of cancer, was acquitted in the court of justice in this little French town of violets, palms and olive groves.

There was no dispute about the circumstances of the killing. Richard Corbett said quite openly that he shot his mother with a revolver because of his love for her, and because he could not endure the ordeal of watching her terrible, constant pain. The question submitted by the president of the court to the jury was:

"Did the accused murder his mother?"

While the jury were away in their crowded room for 15 minutes discussing his fate—acquittal or life on Devil's Island—Corbett was down in the narrow, underground cell, anxiously awaiting the verdict. Then the jurymen slowly filed back into their places and the foreman read out an emphatic "No."

IT REMAINED then for Richard Corbett, tall, slim and good-looking, in his well-cut English gray suit, to be brought to the bar of justice. The president repeated the jury's finding to the prisoner and made him, after nine months' imprisonment, a free man once again, acquitted of all blame.

A storm of applause broke through the silence of the court. Quickly, a woman rushed through the gendarmes encircling the dock. Tears were streaming down her face. She flung her arms around Corbett's neck, and the two were locked together in a passionate embrace while the president, court officials and jurymen looked on. She was a relative of his mother—the only relative who had come to attend the trial. After that other women came to kiss him there in court before the crowd, and the jurymen, one after another, shook him by the hand.

"This moment is almost too much for me," he told newspaper men in his educated, English university voice, his face flushed, his eyes streaming with tears of relief. "I never really thought that I should be acquitted. For nine months now I have been under the strain of my trial, and the remembrance of what has happened, and the apparent certainty that I should be convicted. It is all so unexpected. I cannot realize it yet. I cannot think consecutively.

"This trial of mine has established a new principle in French law. How far that principle will go it is not for me to say. I am afraid that I am not in a fit state to discuss principles. But whatever may be done in future in France, I cannot see this principle—that death should be granted when there is no hope of life and terrible pain is inevitable—being accepted in Anglo-Saxon countries.

"I know that I did what was right. My mind and my heart are convinced of that. And I know, too, from beyond the grave, that I am right. No human being should be permitted to suffer when science has failed and there is no hope."

If ever a man was in nervous torment it was Richard Corbett when he stood up to meet the formal inquisition of the president of the court.

As far as that is concerned, his whole life had been a kind of torment. His father, the son of a very prominent English banker, living on the Riviera, had been practically cast off by the family because of a liaison with a pretty French chambermaid—the victim in the recent slaying.

A CHILD, Richard Corbett, was born, but the father did the honest thing and married the French woman a few weeks later. The father died soon afterward, and then there was a continual dispute between the mother and her husband's relatives in England for possession of the boy. The English grandmother tried to kidnap him several times. They finally agreed to educate Richard Corbett in Switzerland, but when he returned to his mother in France he was impressed into the French Army and sent off to Morocco for three years. Under French law he is a Frenchman, his mother having been unmarried at the time of his birth. He was apparently affected by the heat in Northern Africa and returned home a changed man. After that he began to delve into psychoanalysis, and his own counsel tried to convince the court that this had upset him mentally.

"You admit that you killed your mother," said the president. "Why?"

Richard Corbett held the rail of the dock before him until his knuckles turned white with the strain. He swayed on his feet and drooped, and then answered in a whisper:

"We had a specialist from London to examine my mother. His report was that nothing could save her from cancer, which was inside her breast; she might live for perhaps three or four months. Her longest hope was a year of agony. What could I do? I saw the sweat of intolerable pain on her forehead. I would wipe it away and say to her, 'My mother.' It was too much for any son to bear. On the day when I killed her we had a letter from England saying my grandmother had died. That upset me. I decided that something must be done."

"Did it occur to you," asked the president, "that something more might have been done to save your mother? The Almighty might have intervened to spare her in His mercy."

The prisoner looked back at the Judge and replied: "That is just a religious belief. I have nothing in my heart that supports it."

This question from the president gave Corbett a legal loophole which he would not accept. He declared that he was clear-headed in all that he did, and knew perfectly well what he was doing.

In a little speech to the jury Corbett said: "I have nothing to say beyond this: Science tried all it could to deliver my mother from her pain—and failed. Science could do nothing. I alone delivered her."

The court was much moved by Corbett's evident sincerity. Several of the elderly men on the jury were in tears. One juryman suddenly fell forward in his seat sobbing, and the foreman had to jump up and ask that court be adjourned for a few minutes.

Other witnesses explained how Corbett had tried to commit suicide after killing his mother—he had first given her narcotics to put her asleep—by shooting himself in the chest, and a priest, Abbe Boyer, who was a close friend of the family, told the court that Corbett had been affected by reading too many books on psychoanalysis.

"No mother," said the old priest, "could have had a better or more loving son. He was devoted to her."

A POLICE surgeon who made the autopsy declared that Madame Corbett could not have lived more than a year, and perhaps not even three months. The public prosecutor then arose.

"Corbett," he cried with dramatic emphasis, "is a criminal and must face the fate of a criminal, and you on the jury will take no account of this unnatural, illegal appeal to your sympathy. Justice demands a conviction, and the very least punishment of this crime must be five years' imprisonment."

Maitre Brun, Corbett's counsel, painted an eloquent picture of the poor mother, condemned to death, and of the son torn to his inner soul with distress because of his love.

"Who among us," he cried, "can blame him because he brought that certain death only a little nearer? You cannot. I cannot. I ask you to show by your verdict that he did the only thing a loving son could do."

Half an hour later the young Anglo-Frenchman walked out of the court a free man, but with a torrent of tears streaming down his face.

The right to kill in cases of incurable disease has already been successfully pleaded in several instances in France.

A young Polish actress, Stanislawa Uminska, shot her lover, who was dying in agony from cancer, and was acquitted in February, 1925. In the same year a Paris dressmaker, Mlle. Anna Lavassor, who shot her consumptive sister, was absolved from guilt by a jury of her countrymen.

The trial of Mme. Damichel, who suffocated her husband with charcoal fumes when in an illness he was beginning to lose his reason, had a like outcome.

"MERCY KILLINGS" in the UNITED STATES

THERE have been numerous parallels in criminal history to the case of young Richard Corbett. And, so far as the records go, there have been few convictions when the slayer has pleaded mercy as a motive.

Just the other day at Two Harbors, Minnesota, the leading citizen of the town, John A. Barton, shot and killed his 17-year-old daughter, who had been a cripple and a deaf mute since birth, and then ended his own life.

Barton was president of the First National Bank of Two Harbors, wealthy, a respected citizen. Beatrice, the daughter, had been as helpless as a child in arms all her life. Everywhere the father had sought medical aid for her, to no avail. The family had spent a small fortune on efforts to give her some possibility of normal development.

Barton's wife, and his other two daughters, Isabel and Audrey, knew that the father brooded almost constantly over Beatrice. They knew that within the past year her condition had become almost an obsession with him. Yet they had no inkling of tragedy. He was such a quiet, reserved man.

And he went about his business apparently as he had always done. As much as possible he seemed to try to absorb himself in business activities. He was president also of the Bank of Bowlus, Minnesota; director of the State Bank of Virginia, Minnesota; president of the Lake County Agricultural Association; active in lodges and clubs. But his old friends believe now that this was all on the surface.

ON A Sunday not long ago he told Isabel and Audrey that he would get out the car and take them to church and then take Beatrice on a drive in the country. The helpless girl was placed in the front seat beside her father. They stopped at the church and Isabel and Audrey got out and said goodbye. Barton, with Beatrice beside him, drove on.

They were never seen alive again. At 5 a. m. the following morning some woodsmen found the car on a lonely road a few miles from town. Searching parties had been out for hours. Snow had drifted down through the interlaced branches of the pines.

A revolver was still clutched in Barton's hand. It told the story. He had shot Beatrice once through the heart and then had wounded himself in the arm, above the heart and, at last, a bullet piercing his heart, had killed him.

At first there was some concern that affairs in the bank might have been going badly. But a hasty check disclosed that everything there was in perfect condition.

Coroner J. T. Brown, a friend of the 54-year-old banker, said there would be no inquest. "Mr. Barton killed his daughter out of pity," he said. And with that verdict his fellow-townsmen agreed.

Not long before, at Lawrence, Kansas, there was a similar case. Fred J. Erb, as told in the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine some weeks ago, killed his wife with whom he had lived happily for 55 years, rather than let her die of a lingering illness. He failed in an attempt to take his own life immediately afterwards. Erb was convicted of murder and sentenced to life imprisonment, but a month later was paroled.

In Chester, England, two years ago, Albert Davies, a laborer, confessed that he killed his three-year-old daughter because he loved her so much he could not endure to see her suffer. Evidence showed that the child had been in hospitals for treatment for tuberculosis, that afterward she had been operated on for appendicitis and that following that she contracted measles and pneumonia and became infected with gangrene. He was acquitted by a jury.

Most famous of all these cases was that of Dr. Harold Elmer Blazer, who murdered his daughter, Hazel, known as the "34-year-old 'child woman,'" at Englewood, Colorado. It was in the courts and in the newspapers for months.

Efficiently and humanely Dr. Blazer took his daughter's life. He employed chloroform and employed it so effectively that there were not even any burns on the face of the girl. Then he swallowed some bichloride of mercury, stabbed at his jugular vein and held the chloroform bottle to his own nostrils. But he lived. In fact, he was conscious when another daughter returned home to find the body of her sister, who had always been a paralytic deaf mute.

Immediately the authorities voiced the suspicion that Dr. Blazer hadn't really wanted to die. Why, they asked, being a physician, could he not have successfully taken his own life? A coroner's jury returned a verdict that "Doctor Blazer killed his daughter with poison with felonious intent." And he went on trial.

The trial attracted nation-wide attention. Dr. Blazer pleaded temporary insanity. For days the trial dragged on. It ended when the jury could not agree. The panel stood 11 to one for acquittal. Dr. Blazer's attorneys fought for a re-trial so that he might be formally acquitted. But the State insisted that the charges be dropped in order that there would be no possibility of "placing Colorado in the position of legalizing this character of crime."

WHENEVER such a case has gained public notice, the old question of the sacredness of human life has arisen. It has been debated fiercely, pro and con. George Bernard Shaw had something pertinent to say on the subject recently. Said Mr. Shaw:

"When a patient is suffering from an incurable disease, it is clearly for the patient to decide whether to make an end of it at once, or to wait for what is called the course of nature, but clearly the decision should not be left with another party, and in the case of a patient being paralyzed and being incapable of acting for himself or herself, surely no private person has a right to decide.

"There should be the possibility of an appeal to some authority representing the community, because it is impossible to have a state of affairs in which one person may shoot another and then allege that it was a sort of suicide by deputy. Suicide cannot be permitted by deputy."

Which, if not an answer, is at least a considerable ray of Shavian common sense on a very ancient question.

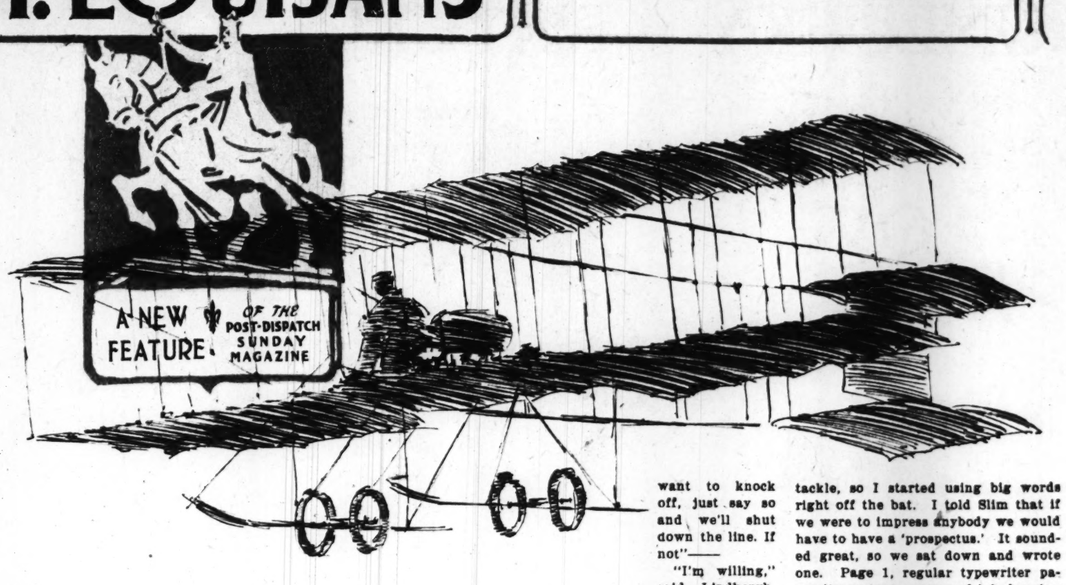
How the Boy Who Flew Box Kites Became the Man Who Gave This City Its First Real Air-Mail Service.



By JACK ALEXANDER
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff

YOUNG BILL ROBERTSON went back to his old job in the milling business after the war. For the sake of a family tradition he picked up his work where he had left off and gave it a fling. This duty done, he left it. He couldn't swallow its dust. He had been a military flyer and liked it. It seemed logical to him when he had zipped past fast trains and river steamers that the time was not far off when flying would be safer and more people would travel by air. The term commercial aviation had hardly been coined. There were no factories, as there are today, turning out cabin and sport planes. Yet that was what Bill Robertson visioned, something like that.

The idea refused to leave him and he refused to leave the idea. With his brother, Frank, aided by family funds, he bought an old training plane and tried to put it to work. He found that there was little work for it at that time. Many people said he was "cracked" on the idea. A few said by gad there was something to it, but it was too early for that sort of thing. That was true, as the Robertsons found, but they plugged away, stunting at fairs and making short hops with asthmatic fat people. Three times, out in the sticks, they "cracked" up their one plane.

"Well," one was sure to say, as they looked sadly at a smashed wing or bent undercarriage, "there goes the Robertson Aircraft Corporation!" This came to be a time-honored remark. It was always followed by a hike to the nearest village for a carpenter, a wire home for a can of "dope" or a landing wheel, a dive into the front cockpit for a container of glue and a few days devoted to repairs. The Robertsons had got the jump on aviation, and when it did begin to develop commercially, anticipated the knock of opportunity and pulled the Old Lady in with a boathook. Today, after 10 hurried but important years, they are financially independent and riding the crest of a new and bulking business. It was quick but solid success. The Robertson Aircraft Corporation exists now in name only. It has been absorbed by the Universal Air Lines, which still uses the subdesignation, Robertson Division, for the prestige the name enjoys in this section.

Frank Robertson heads the Robertson Airplane Service Co. at Lambert Field. Bill is Major William B. Robertson, at 36 one of the best-known figures in commercial aviation, president of the Curtiss-Robertson Airplane Manufacturing Company, which makes the Robin monoplane, and one of the progressive elements in the Curtiss-Wright Corporation, the largest holding company resulting from the aviation mergers.

Sent to China by the Curtiss interests recently to survey the field for business prospects, Major Robertson reported that commercial aviation was an impossibility, but returned with a contract to operate mail planes for the Chinese Government over a 3000-mile route. It was a 10-year contract, of $20,000,000 proportions. He was made president of Aviation Exploration, Inc., which will carry out this work.

Major Wm. B. Robertson.

HE HAD an idea that airplanes should be sold on the time-payment basis, as are automobiles, and took the idea to New York. It was accepted and he was made vice president of the Aviation Credit Corporation. Other offices he holds are president of the St. Louis Air Terminals, vice president of Curtiss-Wright Sales Corporation and director in Robertson Airplane Service, Inc., St. Louis Aircraft Corporation, Evans Glider Association and Curtiss Flying Service.

As employer of "Slim" Lindbergh, he organized that young man's trip by air to Paris, and during the past summer staged the record endurance flight of the St. Louis Robin. He gave St. Louis its first air mail and his Canuck was the first commercial plane to operate here. The title of Major derives from the fact that in that capacity he organized the air unit of the Thirty-fifth Division and headed it for two years.

Bill enlisted in April, 1917, for air-service work, before there was any aviation corps. He had flown box kites as a boy and haunted Kinloch and Forest Park fields when the Hoxseys and Beacheys were wafting their match-stick affairs through the atmosphere. He was sent to Carruthers Field in Texas, where the British flyers trained. Almost simultaneously arrived the rolling stock of America's air strength, six broken-down planes which had seen service on the border.

For weeks Priyate Robertson, who could do tricks with a monkey wrench, headed a crew which took apart the planes and rebuilt them, time after time. He was promoted to Corporal, later to Sergeant. Transferred to Dayton, Ohio, he fulfilled the same duties, and got his first ride in a JN4B. Now he was sure he was going to like it, so he applied for admission into the officers' training school and was sent to Cornell University, graduating in March, 1918, and going back to Carruthers Field.

After training there, he was retained as instructor and later got his overseas orders. But after waiting in concentration camp at Garden City, Long Island, for over a month, the war flivvered out on him.

"Every flyer in the army wanted to be a test pilot then," Major Robertson said. "But there were no factories and hence no jobs. None of us could buy our own ships, because we were too poor, so we went home.

"I found I couldn't settle at my old job at the Stanard Milling Company, so when Frank got back from the army we borrowed money from the family and got that old Canuck and incorporated. It sounded good to incorporate and we wanted to impress people.

"There was a haphazard air-mail line run by the Government from the field in Forest Park and a hangar on the grounds. We got permission to locate here. We charged $15 a hop and then went out and got contracts for exhibitions at county and state fairs. This was a good source of revenue. We reinvested the money in airplane parts at Government auction sales and built up a business in this way, living on as little as we could. A few students straggled in.

"BUT this kind of business did not satisfy us. I figured there ought to be some work an airplane could do and went to business houses preaching the gospel of aviation in business. They would say: 'It's interesting, all right, but how can we use your plane?' And I would scratch my head and reply: 'I'm damned if I know.' I was nevertheless convinced that there was a way, and in 1920 obtained a contract calling for $20 a day from the Ralston Purina Company. We painted the Canuck with Purina checkers and flew over farmers, dropping literature.

"But now the neighbors were kicking—too much noise and all that. Finally the city said 'Get out.' I went to see Major Albert Bond Lambert and offered him stock in the corporation if he would help us out. He said: 'I don't want the stock, but if you can find a field I'll pay for the lease.'

"We toured the country on both sides of the river and settled on what is now Lambert Field. The lady who owned the place refused to see me four or five times, thinking I was a disreputable person, but finally talked and leased the big wheat field.

"We put up an old canvas hangar and got a few more planes and soon had 25 or 30 pilots. The school was running nicely and we had lots of business, running photographs for the newspapers from big fights and the Kentucky Derby. More hangars went up for the national air races in 1923 and Lindbergh joined up with us, when he came here to see the races.

"I was still disappointed that the airplane had not been put to a real business use and descended upon the town bankers, telling them I could fly to Pittsburg with their clearings, put them on the train for New York and get them there a day ahead of time, saving a day's interest. I offered to accept no money if I failed and asked to be paid only half of what they saved by my efforts. They couldn't quite see it. Then I thought of a passenger service to New York and made a trip with Lindbergh over the proposed route. It was practical, but there was still no enthusiasm for it. Later T. A. T. did it."

By the time the air-mail bills were passing Congress the Robertsons had about 100 planes, 50 students and several traveling circuses and were making numerous taxi hops. Due to the fact that they were well established, they got the St. Louis-Chicago mail contract, although there were lower bidders. They bought several De Havilland planes, stripped them of wartime armament, built in mail compartments, made Lindbergh chief mail pilot and flew the mail.

For weeks they lost money at the rate of $400 a day, until the banks, which profited most by the mail, made up the deficit. Winter came. The pilots came to Robertson's office and asked for lighted routes, as darkness settled earlier.

"The Government has promised lights, but we haven't got them yet," Robertson told the pilots. "If you want to knock off, just say so and we'll shut down the line. If not"——

"I'm willing," said Lindbergh, and the others agreed.

"That was some tough winter," Robertson related, "but Slim got the flying experience there that I believe took him across the Atlantic. All winter those fellows flew blind. In cold weather the rain and sleet froze on their wings and forced them to descend every 50 miles or so to beat the ice off the plane with a broomstick. Several times they had to jump in parachutes in the dark.

"An adventurous crowd? I should say. The same spirit charged the whole organization, so that when the bill for lights finally did pass we bid for it and got the contract, although none of us had the slightest idea how to erect them!

"What's more, we made money on it. I appointed Brandy (Gregory Brandewiede) head of the concrete-pouring division. It was certainly a laugh. Frank bossed the work crews. Slim, on his days off, picked out the spots, 10 miles apart, for beacons, and emergency landing fields every 20 miles. He would land his ship on a farm, jabber to the farmer and take off with a lease in his pocket. Then the 'technical experts' and the crew would come in, build a concrete base, erect a steel tower, install a revolving beacon and build a little shack for the caretaker. While the work was in progress, Slim, carrying the mail, would pass over and strafe Brandy. If Brandy was on the ground, Slim would make him lie down. If on the shack or tower, he had to fall off.

"We had promised to finish the job in 60 days in our ignorance, and would actually have done it, without the $10 a day penalty, except that on the last beacon, near Chicago, the ground was so hard we couldn't dent it with a pick. We had to wait two months for it to thaw. That cost us $600.'"

By now the company, originally incorporated for $30,000, was reincorporated for $500,000. It was making money on the mail route, its spare-parts business was big, its school flourishing and it was agent for four makes of planes.

"SLIM came into the office one day and said: 'Bill, I want to fly over the Atlantic Ocean,'" Major Robertson related. "'You're crazy as hell, Slim,' I told him.

"'No,' he argued quietly, 'you think it over. The Whirlwind motor looks like the thing to me. It hasn't conked yet.' Every day he would drop in and talk about it, and pretty soon I was sold on the notion myself. We decided a Bellanca-Whirlwind was the thing. Then came the thought, 'where to get the $15,000 to buy it.'

"'There's a fellow named Orteig who offers $25,000 for the first flight,' Slim said. 'I read that some place.' 'Is it still up?' I asked. 'You don't want to go on a wild-goose chase, you know.' So Slim wired east and found out that the prize, offered in 1917, had been withdrawn, but Orteig would put it up again.

"'Bill, here's $2000 I've saved from the salary you've paid me,' Slim said. 'Put it into the pot. Do you know where we can get the rest?' I replied that Frank and I would put in $1000, but we were too busy trying to make a living to fool with a thing like this.

"'But I'll pay everyone back if I get across,' Slim urged, and he was so earnest about it that I promised to help further.

"It was another one of those things that we had never feared to tackle, so I started using big words right off the bat. I told Slim that if we were to impress anybody we would have to have a 'prospectus.' It sounded great, so we sat down and wrote one. Page 1, regular typewriter paper it was, was a pen-and-ink drawing of the Atlantic Ocean, with New York and Paris connected by a dotted line, 'the flyer's course.' On page 2 we pasted a picture of the Bellanca plane cut out of a magazine, with specifications and data on how much gas was needed, and all that. On page 3 we pasted a picture of 'our Captain Lindbergh,' veteran pilot. We got that picture from a catalogue of the school. The prospectus looked like a kid's scrapbook. Slim has still got it.

"We set out with this to obtain $12,000 from hard-boiled business men. As we went into the first place a friend met us and advised me to leave Slim in the automobile, as he looked too young and would queer it. I did, and Slim was the most disappointed man in the world.

"'Suppose your pilot gets lost?' everybody asked. Nobody wanted to take the moral responsibility of 'sending a boy to his death.' We told an advertising man we would carry the banner of Coca Cola or Lucky Strikes to Paris. He wired his clients, and none of them wanted to take the responsibility.

"A MONTH passed. Major Lambert said he would give us our final $1000, if we got the rest. Finally I called on Harry Knight, then president of the Flying Club. By now the prospectus was haggard-looking. Knight said he would get the money, which he eventually did. Slim came into the office several times a day with clippings about other 'hoppers,' American and French. He was dying with impatience while the deal was pending.

"Slim finally left for the Bellanca factory with the $15,000 and the $3000 for expenses. A few days later he wired that he had argued with Levine, who wanted to go on the trip, and had given up the Bellanca idea.

"Three days later he wired from San Diego that Mahoney-Ryan had started work on his plane. A month later he wired, 'I'll be in St. Louis tomorrow.' I didn't think he could make it from the coast, but at 8 o'clock the next day I was awakened by a motor over my home at 40 Portland place and looked out the window at a beautiful silver monoplane. Slim waved and headed for the flying field.

"'Here I am,' he said, when I got there. 'Not a miss all night.' I told him: 'Slim, if you get across, be sure to hire an advertising agent or manager and make a fortune for yourself.' He mumbled something like 'All right' and tinkered with the motor. A few days later he left for New York.

"By the way, it might be well to correct this idea about Lindbergh's 'We' mannerism," Robertson said. "It did not refer to his ship and himself, but to himself and his backers."

Robertson's big jump in aviation came last year, when he decided the time was ripe for a low-priced cabin plane. The Robertsons had purchased 1100 Curtiss OX5 motors in 1923 at auction prices and had them on hand. Frank was uncertain as to the feasibility of the proposition and branched off into the service game. Bill went to the Curtiss engineers and told them what he wanted. The charge for designing was to be $30,000, but when C. M. Keyes of the Curtiss interests saw the plans he suggested they combine and form the Curtiss-Robertson Company. This was done, the planes being built here and the OX5 motors being purchased from the Robertson Aircraft Corporation at $100 profit on each motor. Because of the similarity to Robertson and the fact that Curtiss ships were named for birds, the name Robin was chosen. In its first year the new company showed a profit, turning out 515 Robins.

A Pathetic Finis Written to His Third Marriage Which Began With a Honeymoon in Jail.

HOLLYWOOD.

WITH the death of Shelby Somerset in Hollywood a short time ago a pathetic finis was written to the third ill-fated marital venture of Pat Somerset, English matinee idol, now playing on the stage and screen in the film capital.

Married in turn to Margaret Bannerman and Edith Day, both actresses, Somerset's first two marriages were decidedly tempestuous, bristling with accusations of affairs with other women, but neither was so hectic or disastrous as the union with the young prize-winning Texas beauty.

Launched with a honeymoon in jail on charges of drunkenness, the marriage seemed foreordained to misfortune and tragedy. Separations, accusations of cruelty, charges of broken ribs, a divorce action and reconciliations all were crowded into the period of less than two years that ensued between the wedding and the morning the actor found his beautiful wife dead in bed.

There even was an air of mystery thrown around the circumstances of Mrs. Somerset's death at first, but this was entirely dispelled later when the Coroner's investigation disclosed that she had died of heart failure.

The romance between the popular actor and Shelby Worrall, Galveston, Texas, beauty winner, had its origin in London, where Shelby, as a school girl, adored Somerset as a superb stage lover. She followed his career from one marriage and elopement to another and finally came to meet him years later in California.

THE adoration of youth returned as the love of maturity. The two were married in Hollywood, December 6, 1927.

A honeymoon celebration with friends followed the ceremony. Somehow the strains of "Sweet Adeline," warbled in the early morning hours, annoyed neighbors. Then police appeared and the scene of the honeymoon shifted to the Los Angeles city jail.

Indignantly the bride voiced her opinion of Hollywood, the police department, and everything else concerned with her predicament.

"These policemen — they are terrible," she complained. "They haven't any manners. Even at 3:30 a. m. one ought to be able to sing a little bit without being arrested —especially on your wedding night."

The worst of it all, the beauty contended, was that she hadn't been drinking.

"Seems like I had one little taste of gin early in the evening—just to be a good sport. But I don't like it—it burns my tongue—and I wouldn't take any more."

The Judge believed her story the next day and she was released. Out of deference to the fact that Somerset was a bridegroom he was allowed to go with a fine of $20, suspended.

The newlyweds returned to their interrupted honeymoon in their palm-shaded bungalow and all seemed serene for a time.

But four short months later Mrs. Somerset appeared one morning at her attorney's office and there set forth a long list of indignities which she charged to her famous husband in the divorce complaint which she signed.

Among her allegations she said that Pat had:

Punched and kicked her;
Broken three of her ribs;
Failed to support her;
Reviled her with profanity;
Locked her out of the house;
Been drunk on various occasions.

From Somerset, however, then appearing in a theatrical production in San Francisco, came an immediate denial of all of his wife's charges. He, too, rushed to an attorney and began plans to file an answer to his wife's divorce proceedings.

A few days later process servers, armed with a summons to appear in the wife's divorce action, knocked at the door of Somerset's Bay City apartment, only to be met by—

Mrs. Somerset!

With arms lovingly entwined around one another the pair smiled blandly at the flustered officers and announced, "It's all a mistake. There isn't going to be any divorce."

Things went on more or less smoothly for a time after that. Then came new rumors of difficulties and threatened separation between the sheik actor and his wife. So matters had stood until that fateful morning in early November when Somerset went to his wife's bedroom to call her.

There was no response. Alarmed, the actor summoned a physician, who immediately pronounced Mrs. Somerset dead.

Inasmuch as the cause of death was not apparent and had occurred before the doctor's arrival, the Coroner was summoned to take charge of the case. After a post-mortem examination, it was announced that Mrs. Somerset had succumbed to a heart attack.

Somerset's international fame as a love maker dates from the time when he was the husband of Margaret Bannerman. Both were appearing on the London stage.

Somerset became a member of the London cast of the musical comedy, "Irene," and there the tale of tangled loves begins. The star of "Irene" was Edith Day, then at the height of her stage career.

A languid, unobtrusive sort of personality, Somerset, in a more or less obscure role, seemed far removed from the aloof position of Miss Day, the star, at the pinnacle of popularity.

But it was not long before the two were seen much together, notwithstanding the fact that Miss Day was then the wife of Carle Carlton, theatrical producer, who had been instrumental in starring her.

The romance was blazoned to the public when Miss Bannerman sued Somerset for divorce, naming Miss Day as co-respondent.

A CHILD had been born to Miss Day and she returned to the United States. Somerset, seeking to follow her to this country, found himself halted by immigration authorities at Ellis Island, who placed a charge of moral turpitude in an effort to prevent him from entering the United States.

Carlton, finding himself the principal obstacle to Somerset's doing the right thing by both Miss Day and the child, gave in and got a divorce.

Eventually the authorities let down the bars and permitted Somerset to enter, but not before first-page publicity on both sides of the Atlantic had raised the obscure actor to a figure of international interest.

As soon as legal requirements of Carlton's divorce had been met Somerset and Miss Day were married and set out to live happily ever afterward.

However, it was not long before the second Mrs. Somerset began to hear distressing reports about her easy-going husband. She began to realize perhaps how the first Mrs. Somerset had felt. There were spats and reconciliations, but nothing of a serious nature arose between them until Richard "Skeets" Gallagher, the vaudeville

BRANDED HIS SWEETHEART

Melodramatic Climax of a California "Romance."

Mrs. Mabel Pennington Clarno.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

SAN FRANCISCO.

CHARLES NUNES SILVA is a man of direct action. This fact Mrs. Mabel Pennington Clarno discovered not long ago to her own unhappiness. It may be only that Silva, a young man of a decidedly impressionable nature, has read too much fiction about hard-boiled he-men who cow their women with a single flicker of the eyelash.

At any rate, they met. By a rather odd coincidence it happened. They were both running for a suburban train that would take them from Berkeley to San Francisco. They both missed it. Mutual sympathy was in order. That night Silva called on Mrs. Clarno.

Thereafter things moved rapidly. Mrs. Clarno, who is 41, has been married four times and has three daughters. Silva was not to be outdone. Though he is only 24, he told her he had been married twice and was 38 years old. He posed as a very worldly young man. And he succeeded so well that Mrs. Clarno never once doubted his story. Silva gave himself a reputation as a bold, bad charmer and he was bound to live up to it. One night he did.

Mrs. Clarno had been discretion itself. But somehow a reference to other admirers came into the conversation. There was an argument, heated denials. And, finally, action.

Exactly what happened is not very clear. When a doctor, who was summoned to the Clarno home, arrived an hour later he found Mrs. Clarno suffering intense pain from several burns, like brands, on her body. She told the doctor a very strange story.

She told him about the quarrel. She explained that she tried to pacify Silva by an appeal to his sympathies. She complained of a frightful headache. Would he go out and get her a small bottle of chloroform, she asked. She sometimes used it when her headaches were most severe. Silva, she related, rushed out hatless and came back in a few moments with the anesthetic. She put a few drops on a handkerchief and inhaled it.

Mrs. Clarno next remembers regaining consciousness and, simultaneously, the sensation of great pain. Her whole body seemed on fire. Silva, she says, was standing over her with a red-hot spatula. They grappled for it and in the struggle her hand was severely burned. She believes she fainted again. At any rate, Silva fled.

The doctor found evidence to support Mrs. Clarno's story. There was the spatula. There was the can of chloroform. And a gas flame was still burning in the kitchen. And certainly Mrs. Clarno had received serious burns. Later she was able to recall that Silva had threatened to brand her with his initials. He had boasted that he had treated his two wives similarly. She had liberally discounted this talk.

The doctor agreed with Mrs. Clarno that for a time nothing would be said to the police. He advised that she go for a rest to the ranch of Joseph Blanchard, a friend, in Sutter County. Silva once had whispered Blanchard's name as a rival.

It was a few days after her arrival there that her condition became such that it was necessary to remove her to a hospital. Hospital authorities soon became aware of the serious nature of the burns and police were notified. The story was out. Berkeley's scientific police chief, August Vollmer, was immediately notified and Silva's arrest was demanded.

With this demand went details of Mrs. Clarno's story, told again in the hospital to Inspector Frank Waterbury and Deputy Sheriff Frank Harrison.

"When I first came to out of the chloroform," Mrs. Clarno related, "Silva told me that I had been burned by a hot-water bottle that he placed beside me to stop a chill.

"Of course, I didn't believe that. So he changed his story and said that one of my ex-husbands had broken into the house and burned me despite his efforts to force the man away. At last he admitted that he had done it, reminding me of his threat of a short time before when he accused me of being unfaithful to him. At that time he even told me he had branded his two former wives—and now I know he never was even married. I'll have nothing more to do with him."

The police had little difficulty in finding Silva. And, they say, he confessed after a time to the truth of Mrs. Clarno's account. He seemed eager to disclaim responsibility for the burns on her hands, saying that awakening in pain she had involuntarily grasped the red-hot iron. It all came about, he explained, because he felt sorry for Mrs. Clarno. He had taken pity on her when she had told him she was lonely.

"Yes, it's true I told her I had been married twice and was 38 years old," Silva said. "She told me that she had been married four times and I did not want her to think I was only a kid. I guess my line got over for a while any way because she called me 'worldly' and seemed to go a lot on what I said."

Silva is a changed young man. All the swagger has disappeared. Seeing him in jail today it would be difficult to believe that he had ever been the dapper sheik of Seventh avenue. Since there is no charge to fit his particular crime, he will be tried for mayhem. And Mrs. Clarno is at least wiser. She says she will wait for a little while before she picks out that fifth husband.

SAVED PRAI

COLUMBUS, Nebraska.

SIOUX warrior's horse stepped in a prairie-dog hole on the Nebraska plains 67 years ago and sent its savage rider rolling across an expanse of soft buffalo grass. Due to that seemingly trivial circumstance, a 16-year-old boy retained his scalp and the Territory of Nebraska retained a young frontiersman. As time went on, the Sioux Nation found abundant cause to rue that misstep of the warrior's horse, or at least to regret that it hadn't been delayed a moment longer. For the unarmed youth who escaped the Indian's lance by inches that day was Luther H. North—afterwards to become the celebrated scout and soldier, Captain "Lute" North of the Pawnee Scouts.

To the white settlers of the Nebraska frontier, North's escape from death at 16 meant a bit more than survival of one more badly-needed fighting man. It was a bit of rare good fortune —one of those inexplicable "breaks" which sometimes go far toward winning wars as well as football games.

To the hostile Indians of the plains it was one of the worst pieces of hard luck since the white man's introduction of smallpox and firewater. The Sioux let themselves in for a lot of trouble when they let him get away. They didn't realize it at the time. They never even knew who the youth was. But in the sanguinary years of warfare that followed they tried hard to correct their early blunder. And before the scalping days ended in 1876 they were given several good opportunities to lift his hair, but his "medicine" and his marksmanship were so uniformly good that they never quite succeeded. Wherefore Captain North is alive today, a benign, soft-spoken gentleman of 83, a "grand old man" of Nebraska, with a twinkle in his eye, a sparkling sense of humor and a vast storehouse of memories in his active brain.

WHEN Omaha held its Diamond Jubilee recently, celebrating the seventy-fifth anniversary of Nebraska's admittance to the Union as a territory, Captain North rode in the historical parade. A modest little figure almost obscured beside the buckskin garb and picturesque white hair of Deadwood Dick. Those who didn't know him personally scarcely noticed him at all, for there is about him nothing of the theatrical, nothing to draw attention in a parade. He discarded frontier dress with the passing of the frontier and kept abreast of the civilization he had helped to build.

The Career of "Lute" North Was a Long Series of Narrow Escapes but He Lived to Celebrate Nebraska's Exciting Past With the Other "Old-Timers."

SIOUX warrior's horse stepped in a prairie-dog hole on the Nebraska plains 67 years ago and sent its savage rider rolling across an expanse of soft buffalo grass. Due to that seemingly trivial circumstance, a 16-year-old boy retained his scalp and the Territory of Nebraska retained a young frontiersman. As time went on, the Sioux Nation found abundant cause to rue that misstep of the warrior's horse, or at least to regret that it hadn't been delayed a moment longer. For the unarmed youth who escaped the Indian's lance by inches that day was Luther H. North—afterwards to become the celebrated scout and soldier, Captain "Lute" North of the Pawnee Scouts.

To the white settlers of the Nebraska frontier, North's escape from death at 16 meant a bit more than survival of one more badly-needed fighting man. It was a bit of rare good fortune—one of those inexplicable "breaks" which sometimes go far toward winning wars as well as football games.

To the hostile Indians of the plains it was one of the worst pieces of hard luck since the white man's introduction of smallpox and firewater. The Sioux let themselves in for a lot of trouble when they let him get away. They didn't realize it at the time. They never even knew who the youth was. But in the sanguinary years of warfare that followed they tried hard to correct their early blunder. And before the scalping days ended in 1876 they were given several good opportunities to lift his hair, but his "medicine" and his marksmanship were so uniformly good that they never quite succeeded. Wherefore, Captain North is alive today, a benign, soft-spoken gentleman of 83, a "grand old man" of Nebraska, with a twinkle in his eye, a sparkling sense of humor and a vast storehouse of memories in his active brain.

WHEN Omaha held its Diamond Jubilee recently, celebrating the seventy-fifth anniversary of Nebraska's admittance to the Union as a territory, Captain North rode in the historical parade, a modest little figure almost obscured beside the buckskin garb and picturesque white hair of Deadwood Dick. Those who didn't know him personally scarcely noticed him at all, for there is about him nothing of the theatrical, nothing to draw attention in a parade. He discarded frontier dress with the passing of the frontier and kept abreast of the civilization he had helped to build. But for all his lack of frontiersman's impediments, he has, beyond doubt, seen more Nebraska history made and has taken part in the making of more of it than any man now alive. It was entirely characteristic that he should attract no notice to himself in a parade.

You will find him just as modest when you meet him at his home here in Columbus, which is 90 miles west of Omaha and near the junction of those two historic streams, the Platte and the Loup rivers.

More than likely you will find him working in his garden or answering some of the scores of letters he receives from writers and historical societies asking for bits of information about the days of the covered wagon.

Unless you know it in advance, you won't suspect he is the veteran of 30 Indian fights. He seems too gentle for an ex-Indian fighter. And after you have known him for years he will still apologize for "talking so much about myself" when you press him on some point or other concerning his own exploits. Usually if there is credit to be given he will give it to somebody else—his elder and more famous brother, Major Frank North, or some of those courageous Pawnees he commanded, members of the Pawnee Battalion who fought with the whites against the Sioux and Cheyennes.

The Old West unrolls before your eyes in glamorous panorama when Lute North settles himself to reminiscence, for he is a master story teller. Every landmark suggests a tale. Wraiths of departed red men and vanished buffalo herds appear on the horizon across the rolling prairie hummocks. The haze you see over there along the Platte is the smoke of burning wagon trains. The snow that is falling is the beginning of that terrible Nebraska winter of 1856-57, when it was 40 below most of the time from December 2 to March 1, and the North family, just arrived from Ohio, huddled in a frame cabin, with only a cook-stove for heating equipment. In that winter, the father, Thomas J. North, lost his way one night when returning home from a surveying camp and was frozen to death.

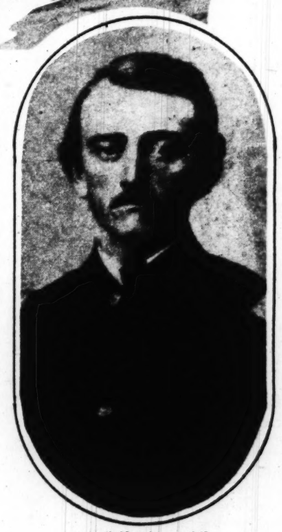
The whistle of the Union Pacific bound for Cheyenne recalls the days of '66, when the railroad pushed its way as far west as Grand Island and the North brothers, with their Pawnee warriors, guarded the construction gangs. Down there across the tracks is the spot where the old town of Columbus built its stockade in '64 and the whole population took shelter when word came that the Indians were sweeping eastward along the Platte with firebrand and scalping knife.

YOU hear of his adventures on his first Indian expedition when, in 1862, he went, at 16, as an enlisted man in the Second Nebraska Cavalry, with General Sully's forces against the Sioux in Minnesota. He says that while on that expedition he broke all records for the 100-yard dash, for he made it in approximately "nothing flat." It was in the night battle at Whitestone Hills, North Dakota. In a withdrawal to the hills he had lost his rifle and had gone back to recover it when, in the darkness, he was caught in the fire of his own comrades. He made a dash back to the lines in the interim while the troops were recharging their old-fashioned muzzle-loaders for another volley.

Mr. and Mrs. North.

When the great Indian outbreak of 1864 occurred, North was close enough to hear the firing in the first massacre. He was working as a teamster then, freighting out of Fort Kearney, and was encamped alone on the north bank of the Platte when a party of 14 immigrants was attacked by the Sioux on the opposite bank and annihilated. Thirteen were killed and the fourteenth left for dead with nine arrows and four bullet wounds in his body.

"That was Than Stevens," Captain North tells you. "I knew him well. He managed to crawl away and was rescued the next day. He recovered and lived in Columbus for many years afterward."



"Lute" North in 1867.

The Indians massacred immigrants that day all the way along the trail from Fort Kearney to Denver. The Platte River became the bloodiest stream in America. Hundreds of men, women and children were killed. More than 2000 horses, mules and oxen were captured. Stage stations were destroyed and ranches devastated in the succeeding months. The next year, Frank North went over the trail from Fort Kearney to Julesburg, Colorado, and wrote afterwards that at no point along the way was he out of sight of burned wagon remains or dead horses and oxen.

IT WAS about this time that the Pawnee Scouts were organized and Frank North, commissioned as a Major, was placed in command. Lute was given a captaincy and assigned one of the two companies. This battalion of red men fighting under white officers against other red men was one of the most picturesque and valuable military organizations the frontier ever knew. The Pawnees, hereditary enemies of the Sioux, were superb trailers and were possessed of almost incredible physical endurance. One of them, Big Hawk Chief, once ran 120 miles in 20 hours, and when his statement was doubted, he rested a day and ran back to show 'em. Incidentally, he kept ahead of two riders who followed him on horseback in relays of 60 miles each. Tales of the Pawnees and their stirring deeds are numberless. So are the tales of Captain North's own adventures. But there were three hairbreadth escapes in his career on the plains which stand out now as high lights. One was the escape from that Sioux warrior whose horse stepped in the prairie-dog hole.

It was on the old Pawnee reservation, near the present site of Genoa, Nebraska, in 1862, shortly before North joined the expedition to Minnesota. Frank was employed in the agency store and young Luther and his mother and two sisters had gone there to join him. The mother was matron of the Government school on the reservation and Luther had a job as teamster, hauling logs to a sawmill for further building projects. North had a team of mules and the other teamsters used horses. At night they turned all the animals out to graze and usually rounded them up without trouble the next morning.

ONE morning only the mules could be found. The horses had strayed away. Luther mounted one of the mules and rode off to find them. He had ridden about a mile and a half from the agency when six Sioux warriors, heavily armed with bows and arrows and lances, rode out of a gulch and cut off his retreat to the agency. It was a Sioux raiding party which had invaded the Pawnee reservation to run off livestock and murder such Pawnees and whites as could be found. He was to learn later that it was only one of several raiding parties on the reservation at the time, but for the moment this one occupied his full attention. The six warriors started after him on their fleet ponies, and he unarmed and mounted on a lumbering mule.

A mile across the prairie in the opposite direction was a trading post. He headed his mule for this and rode for dear life. It was a good mule. It put up such a good race that five of the Sioux dropped out and made for a cornfield where 16 Pawnee squaws were at work. They killed and scalped every one of the 16. Five other squaws were killed and scalped that day, one within 30 feet of the door of the Indian school. Luther's mother and sisters, barricaded in the building, witnessed the shocking spectacle.

But to get back to young Luther and his mule. One Sioux refused to abandon the chase. He was mounted on a better pony than the rest and was rapidly closing in upon the fleeing boy.

"He could easily have shot me with an arrow," says the Captain, "but evidently he wanted to kill me with the lance. The Indians considered it a mark of valor to kill an enemy hand to hand, and they wanted, if possible, to strike him before killing him. They called it 'counting coup.' I glanced back and this buck was almost on the heels of my mule. He was raising his lance, and I could already feel it between my shoulder blades when, by some stroke of fate, that pony stepped in a hole. The Indian went tumbling over the animal's head with lance, bow and arrows and all. By the time he got up and mounted his pony again I had gained enough distance to beat him to the trading post and he gave up the chase. It was my first real Indian scare."

THERE were many other close calls to follow. Once, Captain North relates, he was "shot and killed," or at any rate he thought he was, which was about as bad, for he suffered all the pangs of death. It was in 1869, when the North brothers with about 40 Pawnees accompanied General Eugene A. Carr's troops on a campaign against the Cheyenne Chief, Tall Bull. The Cheyennes had just raided the white settlements in Western Kansas. They had killed many settlers and had carried off two white women, a Mrs. Weichel and Mrs. Suzannah Alderdice. Carr's command, led by the scouts, trailed them into Northeastern Colorado and finally surprised them in camp in a canyon south of the present city of Sterling. Here occurred the battle of Summit Springs, in which the Indians were soundly defeated, with a loss of about 60 killed, all their food supplies and camping equipment destroyed and hundreds of horses captured. Mrs. Weichel was recaptured alive, but Mrs. Alderdice was tomahawked by an Indian as the troops rode into the village. Both women had been hideously mistreated.

As the troops attacked, the Indians made a brief stand and then scattered, about 20 warriors, including Chief Tall Bull, taking shelter in a canyon. There they were all killed, Frank North killing Tall Bull when the chief raised his head above the canyon rim to fire. It was in the early firing that Lute North "died" his imaginary death. As they rode upon Tall Bull's lodge, he saw an Indian a few yards

HORSE AND HORSE

By Charles Caldwell Dobie

HANK WHEELOCK'S first conclusion was that he had come upon a vagrant snow patch. But the idea had barely emerged before he realized its absurdity. Could it be that the scorching humor of the desert had at last seared him to a point of daftness? . . . He moved slowly toward the outer rim of whiteness, as if fearful lest the vision might dissolve, but the mirage did not recede; it became, if anything, more tangible, more crystalline, more emphatic. Surely this pool of frozen purity had not been there last week. He bent over, tracing figures in the glistening surface with his gun; if he were mad his new estate had been accomplished with completeness! He next trusted his fingers to a confirmation of the fact before him. He had almost expected a cool reaction, but the scorch of accumulated sunshine bit ruthlessly into his flesh. Immediately every spark of animation was extinguished within him; the suggestion flashing through his mind was too tremendous, too fantastic to be met save in complete immobility. When he moved again, it was to scoop up a handful of burning whiteness. Even now he did not altogether credit his senses. He moistened a forefinger, carrying its powdered surface back to his tongue. He knew the look of it, the taste of it, and yet he was not to be trapped unduly. He whipped out his pocket magnifier. His conclusions were reluctant, constrained by the incautions of a lifetime. Borax? . . . Could it be possible—here by the roadway's rim within a day's journey of the railroad? . . . He felt himself grow suddenly weak and he had the wit to realize that the sun was in no humor to brook defiance. He moved slowly into the truce of a rocky ledge, sprawling full length in its shadow. Overhead, three buzzards formed a sinister merry-go-round against the turquoise sky. Their foul expectations made Hank Wheelock chuckle. In spite of his sixty years he was a long way from cashing in. Them fool buzzards! Didn't they know a tough old coyote when they saw one? Besides, he wasn't quite ready to provide grub for such an ornery lot of feathered bandits—not yet. He'd have another look at that outcropping of borax first. Borax! . . . He closed his eyes. Just wait until he told Jim Bledsoe about it! Foolish, futile Jim Bledsoe. Perhaps he wouldn't tell him. Perhaps he wouldn't tell nobody. It would depend.

In the cool of evening Hank Wheelock went through the primitive gesture of marking the confines of his prospect with bits of shale chipped from the ledge that had sheltered him from the sun. The definite rules for staking a claim he was unprepared to meet and yet some atavistic urge, harking back to the days when men made covenants with the gods, gave him a foolish pleasure in setting up symbols of his revelation. What he would have liked to do was to sweep back the sand over his treasure with a miraculous rake. There would be people passing and repassing, Indians for the most part. These scarcely mattered, but others would pass, too—white men, with little, sharp, beady eyes, seeking furtively to wrest secrets from the sun-bitten land. But the desert was capricious; it rewarded whom it would.

TAKE his own case, for instance: How many times had he scoured the blunt, squeezed hills to no purpose, coveting their treasures? . . . And this same spot, with its ledge of rock that marked a waterhole of almost miraculous sweetness, how many times had he loitered in its gaunt shade, innocent of its hoard? . . . Last week, when he had tramped eastward to another futile tryst with fortune, his path had been without revelation. But overnight a miracle had happened: a wanton wind had danced with gathering violence across the starlit mesa, furrowing the gleaming sand with its twinkling feet, tearing open quiescent wounds in its frenzy, revealing close-locked secrets. . . . Tonight it was conceivable that another wind might rise, blotting out all trace of the one that had gone before, piling the restless sand discreetly back again. Hank Wheelock hoped that this might be so; such a prospect made him feel safer. Would it be necessary to tell Jim Bledsoe? Not right off, anyhow. . . . He'd bide his time. . . . He might even persuade himself beyond that. . . . He'd do what was right, but he wasn't going to be no fool philanthropist. If they had come upon this secret together, that would have been one thing. . . . But they hadn't. . . . Yet Jim Bledsoe was still his partner.

The stranger was bending over the fire. A primitive gust swept Hank Wheelock; he grasped his gun securely.

Well, there was time enough to settle that. He wouldn't reach camp until the next morning. Twelve hours of solitude in which to wrestle with the problem. That was enough for any man. . . . He decided to wait until nightfall before pushing on. He flung himself back into the shelter of the rocky ledge. He wondered whether the buzzards would come winging back again. . . . But they didn't, and he fell asleep, chuckling.

HE ROSE with a windless moon and headed south by west, munching thin strips of jerked venison as he walked. He was a spare eater on the trail and he drank from his canteen scantily, barely moistening his lips. The land lay in a cool truce of incredible silver, invoking dreams and fancies and extravagances. Twenty years before his imagination would have evoked endless mule teams chiming through the blistering heat to a railroad siding; now he supposed motor trucks would accomplish the task swiftly and adequately. Hank Wheelock, the new Borax King! He ruffled with childish pride at the mere thought . . . But at that he might sell out at once and let somebody else bask in the warmth of the title. This last speculation brought him sharply against the question of Jim Bledsoe again: Would he be justified in dissolving his partnership at this point?

It wasn't as if the idea had never before occurred: for upward of forty years he had made periodic gestures toward cutting loose from Jim Bledsoe, to find him always in the end taking the path of least resistance. After all, it wasn't easy to ditch a partner who had the genial vice of optimism, who could rise from the most crushing defeat upon the wings of an irrational hope, whose rainbow fell always just a day's journey beyond. But looking back, Hank Wheelock had to admit that this had been Jim's sole contribution to their common cause.

Of course, no matter what his decision he'd never let old Bledsoe want: he'd be generous. And with keen delight he pictured himself in the role of patron, distributing largess. . . . Giving anybody a direct share—well, that was different. People never thanked you for what you conceded were their rights, and the term "partnership" would smother any impulse toward gratitude in Jim Bledsoe. To his dying day Jim would argue:

"Well, who knows—if Hank hadn't struck it rich mebbe I would have!"

And the worst of it all was that old Jim Bledsoe would believe it. Forty luckless years hadn't taught him anything. Wasn't he at this very moment out on another of his foolish quests? How foolish, Hank Wheelock could only speculate, since Jim had enveloped his movements in childish mystery. He'd said casually one night over their beans and coffee:

"I had a notion I'd run up toward Heron Falls for a spell. . . . You ain't got any use for that pack animal, have yer? Leastways, not before next week?"

Hank Wheelock had tried to veil his scorn under a show of indifference. "Pack animal? . . . I should say not! . . . I ain't figuring on taking more'n a ton of ore outer that pocket back of Antelope."

His sarcasm had winged past Jim. "Well," Bledsoe had replied, "yer never can tell. . . . I allus figured there might be a likely lead in there. . . . Still, I kinder lean to a country that ain't so allfired ornery. Prospects, I say, is a good deal like women folks, it may be a mite harder to find 'em both rich and pretty, but it can be done!"

Well, there hadn't been a likely lead back of Antelope . . . there hadn't been a dribble of ore large enough to so much as fill the obsolete watch pocket in Hank Wheelock's sun-bleached coat. On the surface, of course. It hadn't opened its hand to a man poking about for trifles. . . . Hank Wheelock might have known that, he might have guessed that its frugality had an element of concealment in it, like some crusty old philanthropist making gestures toward poverty to test the object of his favor. . . . He speculated with a derisive grunt what sort of geological philandering Jim Bledsoe was up to around Heron Falls.

A SOFT country, truly—buried in a carpet of pine needles; full of the muffled whirr of quail coveys; spilling water in lacy cascades down its greenly weathed sides. A place for loafing, a spot to rob you of everything but content, a sure despoiler of ambition. . . . Jim had gone there fishing, that was it. And one day he'd blow back into camp with a mess of trout and an air of carrying the plunder of an empire in his straw-packed fishing basket. . . .

He, Hank Wheelock, would be bringing back a fortune and his partner, Jim Bledsoe, would throw down a dozen trout as his contribution to the jackpot. . . . Not this time! It didn't take Hank Wheelock one-half of his allotted twelve hours to settle that question. The moon had scarcely risen to its full height when he had come to a final and irrevocable decision.

For the rest of the journey he was content with a thousand opulent anticipations, not the least of which was the ever-recurring picture of himself in the role of patron to old Jim Bledsoe.

Toward daybreak he saw afar the curling gray of a camp fire, and he knew that Jim Bledsoe was already back. This fact disturbed him; he hadn't reckoned on facing so swiftly the issue uppermost in his mind. But his first irritation was succeeded by a sense of poignant anticipation. It would be good to have the coffee pot already steaming over the brush fire and smell the bacon drippings in the frying pan. It would be pleasant, too, to stretch out in the gray-green coolness of the willow trees and ruminate over a pipe with the genial putterings of old Jim Bledsoe within sight and earshot. Thus, midway between chuckling satisfaction and a vague regret, he bore down upon Jim Bledsoe fanning a reluctant fire in the early morning light.

They greeted each other with clipped masculine monosyllables and lapsed speedily into the grateful silence of long association. As Wheelock had guessed, fish had been flashing in the sunlight of Heron Creek, for above the inevitable pungence of coffee and warming bacon grease there rose the sweetish odor of trout browning to a turn. . . . The meal ended and Jim Bledsoe, turning his faded blue eyes upon his partner, said:

"How'd things turn out back of Antelope?"

Hank Wheelock pulled up to the bitter talk before him.

"They didn't. . . . I got to thinking things over on the way back: Jim Bledsoe, we ain't gettin' nowhere."

The blue eyes continued to stare at Hank Wheelock with bland tolerance.

"Yer mean yer want to break the partnership?"

"I was thinking of it."

"Pshaw . . . not now, Hank—not after nigh onto forty years."

"That's just it—forty years!" Hank Wheelock's voice rose with a sort of desperate vehemence. "We've just been dead weight to each other, somehow. . . . You'll say, 'Wait for the next turn!' I know what's beyond that—the poorhouse!"

A LOOK of bewilderment crept into Jim Bledsoe's glance. "You're wrong there, Hank. I ain't said nothin', I was just waitin' to surprise yer, but up Heron Falls way there's a prospect that—"

A low guttural laugh, two-edged with contempt, sent Jim Bledsoe's revelation scattering.

"Prospects—up by Heron Falls! . . . I guess a mess of fish now and then's about all yer'll ever take out of that country! . . . I heerd tell of your prospects before!"

Jim Bledsoe fumbled for his tobacco pouch, and his hand shook. "Yer right, Hank Wheelock," he said, in a voice that was much too high and clear and confident. "It's time you and me was quittin'."

Jim Bledsoe spoke to him once more—after the evening meal. He was ready for the trail—blanket roll, canteen and canvas bag snug with essentials.

"I'm going over to Heron Falls," he said, without rancor, "and after that I'll drop down to Potterville. . . . Ain't nuthin' I can do for yer down that way, is there?"

Hank came to his feet. "How about dividing things up?"

Jim Bledsoe swept the issue aside, with a gesture of indifference. "Ain't much to divvy, is there? A few camp contraptions and a pack animal. I figgered you'd need 'em more than me. I won't be runnin' wild much longer."

His voice was untinged with patronage, yet his words brought the blood to Hank Wheelock's forehead. "I'd rather we cleaned up right!" he said savagely.

Jim Bledsoe shrugged. "I've got all the best of it now!" he answered.

Hank Wheelock twisted his lips into a smile. "Well, if you're satisfied . . ." he said.

The sound of old Jim Bledsoe shuffling into the darkness . . . wind drawing up the mesa . . . the piercing wail of a coyote. . . . After forty years! . . .

HE LAY all night beside the camp fire, gazing up at the stars. An extraordinary sense of freedom possessed him. He had no one to answer to now except God, and His outline had grown too vague to throw any shadow. Curious how irksome a human relationship could become! Not that old Jim Bledsoe ever meddled, but he was always there, an unescapable fact to be reckoned with.

After all, the camp equipment and the pack animal did mean something at this stage. He'd have a bit of traveling about to do. To begin with, he'd have to go into Potterville to attend to a thousand legal details, after he had staked his claim properly. Yesterday, under the spell of his outstanding discovery, he had thought in terms of quickly matured plans; he saw now that weeks, months must elapse before they would swing forward. And he'd need a handful of money for the preliminaries, too. If the country back of Antelope had only yielded a decent pocket of ore! Perhaps if he pushed on a little farther. He knew a huddle of hills just beyond Mesquite Ridge that he had always thought of as promising.

He decided to start at daybreak. A fever of anxiety suddenly swept him. With the postponement of his triumph came a sickening fear that he had overestimated the whole circumstance. What if the outcropping he had come upon was just that and nothing more? It wasn't likely, leastways he'd never heard of it, but it might! One always thought of borax marshes as the dried beds of inland seas, but he supposed they could be as easily the wash of prehistoric puddles. But it wasn't likely.

His first plan had been to achieve Mesquite Ridge by a direct route that would have struck a little north of his discovery of yesterday, missing it by a half-day's journey. There hadn't seemed any necessity for going out of his way merely to view a spot that he had quitted not twenty-four hours since. But now, shaken by cold gusts of incredulity, he decided to take the longer route. He wanted to rest a moment in the shelter of that little mound of rock, and test once again with his fingers the reality of that sun-bleached pool that had so captured his fancy.

He broke camp without waiting for the sun to rise.

Toward evening the jutting ledge of rock which marked Hank Wheelock's spot of promise swam in the haze of a slanting sun. For a moment he leaned upon his rifle, motionless. The pack animal halted, too, making an inanimate outline against the sky. A thin curl of smoke drew upward in a straight line and mysteriously lost itself. . . . His first thought marked it as the camp fire of Indians. He felt annoyed. He had counted on solitude, and a brood of Indians was not to his liking. The alternative was even more distasteful: a white man would insist on chattering. . . . A white man! Had somebody already jumped his claim?

He felt wrath pounding at his temples and suddenly, instinctively, he began to run forward, his gun glistening with flashing menace. A figure scrambled from the sands to meet him.

"WAL, stranger, what's the hurry? . . . Don't yer calculate to stop at no flag stations?"

Hank Wheelock fell back. "I was all-fired thirsty!" he lied, conscious of two eyes riveted upon a thin trickle of moisture issuing from his canteen.

"Which way yer headed for?"

"Over by Mesquite Ridge."

Hank Wheelock shuffled to the water hole and bent over. "Which way you goin'?" he shot out.

The stranger stirred his miniature camp fire.

"I ain't made up my mind," he announced with a cryptic chuckle.

Hank eyed his man grimly, but he had wit enough to lapse almost at once into a show of indifference. He straightened up slowly, casting his glance in the direction of the thing that he had travelled all day in the blistering heat to confirm. If he were mad before, his mind was still touched—the outcropping of borax glistened even in the twilight with emphatic whiteness. The stranger was bending over the fire. A primitive gust swept Hank Wheelock: he grasped his gun securely, but the next instant relaxed his grip, shaken further by the realization that he could turn yellow even for so brief a moment. The man had risen.

"Wal," he drawled, "I expect it's about time to chew!"

Hank wiped the sweat from his eyes, accepting the stranger's implied invitation with equal indirection, as he said:

"I guess I'd better unpack that fool burro if we calc'late to eat without jackass music."

The stranger's name was Starbuck—a garrulous, cynical soldier of fortune with the gossip of boom town and mining camp and trail bubbling up unceasingly.

This man Starbuck was sly, too; one got that in his half-closed glance, and there was something in the curve of his lip which seemed pregnant with ridicule. Hank Wheelock was burning to know whether thirst was the only thing that had lured him to this water hole and, having slaked it, what held him there. Surely he had experience enough to know borax when he saw it.

Hank ate sparingly of Starbuck's bacon and beans, keeping his gun within easy reach. The impulse toward cold-blooded murder which had seized him earlier had vanished utterly, but he was ready this time for a fair fight, if he felt himself forced to it. He had rights which he was prepared to defend, and the thought thrilled him.

HE TRIED discreetly once or twice to force Starbuck's vaporings into significant channels when suddenly, without warning, Starbuck himself rippled toward the desired explanation of his presence. They had finished their meal and their first pipes when Starbuck began to pack his mess kit with slow deliberation.

"Might as well be ready to move when I take the notion," he said.

Wheelock's heel dug into the sand. "What's your hurry?"

"Hurry? . . . No, I ain't exactly in a hurry. . . . But I jest swung a few miles out o' my course today to have a look at this here spot. Things on the desert stay pretty much as they were at the start. It's bin twenty years or more since I came by here."

"And yer mean ter say yer found nuthin' changed—nuthin'!"

"Not a damned thing!" He threw a greasewood twig in the direction of one of the piles of rock with which Hank Wheelock fantastically had staked his claim. "Excepting them fool monuments!" He gave a chuckle. "When I seen them I looked around for a skeleton or two. Sez I to myself: 'Bud Starbuck, nobody but a tenderfoot done anything that foolish.'"

A strange dryness puckered Hank Wheelock's lips—something like premonition urged him to complete silence, as if such a course might check the flow of Starbuck's speech, and yet he found himself saying almost hoarsely:

"How'd yer come to think o' stopping at all? . . . Ain't nuthin' here so all-fired unusual! . . . Leastways, nuthin' that would make a man remember that fur back."

"Wal, mebbe you'd think different if you'd drove a mule team past this water hole twice a week or more for nigh onto a year like I did. . . . Yes, sir, I passed this place more times than I could shake a stick at back in them days when I was hauling borax out o' Paiute Valley."

Hank Wheelock bent forward suddenly. "Borax!" he echoed faintly.

"Yes, siree, borax. . . ." He picked up another twig and hurled it this time in the midst of the crystalline pool, upon which Hank Wheelock was gazing with tragic uncertainty. "Yer see that? . . . Would yer like to know something about how it come there? Well, listen ter me, stranger, and when I get through if yer don't agree that nuthin' ever changes in this fool country, my name won't be Bud Starbuck!"

SOMETIME in the night with the rising moon, Hank Wheelock heard the clinking of a mess kit swaying rhythmically and he knew that Starbuck had hit the trail again. He was wide awake, but he did not stir; he did not even call out a farewell; he had had enough of Bud Starbuck. It was not so much that this man had robbed him of an illusion as that he had convicted him of idiocy.

He had told his story with suspicious gusto, as if he were inwardly smiling, and at the end his "I'd like ter clap my eyes on the greenhorn that reared up them there stone monuments" had been significant with contempt. The very memory of it still made Hank Wheelock wince.

It was a well-told tale and the element of extravagance was in it despite its underlying triteness. Bud Starbuck had the gift of vitalizing his narrative, and Hank Wheelock had been captured at once by the picture of the narraflat on my face. What an embarrassing position!

"It didn't take much instinct for me to know that I wasn't going to be able to get to my feet and run to the side of that trestle in time to avoid a collision with that engine. It didn't take me long to decide that I had to do something. So I did it. Half-rising to my feet, I leaped into the air, hoping to get clear of the way of the cow-catcher and the wheels. Well, that was a long second, but I partially won. The front of the engine missed me. That is, those parts that I wished would, did. But the piston caught me and completely knocked me off my balance.

"At least I was out of the way, and at the same time I had managed to catch a tie. Then I began to wonder, as the wheels were passing over my head, just where Al Mazola was. When I looked to my right you can imagine my surprise to find him hanging right next to me. The stunt was all right, but I felt the sting of that impact for several days."

THE picture "Wings" was to be made. Grace was asked to do the smash-ups. Deliberately, that is, smash planes into the ground. He was to wreck a S.P.A.D. plane, known during the war as a Spad. He was to crash a Gotha bomber into a building. A D-7 Fokker, with its 200-horsepower Liberty motor, was to be crashed to the ground shortly after it took the air. There was likely to be a fourth crash; just what kind was not yet decided upon. The work was to be done at Kelly Field, San Antonio, Texas. Those in the making of the picture proceeded there.

"There were many revisions to be made before the little buzzard was ready for its death. Spads have a big gas tank situated directly under the feet, which feeds by pressure. I did not like this. If I should happen to go over on my back and the tank should break I'd be due for a bath of gasoline. Not that I mightn't need the bath, but I was thinking of the possibility of fire. So I wanted a small tank installed on the top wing which would feed the motor by gravity.

"THERE were many other changes. . . . The linen had to be stripped from the fuselage so that the longerons could be taped. And then, as long as these last members were of wood, I believed that a square arrangement of Shelby steel tubing was advisable at the top and bottom of the cockpit to keep it from collapsing at that important place. Lastly, I needed a new arrangement of the safety belts, for I had found that the webbed one around the hips was no protection against hitting the instrument board with the head. This sudden bump is disconcerting at times, because it breaks the neck."

Then there was the spot to pick. The crash was to be staged on the No Man's Land the company had constructed.

"Almost as far as the eye could see the country was in a devastated condition. Shell holes 12 feet deep and three times that in diameter pitted the whole place, and as I saw them I made a mental note that I could just kiss myself good-by if I ever struck one of them. Barbed-wire entanglements were so realistic that it was with difficulty that we made our way through the tangled mass. They were of real wire and the cedar posts were sunk two feet into the ground and protruded almost four above.

"My second mental reaction was to wonder what would happen to the ship and me when we struck them. However, I was relieved when Bill (William Wellman, the director) said that a 25-foot section would be built from balsam slabs, which are very light and break easily. Also, instead of wire on those posts we would have yarn or rope strung. It sounded good—if I could find the small section traveling at least 100 miles per hour, and at the same time controlling the ship to a crack-up, which in itself is no mean job. Besides concerning myself with the technique of handling the stick, it was necessary for me to start an automatic camera, cut off my switch, close the throttle, turn off my gas tank, hit an exact spot, and protect myself." . . .

Next, the rescue crews were picked. The emergency fire apparatus from Kelly Field was loaned, and three men with large fire extinguishers were to rush in if the plane caught fire. There were two squads of 10 men each and their leaders. Each of these men had different instruments to be used if rescue demanded. One had an ax, another cutters, still others had pliers, hammers, wood and hack saws, hatchets. There would be an army ambulance with a physician, and a hospital airplane.

The morning for the smash-up came. Grace climbed into the Spad. He was off. "I dropped to an elevation of 800 feet and took off my goggles. I could not wear them because the splintering of the lenses might cut my eyes. When in proper position I dropped them and was pleased to see they fell directly before the main parallel.

"That was my signal to those on the ground that I was ready, that the next time I buzzed over the spot it would be a crack-up. Then I awaited my answering signal and got it immediately: a red flag from the tower.

"I maneuvered to position for the right glide that would bring me to the spot where I was to shove the little ship in nose first. . . . With a shove on the stick I nosed my Spad earthward. . . . Closer and closer were the ground and the spot approaching. The time between me and this crack-up was but a matter of seconds now. . . . Glancing at my air-speed indicator I noted that I was making 110. That was too fast, so I cut down on the throttle. Now I was making 90, but that was too slow. I was settling.

"THE German trenches were beneath me as I gave the motor a little more gun. There was only No Man's Land between me and the spot. It was now time for me to get busy. I started the automatic camera. . . . The trenches and the spot where I was to go in were less than 600 feet away. I had to allow at least 200 feet of that for the crack-up. It dwindled to five and snapped to four, flashed to three and exploded to two. Two hundred feet. Well, I'd allow another 50. I'd give them a real close one. Just 10 feet from the ground! Speed—95 miles per hour.

"I jerked the stick over to the right, giving just a slight left rudder. The wing dipped and the fuselage swayed to the left. In this position I knew the ship would be a cinch to go on its back, but that's what Bill wanted.

"With a dull thud, the wing hit and crumpled, then the landing carriage crashed. The poor ship tottered over to the other wing and broke that, and the thing started over on its back.

"As it did, I ducked my head forward. It was my one measure of protection, but it happened to be just the right one. With a terrific crash something wedged between my flying coat and the back of the seat. But the last move of the ship was over. . . . There was no more debris or dust or propeller splinters flying around. . . .

"I climbed out, and then I got a few surprises. I had intended to land close to the cameras and I hadn't missed. The nearest one was 17 feet from the wrecked plane. . . . My next surprise was that I had missed the area with the balsam posts and had hit into those driven into the ground two feet deep and protruding about four. . . . Then I wondered what had wedged between my coat and the back of the seat, and that's where I got my real thrill. In making its last speedy maneuver, that of going over on its back, the ship had plunged into a maze of posts, two of which had gone completely through the fuselage. One was uninteresting to me, for it was near the tail. The other had penetrated the cockpit just 11 inches back of my head! Had I not moved forward when I did, it would have carried that important member of my body down to where my feet ought to have been. . . .

"I noticed one more thing. The tail of the ship hung in space, over the edge of one of those 12-foot shell holes. If I had slid on my back as I hit it would have been too bad. I'd just have—— But there was no use ruminating on ifs. The poor little ship was dead. There was not a spar or rib in it that was not broken. From propeller to tail and wing tip to wing tip it was splintered and broken. It was as I had meant it to be."

AND then he wrecked the D-7 Fokker and broke his neck. But once recovered from his injury, the fellow was back stunting again, crashing ships as before.

These are but a few of the tales among those Grace relates of himself and his fellow stunt men in his book. Toward the end of the volume there is a footnote of particular pungency. In it the publishers announce a correction. They write: "As the book is going to press, Captain Grace, from a hospital bed, asks us to say" . . .

Fritzi Scheff's Second Debut

Modiste" and the reappearance of Fritzi must have been like a raising from the dead for many Broadwayites, who no doubt had classified her in their memories with Jennie Lind and Christine Neilsen. But Fritzi, despite the long, hard, ignominious interval during which she had been forgotten by all, received Mr. Aborn's proposal as if it were the most natural thing in the world. She derided the idea of a flop.

"'Madamoiselle Modiste' always gets better," she said. "Of course, I will do it." She did. And how!

Mlle. Scheff, among her other activities, was married and divorced three times. Her first husband was a German army officer, her second, John Fox Jr., the author, and her third, George Anderson, an actor. All her divorces were friendly.

for setting out with his mule team on a wind-swept morning twenty years before to haul borax from Paiute Valley to the railroad siding. A fool thing to do in such a sandstorm, according to Starbuck's own statement! But bravado lay back of it, an answer to a carelessly flung challenge, with a wager to add zest to the performance—some fifty dollars for the delivery within a given time of the load at its destination. A hard-fought battle through blinding wind and sand, with a snapped axle almost within sight of victory. Then the load dumped in a little saucer-like depression near the water hole, the maimed wagon hauling to shelter behind staggering mules like some wounded animal dragged unwittingly to slaughter. Next day rehabilitation and the mules trotting back with their rattling "empty" and Bud Starbuck intent on plans for salvaging the abandoned load.

And the finish, to quote Bud Starbuck himself:

"Covered up jest as clean as if some fool grave-digger had been at work. . . . I'd 'lowed that there ledge of rock would shunt off the whirling sand. But no, siree, it jest jumped that—as pretty. . . . Yes stranger, the sand's the only thing changes in this dern country and then it just skips about like grasshoppers. . . . That borax has bin there nigh onto twenty years—jest waiting fer another fool wind to uncover it. . . . And I'm willing to bet if I was to load that up again, it wouldn't be ten pounds lighter—no siree, not ten pounds!"

COULD any tale have been more commonplace, more ridiculous, more extravagant, all in one breath? It was so obvious and so simple once it was told. . . . Why, Hank Wheelock didn't have to so much as look again to realize how shallow and artificial and altogether unconvincing of promise was this little glistening patch of crystal winking its thousand eyes mockingly in the sunlight. . . . What was Jim Bledsoe doing up by Heron Falls?—gentle, kindly, simple Jim Bledsoe. . . . If he might only wake tomorrow to the sizzling of bacon in the pan and the sweetish smell of trout browning to a turn! . . .

He lay all the next day in the imperfect shadow of the ledge of rock watching the buzzards circling overhead. At intervals he administered to the thirsty needs of his pack animal with patient scooping of moisture from the water hole, but for himself, he was content to drowse in a feverish retrospection. . . . Nightfall . . . another day . . . a procession of sunsets and dawns. . . . He was tired of his had sought him out deliberately for some sly purpose he could not define. It all came out, finally, at the appointed time for men's revelations—over the inevitable and pungent pipes. It was Jim Bledsoe who opened fire.

"I warn't at all sure I'd ketch yer," he broke out, suddenly, without warning.

"How'd yer know I was here?"

"I MET a man working up toward Windgate—Bud Starbuck. He said he'd seen yer. . . . But he 'lowed you'd be headin' for Mesquite by this time. . . . But, I dunno, somethin' seemed to tell me you was right here."

Hank Wheelock felt the necessity for explanation. "I was aimin' to leave today. . . . Somethin' I eat must have put me off my feed. I jest felt all-fired ornery. . . . Were yer calculatin' to swing over to Mesquite with me?"

Jim Bledsoe shook his head and a little gurgling note of triumph issued from his throat.

"No, siree, not me. 'Twarn't for that reason I trotted after yer. . . . But I was jest like a fool woman, bustin' to tell yer the news." He cleared his throat. "Hank Wheelock, you and me don't have to go traipsin' around this here alkali no more, tryin' to hog-tie fortune. I struck somethin' up in that Heron Falls country, jest like I said I would. . . . Oh, it ain't nuthin' sudden—I've bin flirting round with it fer nigh onto six months, now. . . . Yes, siree, fishing ain't the only thing I done up there. . . . I jest laid low and said nuthin', working it all up on the sly. . . . Well, I got a man ready to give me a quarter of a million ter hand over my option. . . . O' course, he'll pull out ten times that. . . . But I figgered you and me couldn't spend much more'n he offered before we cashed in." He gave a chuckle. "Leastways, not onless we got a couple of gals to give us a hand."

Hank Wheelock drew viciously on his pipe. A quarter of a million! . . . Old Jim Bledsoe! It was incredible! But more incredible still was the simplicity of including a partner who had so unceremoniously cut adrift from him. Hank had no words of gratitude to meet such a situation, so instead he found himself saying, with almost a sneer:

"I don't see where I come in, now!"

"SAY, yer don't think fer one moment, Hank Wheelock, I'd hold out on yer jest because yer kicked over the traces once in 40 years? I'll allow I was sore—at fust! . . . But, pshaw, it ain't as if you and me was strangers. . . . Besides, I know what you'd ha' done if you'd been in my place!"

A flush spread over Hank Wheelock's face; the sort of flush that used to rise when as a boy his mother had imputed undeserved virtues to him. A sudden and secret shame overwhelmed him, and the bitter truth rose perversely to his lips.

"Oh, yer do, do yer!" he sneered. "Well, let me tell yer one thing, yer wrong! . . . If you'd ditched me, Jim Bledsoe, I'd ha' let yer starve—that's what I'd ha' done!"

Jim Bledsoe shook his head. "Yer don't have to tell me, Hank Wheelock—I know what I'm talking about!"

For a moment the feeling of relief which swept him was almost painful. It wasn't any use telling Jim Bledsoe the truth. Why bother, then? What folks didn't know wouldn't sicken them. He might just as well share in the prospects. A quarter of a million! At last he could take it easy!

But this gust of satisfaction passed swiftly and left him as chilled as when he had stood, with his finger on the trigger of his gun, watching Starbuck bending over the fire. . . . No, it couldn't be done; it wasn't sporting! He'd been a gambler all his life and he'd made mistakes, but he'd never cheated. He couldn't horn in on a game he'd dropped out of, he couldn't keep on playing when he knew there'd been a misdeal. A passed hand was a passed hand. And a dissolved partnership was dissolved; there wasn't nothing else to it. Besides, a man had his pride. He wasn't no beggar! . . . He wasn't dead yet, neither, and there were just as good claims in the hills as ever were dug.

He scrambled to his feet and he knew that his voice was clear and cold and triumphant as he lied:

"Wal, I've got some news fer you, too. . . . You ain't the only one's bin workin' on the sly. . . . I got somethin' pretty nice staked out over in that Mesquite Range. . . . It won't be a quarter of a million, but it will be enough—fer me!"

JIM BLEDSOE rose more slowly. "Jest as you say. . . . But I don't feel comfortable, somehow. . . . We was partners, yer know, when I fust came on that holdin'. I should have told yer right off."

A hot breeze began to catch up little whirls of sand and loose the pungent odors of the sagebrush. An intolerable longing for some far-off and dusky coolness oppressed Hank Wheelock. He thought of hedgerows and columbine and hollyhocks and the faint tinkle of silver fountains.

"Yes, siree," he heard Jim Bledsoe repeating, in a tone of self-rebuke, "I should have told yer right off!"

Hank Wheelock turned his face upward to the lifted circle of buzzards wheeling expectantly in the turquoise expanse. A flicker of indecision sputtered and died. He nodded in the direction of the Mesquite Range and his voice shook with the triumph of a gambler who scorned a secret advantage as he said:

"That's my case, exactly! . . . Yer see—it's jest horse and horse!"

distant raise a rifle and fire at him. He felt the bullet strike him in the abdomen, pass through his body and emerge at his back. The pain was terrific.

"I felt weak and faint," he relates. "I knew the wound must be fatal and wondered why I didn't die. I expected momentarily to lose consciousness and came near falling off my horse. I was sure that I was done for, but had sense enough to notice that there was no blood on my clothing. I got a little better then and, as the fighting was pretty hot about that time, I decided to postpone dying as long as possible and went back into it. But all through the fight my wound pained me terribly.

"FINALLY, when things quieted down a bit, I told Frank I was shot and we stopped to examine the wound. There was no wound to be found, but on my abdomen was a bruise as black as a thundercloud and as big as my hand. At first we couldn't understand it. Then a flattened lead bullet fell at my feet, and all became clear. It had struck the big iron buckle plate of my cavalry belt. The impact had caused the bruise and the pain in my back had resulted from my impact against the back of the saddle."

There was another close call in this same fight when Captain North, rushing up to the canyon rim to fire down on the Indians, was struck over the eye by an arrow fired from below. It struck a glancing blow and did little harm, but he still carries a scar on his brow.

"The time when I felt most helpless of all," the Captain muses, "was in the spring of 1870, when several of us were returning from the Whetstone Agency in South Dakota. We had driven a herd of cattle up there from Nebraska for the Government and had experienced no particular trouble. On the way back we found the Niobrara River swollen from recent rains and had considerable difficulty in crossing. In my life I have met two horses that couldn't swim, and I was riding one of them that day. The horse went down in deep water and both of us nearly drowned. I was bundled up in an overcoat, had on heavy boots and spurs and a cartridge belt with 140 rounds of ammunition. Also a rifle, which I lost in the river. That was adventure enough for one trip, but that wasn't all.

"After the struggle in the river the horse was more exhausted than I was, for I was dragged out and the horse was left to get out on his own power. By the time we reached the Elkhorn River he was pretty well fagged out. I got off and walked, leading the horse. In that way I fell behind the others of the party. As I came over the last ridge between me and the Elkhorn I saw the others, half a mile upstream, turn into a clump of woods and disappear. Almost at the same time I saw seven mounted Indians emerge from another clump of brush near the river and start for me. They were not more than 300 yards away. There I was, with an exhausted horse, out of sight of my party and without a gun—for I had lost it. All that saved me that time was a six-foot willow stick."

Fortunately for him, the Captain explains, dusk was approaching and the Indians couldn't see that he was unarmed. Neither could they see that when he dropped on his knee he picked up the stick. When he leveled it they thought it was a rifle and scattered, for unless they were in force the Indians would never rush upon a loaded gun.

Seizing upon this momentary advantage, he shouldered the stick and led his horse hastily along the ridge in the direction taken by his companions. Again the Indians advanced and again he bluffed them with nothing but the willow stick.

A third time he did the same thing.

"BY THAT time," he says, "I was getting close enough to the woods to make a dash. I could see a camp fire where the other men had stopped. So I got on the horse and used my stick in the way a stick can be used most effectively. The Indians gave a whoop, fired a couple of shots and came after me, but soon gave it up. They were afraid to approach too near the camp. As it turned out, the horse had more left in him than I thought. He took me into camp fast enough. But for a few minutes out there on the ridge I was certain that it was all over but the scalp dance."

comedian, filed suit for divorce against his wife, Irene Martin.

In his complaint, Gallagher named Somerset as the one responsible for wrecking his home.

An interesting sidelight on the love-making tactics of the actor came to light in the reports of private detectives employed by Gallagher to obtain evidence for his divorce at Somerset's little Hollywood bungalow.

The detectives disclosed how they watched day after day through the windows, observing the conduct of the actor and Mrs. Gallagher and almost despairing of ever getting sufficient evidence on which to base divorce action.

Once, they reported, she sat on his lap, but he did nothing even to indicate that he was aware of her presence. Finally, in desperation, the detectives crashed into the house in a midnight raid, found the two together, and reported to Mr. Gallagher that their work was ended.

As a result of the disclosures in Gallagher's suit Miss Day began divorce proceedings.

About this time the little schoolgirl admirer reappeared on the scene and as soon as Miss Day's divorce became final Shelby Worrall and Somerset entered the married state that has just ended so tragically.

"NEXT!"

Disillusioned in a Barber Shop.

THE theory that a barber shop is a more desirable place to visit than a dentist's office is universally admitted. However, a careful study will show that it is largely a matter of psychology and that, as a general rule, a man not only endures as much physical pain in a barber shop but considerably more mental anguish; and while he does get a zippier choice of reading matter, there is no reason for the wide distinction now recognized.

In fact, the barber shop incorporates most of the objectionable characteristics of the medieval torture chamber, and subjects you to strangulation, fire, water and the knife; and as for quartering, it fairly quarters you to a frazzle.

The same man who unlooses a wild roar of pain when a well-meaning dentist accidentally touches a nerve will sit in stoical silence as an indifferent barber fricassees him in a scalding towel, carves a monogram on his chin or larrups his skull with rivet-like fingers which leave it so tender he must withhold combing for three days or else use a banana peel. He dreads the barber's scorn and is ashamed to make an outcry, particularly as there are other men and usually some women within earshot; but these scruples vanish in the dentist's sanctum. It goes to show that there would be a vastly different story if the barber conducted his place like a dentist's and operated behind locked doors in a small office, with the walls showing a diploma and a picture of Washington crossing the Delaware.

In this case a man would come in, look the barber in the eye and chatter nervously:

"I want an appointment. Do you think my hair needs singeing? Give me the truth, now;" and the barber would frown thoughtfully, place a hand on the customer's shoulder and say in kindly tones:

"I'm afraid a singe will do no good. My boy, we'll have to shampoo."

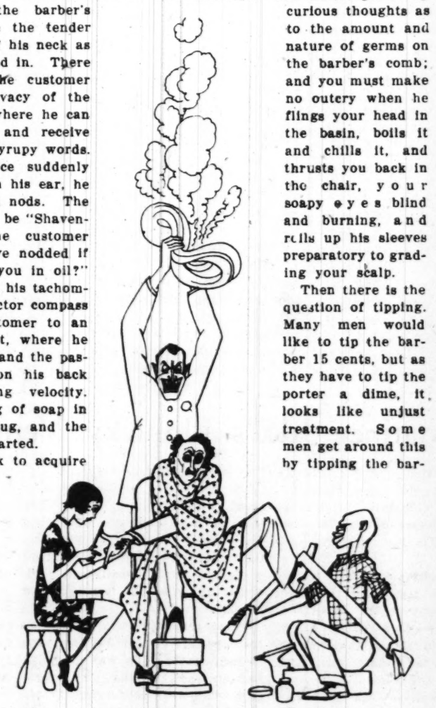
The barber shop quickly strips a man of all superficial varnish and reveals him for what he is. If a man stalks in, waves merrily to his favorite barber, smiles at the manicure girl and hums while being divested of coat, collar, hat and tie, he proclaims himself to be of the confident, hard-driving, successful type; a man who emanates from a flourishing automobile company or some other firm that has a block of vice presidents. On the other hand, if he steps in shyly, fumbles at his lower lip and glances furtively around the room, he plainly shows that he is in the self-conscious, unassertive, futile class; a man who is always missing trains, losing his fountain pen and selling before a 10-point rise.

A MAN with any degree of self-consciousness fairly loathes the barber shop. As he enters and the other customers naturally look up to see who is responsible for the shadow, he feels that they are silently chuckling at his features or the cut of his clothes, and that they sense he still owes for a used automobile.

He is so uncomfortable that the porter becomes glum and silent and is unable to enter into the gay spirit of camaraderie that prevailed with the other customers. If an arm sticks in his coat sleeve, the self-conscious man will flush deeply and smile in a sickly fashion; and if his hat falls to the floor, he apologizes to the porter and dives for it himself. In fact, if the porter saw fit to give him a swift kick the customer would probably flash his wan smile and apologize. He scuds across the floor, convinced that every barber in the place is snickering at him, and stumbles into a chair without investigating whether there is a barber behind it or a hyena.

As he sits there, he wishes he had thought of a previous engagement. A shroud is thrown over him and the top portion is drawn tightly under his chin, but he makes no remonstrance—not even when the barber's finger nails scrape the tender flesh at the base of his neck as the edges are tucked in. There is a pause and the customer yearns for the privacy of the dentist's sanctum where he can yell and whimper and receive the condolence of syrupy words. When a gruff voice suddenly hisses a question in his ear, he starts foolishly and nods. The question happens to be "Shaven-ahaircut?" but the customer probably would have nodded if it had been "Boil you in oil?" The barber consults his tachometer and earth-inductor compass and pilots the customer to an altitude of two feet, where he goes into a tailspin and the passenger is thrown on his back with bone-shattering velocity. There is a churning of soap in a pink-and-white mug, and the ceremonials have started.

It is no easy task to acquire that barber-shop finish which marks the man of quality. You must be able to look nonchalant while the barber is singeing you and your nostrils sniff the pungent odor of burning flesh, and you must merely yawn when one of those little lawn-mowers drums behind your ear and catches a stray hair in the third rail. You must repress any curious thoughts as to the amount and nature of germs on the barber's comb; and you must make no outcry when he flings your head in the basin, boils it and chills it, and thrusts you back in the chair, your soapy eyes blind and burning, and rolls up his sleeves preparatory to grading your scalp.



The barber shop incorporates most of the characteristics of the medieval torture chamber.

Then there is the question of tipping. Many men would like to tip the barber 15 cents, but as they have to tip the porter a dime, it looks like unjust treatment. Some men get around this by tipping the barber 15 cents and the porter nothing. To do so they leave the shop in high while consulting a notebook and look up only in time to fling the barber his change.

Another type of customer gives the barber 25 cents and the porter a dime, but when he leaves he has a premonition that every barber and porter in the shop is chuckling at him for being a sap and an easy mark. If he doesn't tip the barber 25 cents he feels that dark things will be said about him. No matter what a man does, he is usually possessed by the uncomfortable feeling that he is being criticised. He has only to look back and he will find the barbers and porters gazing after him with expressions of sorrow, disappointment, amusement, malice, curiosity or amazement.

THERE are many kinds of barbers. There are gloomy barbers, jovial barbers, garrulous barbers, here and there a horse race or soccer enthusiast, and barbers who spend their time running down other barbers. Possibly the most desirable type is the gloomy barber, who is mostly silent, although he may pause to bend over and intone in your ear those chilling words: "Your hair is falling." There is scarcely anything that strikes more terror to the human heart. A man would rather hear that he has overdrawn his bank balance, or is contracting sleeping sickness, or that a Mediterranean fruit fly is in his grapefruit. When the barber has made that awful observation, the customer smiles weakly and bravely essays a light rejoinder. The barber sells him a lot of ointments which he enjoins him to use every night, and the customer takes them home and places them on his dresser. The first night he uses them; after that the bottles serve only as paper weights for commuter's tickets, theater stubs and unpaid bills.

When you are discharged, you stride over to the clothes tree and tie your necktie in a hurried, slipshod fashion in order not to bore the porter who is waiting with your coat, submit to a final curry-combing, and depart. You glance furtively at your new haircut in all the store windows for three blocks, look at it once in your office, and forget about it. Think of the more exalted feeling that comes when you leave a dentist's office! You throw out your chest and stride manfully down the street, rejoicing that you saw your duty and did it, and don't have to do it again for six months.

Of course, if the dentists would take up the barber-shop idea it would eliminate a lot of howling, and the public might be induced to come thrice a year instead of twice. A group of young dentists could club together and rent an office, placing six chairs in a row. When a man came in for treatment, a porter would remove his hat and coat and ask him if he wanted a shine, and a pretty manicure girl would ask him about vulcanizing the cuticle. The customer would sit down, and the dentist would bring out his acetylene torch and commence excavating; and because there are others looking on, the patient would make no outcry and probably let the dentist yank a tooth with no more anesthetic than a simple traveling-salesman story.

At the same time the dentist might cancel all his subscriptions to domestic and farm magazines and put in a few illustrated or humorous weeklies of a reasonably recent date. The barber can do a whole lot for the dentist if he is given a chance. Look what he did for Seville.

Disillusioned in a Barber Shop.

muter's tickets, theater stubs and unpaid bills.

When you are discharged, you stride over to the clothes tree and tie your necktie in a hurried, slipshod fashion in order not to bore the porter who is waiting with your coat, submit to a final curry-combing, and depart. You glance furtively at your new haircut in all the store windows for three blocks, look at it once in your office, and forget about it. Think of the more exalted feeling that comes when you leave a dentist's office! You throw out your chest and stride manfully down the street, rejoicing that you saw your duty and did it, and don't have to do it again for six months.

Of course, if the dentists would take up the barber-shop idea it would eliminate a lot of howling, and the public might be induced to come thrice a year instead of twice. A group of young dentists could club together and rent an office, placing six chairs in a row. When a man came in for treatment, a porter would remove his hat and coat and ask him if he wanted a shine, and a pretty manicure girl would ask him about vulcanizing the cuticle. The customer would sit down, and the dentist would bring out his acetylene torch and commence excavating; and because there are others looking on, the patient would make no outcry and probably let the dentist yank a tooth with no more anesthetic than a simple traveling-salesman story.

At the same time the dentist might cancel all his subscriptions to domestic and farm magazines and put in a few illustrated or humorous weeklies of a reasonably recent date. The barber can do a whole lot for the dentist if he is given a chance. Look what he did for Seville.

WHAT WESTINGHOUSE IS DOING TO MODERNIZE THE HOME

Westinghouse automatic devices make Westinghouse electric ranges, irons, percolators, and waffle irons more useful and dependable.

Westinghouse motors, designed and built for long and carefree service, constitute the heart of many modern electrical appliances.

This new freedom–electricity's gift to women

Imagine a home with servants at every hand—eager servants to do all the tedious tasks, willing servants to keep everything spick and span—to bring you new hours of freedom and happiness.

Such luxury need not be left to the land of dreams. You can have it for yourself just as thousands of others have it . . . by letting electricity be your servant. Electrical appliances can now perform practically every chore in the house—and their cost is within reach of modest incomes.

Every woman remembers how much the vacuum cleaner meant toward lightening her daily work. Millions now wash and iron with electricity. Hundreds of thousands already delegate their daily cooking and baking to automatic electric ranges.

Other thousands are discovering daily how convenient it is to let electricity wash the dishes, scrub and wax the floors, do the sewing, whip up dainty desserts, even wind the clock. These and dozens of other tasks electricity performs at a trifling cost. For Westinghouse, and the manufacturers who use Westinghouse motors and other electrical equipment, have given electricity efficient hands to do your work.

In every field of human activity Westinghouse has pioneered with electricity, taking loads from tired backs, responsibility from tired minds. Every article made by Westinghouse is fitted to its task. The simple appliance that Westinghouse supplies for homes is just as carefully constructed as the great turbines, generators and locomotives it builds to carry the responsibilities of industry.

New Convertible Desk-Pocket Pens and New Parker Desk Bases
New Streamline Symmetry in Matched Duofold Pens and Pencils

There is now no Christmas problem. Only visit the brilliant arrays of Parker Duofold Gifts, just around the corner in any city in America, and your shopping is done.

Here are Desk Sets that consolidate the jewel-like Parker Duofold Pens with other desk accessories, the Desk Lamp, or Desk Clock, or Note Pad, in the classic bronze finished base.

Inlaid enamel bases holding cigarette lighter and Desk Pen.

Still others in onyx and marble, adorned by classic statuettes—"The Drive," "Jungle Mates," and "The Spirit of Aviation."

Smaller sets for office, home desk, and bridge table—in cloisonné, porcelain, onyx, marble, and colorful inlaid enamel.

2 Pens in One

Parker originated and controls the design which makes a pen readily convertible for Desk Base by screwing on a taper, or for pocket by taking the taper off and putting on a cap.

This Christmas season is the first in which we have given, without charge, a Pocket Cap and Clip, as well as a tapered end, with every Desk Pen.

When buying or giving a Pocket Pen, if you get a Parker, a Desk Base can be added later and the price of an extra pen saved.

The First Thing to Look For

Because of its Pressureless Touch; its 24% greater ink capacity than average, size for size; its jewel-like Permanite barrels and jeweler finish; its new Streamline symmetry; and its *GUARANTEE FOREVER against all defects—the first thing your loved ones will look for on the pen you give will be this official imprint, "Geo. S. Parker—DUOFOLD."

That's the first thing you should look for in buying. Look for this imprint on Pencils, and Desk Sets, too. And go for them promptly, while assortments are complete.

THE PARKER PEN COMPANY, Janesville, Wisconsin. Sales and Service Station: 202 S. State St., Chicago, Ill.

Hello boys! Now—you can build this Giant Air Liner with ERECTOR

The Trail Blazing No. 8 $25

The Set That Builds the Zeppelin

THE giant ship of the skies, and hundreds of other great inventions. Includes girders for Zeppelin frame and landing mast, silver bag, gondolas, propellers, stabilizers, and in addition includes all the parts of the Sensational No. 7½ ERECTOR

HELLO-BOYS! The boy who gets my new TRAIL BLAZING No. 8 ERECTOR for Christmas will sure be the talk of the town. When you've built your 5-foot model of a real trans-atlantic Zeppelin, your pals will flock from miles around to look it over—with its giant silver bag, gondolas, propellers, landing mast. And that's not all. I have worked all year to put into these new 1929 Erectors the thrills of a lifetime. You can build almost every mechanical invention you can imagine.

Think what a thrill you'll get building these wonderful models that whiz and hum along when operated with your big powerful Erector electric motor. Everything necessary lies beneath the cover of the brass bound chest that holds the new 1929 Erector. With its many new exclusive and patented parts, you can build, one after another, over one thousand working models, including Airplanes, Automobiles, Trains, Steam Shovels, Locomotives, Derricks, Bridges, Power Plants; models of every description and kind.

Now, boys, here's the way to get this barrelful of red blooded fun. Send for the amazing Mysterious Erectorscope and Catalogue that tell all about Erector. Show it to your Dad—then take him to any good toy store. Let him see Erector himself—watch him warm up to it. He will want to build things with it himself. It's a sure way to get the World's Greatest Toy for Christmas.

Why the New 1929 ERECTOR is the world's greatest toy

1. PATENTED ERECTOR GIRDER. A real genuine girder like engineers use. The interlocking edge, a novel, exclusive ERECTOR feature, eliminates bending and makes it possible to connect two girders, sturdy and strong, with a single bolt and nut, and a four piece square girder with two screws only. (In all Erector Sets.)
2. PATENTED ERECTOR MOTORS. Powerful Battery Motor in No. 4, 6, 7, 7½ and 8. Famous Polar Cub 110-volt Universal Motor in No. 9 and 10.
3. PATENTED ASSEMBLED GEAR BOX. Adaptable to every possible gear combination, and for reversing movements. Convertible into 3-drum hoisting engine. Standardized for use with either battery or 110-volt Motor. Included assembled in the Famous No. 4 Set and up.
4. HEAVY STEEL TRUCK BODY, 15" long. Exclusive ERECTOR feature. In No. 7½ Set and up.
5. 3½" SOLID STEEL DISC WHEELS WITH BALLOON TIRES. An exclusive ERECTOR feature. In No. 7½ and up.
6. PATENTED BIG GIANT CHANNEL GIRDERS, straight and curved. Electrically baked in brilliant red. Exclusive ERECTOR feature. In No. 7 and up.
7. LARGE STEEL MODEL BUILDING TRAY, pierced with ERECTOR standard holes. Patent pending. Exclusive ERECTOR feature In No. 6 and up.

NEW ERECTOR ZEPPELIN FEATURES
Patented Erector Zeppelin girder, silver bag, gondolas, propellers, stabilizers, rudders, etc.

OTHER EXCLUSIVE SENSATIONAL FEATURES
Patented curved girders (in all sets); giant fly wheel; machine frame (making possible the building of machinery models); Patented duplex base plate (double standard holes, making it possible to use axles of two sizes; Erector Dredge Bucket, Tip Bucket.

EXCLUSIVE MECHANICAL WONDER FEATURES
Duplex Plate, Cam, Flat and Cone Pulleys, Quarter and Internal Gears, Eccentric Loop, etc.

EXCLUSIVE ERECTOR AIRPLANE FEATURES
Fusilage, wings, cylinders, propellers, stabilizers, rudder, pontoons, struts, nose, swivel.

SENSATIONAL AUTOMOTIVE FEATURES
Truck body, fenders, radiator, hood, axles, steering wheel and knuckle, springs, bumper, heavy duty disc wheels, etc.

A FEW OF YOUR MANY OTHER COUNTLESS FEATURES
Steam Roller, Steam Shovel, Roller Plate, Ball Bearing, Sprocket Plate, Perforated Strips—four holes to the inch (in all sets); Rubber Cams—Fiber, Cranes, Flat, Idler, Helical Gearwheel, Quarter, Worm.
The only construction toy for duplicating every engineering feat. Possible with no other toy but the New Erector. Made from galvanized steel, plated, brilliantly enameled in colors and electrically baked. Perfectly interchangeable owing to the extreme detail of manufacture. Contains an unlimited assortment of parts and builds more models than any other construction toy.
